U.S. Calls Ambassador Home From Berlin

A Shot . . . A Pogrom . . . A Storm of Protest . . . and a Summons Home

The assassination of a minor Nazi diplomat in Paris, Ernst vom Rath, by this Polish Jewish youth, Herschel Grynszpan, unleashed an unprecedented Nazi drive on Jews which has led to protests by many United States leaders including . . .

. . . President R. I. Gannon, of Fordham, who in a public protest, declared "Attila the Hun, who called himself the scourge of God, is back, except that Attila had never called himself a Christian." Still another leader who joined the storm . . .

. . . of protest was Senator King, of Utah, who said the "treatment of Jews can scarcely be paralleled for brutality and fiendishness in the records of savage peoples . . . The Nazi government revives the worst forms of medievalism." Former president . . .

. . . Herbert Hoover, who denounced the German government for striking a "blow at civilization itself," stated he had "more than the usual" right because of his post-war efforts to save Germany from famine and "reduce the injustices of treaties." Joining the protest . . .

. . . Bishop E. H. Hughes, of the Methodist Church, declared "We plead for ourselves as well as the Jews of Germany. Humanity can not be silent. We who have traveled in Germany can not believe the German people sanction such persecution." Another Protestor . . .

. . . was Alf M. Landon, who warned of the "real danger of the growth of intolerance in this country . . . We are not protesting against anti-Semitism, we protest for all minorities that would be caught in persecution." A Cabinet member took cognizance as . . .

. . . Secretary Ickes declared America would be untrue to her standards "were she to stand tongue-tied at a time of such un-Christian acts as we are witnessing today." The United States apparently is taking official recognition of the persecution by . . .

. . . ordering Hugh R. Wilson, Ambassador to Germany, to return to Washington for consultation. The State Department's announcement was made without comment and comes at a time when relations between Germany and the United States are strained because of trade matters.

Reich Gives 300 Jews 24 Hours To Pay Vast Fine

Confiscation Begun Students Expelled Warburg Arrested Stock Sales Barred

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—Nazi authorities advanced today toward wholesale confiscation of Jewish wealth, arrested in Hamburg, Fritz Warburg, brother of the late Felix Warburg, of New York, and an international financier, and expelled Jewish students from all universities and other institutions of higher learning.

Jews also were forbidden temporarily to sell on the Berlin Stock Exchange, and the Jewish Automobile Club was banned. The stock exchange order was designed to keep the market from falling in the face of reports from the provinces that there had been heavy selling on behalf of Jews.

New Decrees Being Drafted

But despite the measures already taken, experts in the Nazi cabinet were meeting tonight to draft new anti-Jewish decrees. The anticipated laws are expected further to ostracize the Jews and to regulate their life in more detail.

The arrest of Fritz Warburg, tearfully confirmed by his family, came as a stunning surprise to most foreigners. The Berlin propaganda ministry said merely the act "lies in line of developments" and withheld all information about Warburg's arrest and present place of incarceration.

Fritz Warburg and two other brothers, Max and Erich, retired last May 31 from the 141-year-old banking house of M. M. Warburg & Co.

24-Hour Deadline Set

At that time it was announced that the firm was being converted into a new partnership under the same name. The new partners included the Berlin Handelsgesellschaft and other banks and industrial concerns.

Felix M. Warburg died on October 30, 1937. He and another brother, Paul, went to the United States in the late 1800s and became partners in Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

The speed with which the authorities intended to proceed with the blanket confiscation is indicated by the fact that today upward of 300 of the more well-to-do Jewish families—the majority being residents of Berlin—were given 24 hours in which to deliver up their share in the $400,000,000 fine for the assassination of a minor diplomat in Paris.

Another government order was designed to freeze the bulk of Jewish assets throughout Germany, so these could not be liquidated or damaged, and thus could be taken over at the pleasure of the Reich.

The assessed shares, as announced in the notification dispatches to the wealthy Jews today, amount on the average to between 18 and 22 per

Wilson to Return Diplomacy Strained. Roosevelt May Talk Indignation Mounts

By Robert C. Allright.

The State Department last night ordered Hugh R. Wilson, American ambassador to Germany, to return home for report and consultation.

This bare announcement was made without comment, but his instructions are known to be connected with the current outbreak of Nazi violence against Jews and the German government's unparalleled anti-Semetic decrees.

Despite official reticence, the action was widely interpreted by observers as a forceful step to impress Germany and the world with American displeasure at Nazi mass persecution of Jews.

Will Start Home Sunday

No time was set here for Wilson's return, but dispatches from Berlin said the ambassador will leave Sunday for London, and will sail from England to the United States. In his absence, Counsellor Prentiss B. Gilbert will be in charge of the embassy.

The State Department confined its statement to one short oral announcement to correspondents that Wilson has been instructed to return here. Such instructions in themselves do not involve a break in diplomatic relations.

Reports persisted that President Roosevelt may follow yesterday's action with a public statement on America's attitude toward Germany's Jewish pogrom. Washington speculation turned on a possibility the United States might follow ample precedents for intervention in behalf of a persecuted race, such as leadership in a united remonstrance by civilized nations.

Friction Increasing

The State Department announcement followed recurrent friction between the two governments reaching a peak in last week's wave of American public indignation over recent events in Germany.

In mutually recriminatory public speeches, in sharp diplomatic exchanges, and in general lack of cooperation between the two governments on all matters of policy, relations between the United States and Germany now have reached a tenseness greater than at any time since the World War.

Although it is not uncommon for the State Department to call home American diplomats for consultation, the Government's action at this time was regarded with more than ordinary significance.

Usually in diplomatic breaches, ministers in foreign countries are summoned home before any actual break.

Wilson Took Post in Spring

Wilson has been in Berlin only since last spring, succeeding Ambassador William E. Dodd, who was outspoken in his criticism of the Nazi regime and has since continued his personal indictments of the present German policy, and Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Wilson is expected to report to President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull especially on the status of American nationals affected by the Nazi campaign, and supply first-hand information on the extent and effect of the German decrees.

At an earlier press conference, Secretary of State Hull said this Government is observing with keen interest the latest German moves against Jews, but added he had no concrete steps in mind.

Asked if any move involving moral suasion is contemplated, the

Roosevelt Revives CIO Peace Effort

Parley Cheers Letter AFL Note Recalled Lewis Assails Nazis Calls Hitler 'Wolf'

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 14.—The Committee for Industrial Organization tonight summoned its peace committee into session in the wake of President Roosevelt's renewed plea for peace and unity within labor's ranks.

[Early today the peace committee adopted a report absolving the C. I. O. of responsibility for collapse of truce talks last year, the United Press said.—Editor's Note.]

Seeking an end to the three-year warfare between the C. I. O. and American Federation of Labor, Mr. Roosevelt in a letter called upon the first C. I. O. constitutional convention to leave open "every possible door to access to peace and progress in the affairs of organized labor in the United States."

C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis said the letter would be given "earnest and profound consideration." One high official of the C. I. O. who refused to be quoted, said the peace committee would draft a report for the convention and recommend some definite future course.

The Chief Executive's message was his second in recent weeks and substantially the same as that sent to the A. F. L. Convention in Houston, where it was received without demonstration.

"If the great gains already made are to be consolidated, for the benefit of the workers as well as the management," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, "it is essential that there be cooperation among the wage-earning groups, and because of this, I venture to express the hope, as I did to the American Federation of Labor, that every possible door to access to peace and progress in the affairs of organized labor in the United States be left open.

"Continued dissension can only lead to loss of influence and prestige to all labor. On the other hand,

G. M. C. Acts To Stabilize Weekly Pay

To Assure Incomes 150,000 to Benefit 60% of Standard Wage

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 14.—General Motors Corp. announced today two benefit plans, effective in 1939, intended to give approximately 150,000 hourly wage employes within the United States the economic security of assured weekly incomes.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the corporation, said a similar plan applicable to 37,000 salaried employes would be announced soon.

Hourly wage workers with five years or more of service will be eligible for the "General Motors Income Security Plan," under which the corporation will advance to each employe in periods of curtailed employment an amount sufficient to give him 60 per cent of his standard weekly earnings, including unemployment compensation and pay for any other regular employment. The "standard week" is to be figured at 40 hours.

Hourly wage workers with two or more years of service who are not within the first plan will be eligible for the "General Motors lay-off benefit plan" under which the corporation will advance, a sum sufficient to give each worker 40 per cent of his standard weekly earnings, with some restrictions not included in the plan for five-year employes.

Employes who receive the benefits will repay the corporation by work performed when production increases. Repayment can be made in no other manner, Sloan explained.

The plans will be applicable only to employes of the corporation and

Norwegian King To Join Ill Queen

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 14 (AP).—King Haakon VII is going to London, it was announced today, to be with Queen Maud, who has become ill while visiting in the British capital.

Queen Maud, 68, sister of the late King George V and aunt of the present King George, spends much time in London with her royal relatives.

Chamberlain Silent on Aid for Jews

Dodges Refuge Plea Mum on Protest Party Rift Develops Eden Asks Coalition

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 14.—Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons this afternoon expressed deep sympathy for the plight of the Jews in Germany, but refused to commit himself as to whether he would make a joint protest with President Roosevelt to Berlin, or whether he would throw open the British colonies to Jewish refugees.

[However, Oswald Pirow, defense minister of the Union of South Africa, who is sounding out Portugal, England, Belgium and Germany on the problem of Germany's demands for return of her prewar colonies, intimated he might favor a settlement to gain "peace at any reasonable price," the Associated Press said.

[At the same time, a meeting of the influential "Conservative private members committee" in Commons was disclosed in reliable lobby quarters to have condemned what they feared was Chamberlain's "policy of weak submission in regard to colonies."

[Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary who resigned rather than go along with Chamberlain's policy last February, in a speech at Oxford, urged an all-party government, and referred to "fresh outbreaks of lawlessness or brutality on some part of the earth's surface every day and almost every hour" and warned that "the danger signals are up and plain for all to see."

[Pirow's statement was made in a speech to the South African Club. Pirow, whose Union of South Africa holds a mandate over the former German colony of southwest Africa, praised Chamberlain's appeasement policies and said, "We believe that the steps taken so far should be followed up in the hope they may lead to a permanent basis for world peace."

[Some speakers at the meeting of the Conservative private members committee were said to have protested bitterly against what they said was the government's intention

Dorothy Thompson Urges Boy Who Shot Diplomat Be Spared

Appeals to France in Broadcast Points to Pressure of Terror on Youth Suggests Nazi Models Inspired His Deed

A Boy Is Driven to Murder

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 14.—Dorothy Thompson, special writer for The Washington Post, made an appeal for the life of Herschel Grynszpan, the Polish Jewish youth who is in peril of the guillotine for the assassination of a Secretary of the German Embassy in Paris, in an address broadcast tonight by WEAF on the General Electric Co. hour.

"This boy," she said, "has become a symbol, and the responsibility for his deed must be put to the jury of world opinion where it belongs. If you are not Jewish and you feel as I do, I ask you to wire or write me in care of this station."

Her address follows:

"A week ago today an anemic-looking boy with brooding black eyes walked quietly into the German Embassy in the Rue de Lille in Paris, asked to see the Ambassador, was shown into the office of the third secretary, Herr vom Rath, and shot him. Herr vom Rath died on Wednesday.

"I want to talk about that boy. I feel as though I knew him, for in the past five years I have met so many whose story is the same—the same except for this unique, desperate act. Herschel Grynszpan was one of the hundreds of thousands of refugees whom the terror east of the Rhine has turned loose in the world. His permit to stay in Paris had expired. He could not leave France, for no country would take him in. He could not work, because no country would give him a work permit.

"So he moved about, hoping he would not be picked up and deported, only to deported again and yet again. Sometimes he found a bed with another refugee. Sometimes he huddled away from the wind under the bridges of the Seine.

"He got letters from his father, who was in Hanover, in Germany. His father was all right. He still had a little tailoring shop and managed honorably to earn enough for food and shelter. Maybe he would have sent his son money, but he was not allowed to send any out of Germany.

"Herschel read the newspapers, and all that he could read filled him with dark anxiety and wild despair. He read how men, women and children, driven out of the Sudetenland by a conquering army—conquering with the consent of Great Britain and France—had been forced to cross the border into Czechoslovakia on their hands and knees—

Ickes, Hoover Landon Join Blast at Nazis

In Radio Symposium 'Mass Brutality' Hit Clergy Also Shocked King Urges 'Recall'

A Nation-wide chorus of indignation against Nazi race persecution last night was swelled by the voices of a Catholic educator, Methodist Bishop and leaders of both major political parties who joined in affirming America's duty to protest anti-Semitic policies of the German regime.

The Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University, declared that Nazi policies represent a return to "paganism" but with a malice unknown to simple savages."

With the latest outbursts of anti-Semitic violence, he said "Attila the Hun is back. Attila, who called himself the scourge of God—except that the first Attila had never been a Christian, had never partaken of the sacraments.

"We shall and should burn with resentment as Americans, before this spectacle of tyranny," he told his coast-to-coast audience for the special broadcasts sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches.

Bishop Joins Attack

Speaking on the same program, Bishop Edwin M. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, asserted "humanity simply cannot afford to be silent."

His voice heavy with emotion, Bishop Hughes said: "A plea for our Jewish people now is in reality a moral plea for ourselves. We have evry right to expect that a speedy and popular demand will arise in the German Reich not only for the cessation of these brutalities but for the punishment of those who have wildly made themselves legislatures, laws, courts and judges."

Secretary of Interior Ickes, another participant in the symposium, denounced Nazi race persecution as an "assault against civilization" and warned the masters of Germany that "once before the world has had to appeal to the reason and humanity of people over the heads of leaders who had alienated all the rest of the world."

Ickes, who conferred with President Roosevelt earlier in the day,

France Sending Felons Into Exile

Bordeaux, France, Nov. 14 (AP).—The first convicts ordered into exile since France decided to resume sending prisoners to the French Guiana penal colony were assembled today for the trip to South America. The prison ship La Martiniere will sail November 21 with 620 felons aboard.

The practice had been banned by Leon Blum when he became Premier in 1936.

John D., Jr., Invited To Join Union as Ditch Kibitzer

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, jr., founder of the "Sidewalk Superintendents' Club"—New York's first organization of steam-shovel kibitzers—got a bid to join the union today.

In a letter from the Office and Loft Superintendents Local 164, A. F. L.-affiliated Building Service Employees International Union, Rockefeller was notified the union claims "full authority over all building superintendents."

The letter declared Rockefeller's excavation ogiers at Rockefeller plaza were "actually superintending" a new building project there and that "to avoid any jurisdictional disputes that may arise between your organization and ours," he should accept an honorary membership card in the union local.

Such a membership, the letter said, would protect the interests of the kibitzers "at all times."

Rockefeller inaugurated the "Sidewalk Superintendents' Club" last Thursday when 500 charter membership cards were passed to sidewalk quarterbacks.

The membership cards permit entrance to a promenade overlooking the digging operations.

Rockefeller decided to establish the club when a foreman nudged him while he was watching his own building excavation and told him: "All right, buddy, move on now."

District to Feel Lustier Breath of Winter Tonight

Winter weather will strike Washington tonight when the mercury drops to 34 degrees in the city, with probable sub-freezing temperature in suburbs and nearby Virginia and Maryland.

The cold snap, starting with the chilliest night of an unseasonably warm fall, is expected to last for several days, with slowly rising temperature toward the middle of the week.

The Weather Bureau forecasts fair and colder weather, with light to heavy frost tonight, and Tuesday as continued fair.

British Royalty Still Bars Wallis, Society Reports

London, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—British social leaders reported tonight the royal family had rejected pleas from the Duke of Windsor by letter and telephone, urging them to receive his American-born duchess if he returns with her to England.

The Duke was expected by court circles to break his two-year exile and visit England early in the New Year—but without "the woman I love," for whom he abdicated the throne.

France Adds 12 New Decrees To Drastic Recovery Program

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 14.—Premier Daladier today put into operation his plan of "guided economy" to bolster France's sorely pressed financial structure and rushed through a new batch of decree laws against mounting Labor and Leftist opposition.

A new list of 12 decree laws was announced shortly before the midnight expiration of Daladier's semi-dictatorial decree powers granted by Parliament.

Most of them were administrative decrees, withheld from publication heretofore to avoid any confusion with the series of 32 decrees announced Saturday in Finance Minister Reynaud's financial program.

Foreign Minister Bonnet sponsored two of the new decrees, one of which authorized closed hearings in court cases "likely to have international repercussions."

The second would permit the foreign ministry to prosecute newspapers publishing a statement which might be considered offensive to the head of a foreign state.

One of the measures, submitted by Commerce Minister Pierre Gentin, specified that at least two-thirds of

Chest Drive Third of Way; Nolan Urges Giving for Boys

Gifts more generous than last year's contributions yesterday boosted the Community Chest campaign beyond the one-third mark in the third day of the drive for $2,127,000.

Designation by contributors of where they want their gifts spent has boosted the average gift from last year's mark of $9.80 to $10.40, Chest officials said. A total of 38,065 pledges for $727,336.64 had been received yesterday, according to reports turned in by volunteer workers.

These workers heard a plea from Dr. James A. Nolan, head of the Criminal Justice Association in Washington sponsored by Community Chest agencies. The boys who are given recreational facilities in place of crowded streets pay human dividends in future citizenship, Nolan said.

"They are steered away from the danger of legal conflicts, of jail terms, spared the shame of a penitentiary record," he declared. "If it required the whole Chest fund to save the futures of these boys, it would be well worth while."

Among the pledges reported yesterday was one from boys' groups in the Boys Club of Washington, including two Junior Optimists Clubs, a Rangers group, three senior

How Does Mister Gallup Do It?

In a telegram to the publisher of The Post, Senator William E. Borah said:

"I think Mr. Gallup's poll on different subjects, especially on the recent election, is most remarkable. I should like to know just how he does it."

To Senator Borah and others, the answer to that is 10 cents in an envelope addressed to Promotion Manager, The Post, and a sparkling pamphlet will be sent telling just how Mr. Gallup does it.—The Washington Post.

R. C. A. Chief Asks Self-Rule In Broadcasting

Calls It 'American Way' Controls Television FCC Investigates Chains

David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, yesterday urged the broadcasting industry be allowed to regulate itself with self-imposed codes. The magnate testified at opening of the Federal Communications inquiry into chain broadcasting and charges of monopoly.

Such self-regulation, he declared, is "the American answer to an American problem." Under Sarnoff's proposal the radio code would be formed from viewpoints of all the interests involved, and would be subject to constant scrutiny by public opinion.

"In every consideration of radio broadcasting," Sarnoff maintained, the "public interest" we are pledged to serve is that of the entire Nation. This public interest is reflected directly by the 27,000,000 receiving set owners who represent an overwhelming majority of the country's homes.

Controls Television Patents

"By their control of the Nation's radio dials, they give approval or disapproval to radio programs and decide the ultimate fate of the broadcaster. Here we find legitimate censorship by public opinion. It is the democratic way in a democratic country."

Sarnoff revealed that R. C. A., which has been charged from time to time with operating a monopoly, holds the controlling television patents and that 65 manufacturers have been licensed to use these.

Television receivers will be put on public sale early next spring, though television reception will be limited at first to the few cities which have experimental stations.

Sarnoff told the FCC committee RCA has been engaged in television research for more than ten years and has spent millions "to bring it to the verge of useful public service."

"Financially, this development is still a subject of outgo rather than income," he said. "When commercial television licenses are granted by this commission, a competitor, the Columbia Broadcasting System, using an RCA transmitter, will be able to go on the air with commercial television programs as promptly as N. B. C.

Hope to Forestall Congress

The chain-monopoly inquiry, which the FCC hopes will forestall a Congressional investigation of the commission and the radio industry, is expected to last three months or more.

The control the networks exercise over their affiliated stations by means of management contracts will be a major topic of the inquiry. The extent of program duplication in service areas of chain stations probably will be the highlight from the point of view of the Nation's listeners.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch said yesterday "appropriate rules and regulations" will be drafted on the basis of the hearings. If necessary, he added, legislation will be recommended to Congress.

Charles P. Sisson, former United States Assistant Attorney General, requested the FCC to widen the scope of its investigation with a view to revoking the broadcasting licenses now held by the National Broadcasting Co. and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., on the grounds of alleged monopolistic control of radio apparatus.

Explaining his proposal for voluntary self-regulation of broadcasting, Sarnoff said:

"In writing this code, the industry should gather the views of broadcasters, of groups representative of public opinion, and of this commission. After the code is formulated, the public should be made thoroughly familiar with it.

"The code should be subject to periodic review by the industry and kept up to date. It should be administered by a suitable agency representative of the entire industry."

Following the hearing, the FCC met and adopted rules of procedure for carrying out the reorganization effected last week by Chairman McNinch as result of the "purge."

Four new cases were cited for hearing under the new setup, three went to FCC lawyers and one to a former examiner. The examining division was abolished in the shake-up.

Meanwhile, the Civil Service Commission discussed the "purge" at a meeting, but deferred action until it receives a report from the FCC. The commission will investigate the FCC dismissals to determine whether civil service regulations have been violated by circumvention.

David Sarnoff (left), RCA president and the first witness to come before the FCC in its hearing on alleged monopolistic tendencies in the radio industry, said he opposed Government censorship of radio. White House Parley Held on Air Supremacy

Roosevelt Calls Leaders Army Budget a Topic Hopkins, Craig Attend

Proposed aviation supremacy for the United States, along with all other phases of national defense, was discussed yesterday by President Roosevelt in one of a series of conferences with high Government officials.

The group summoned to the White House included Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Assistant Secretary of War Johnson, WPA Administrator Hopkins, Solicitor General Robert Jackson, Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, and Brig. Gen. George Marshall, deputy chief of staff; Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Air Corps; Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel; Col. James H. Burns, executive assistant to Assistant Secretary Johnson, and the President's military and naval aides.

Other Parleys Planned

Johnson said that other conferences would be held. Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to reveal something of yesterday's talk at his press conference today.

Secretary Morgenthau's presence was construed to mean the Army's budget, with certain increases, had been a topic, and the availability of WPA forces to assist in the program, perhaps by constructing airports and in other ways, was thought to have been gone into. Legal aspects of budgetary changes, from WPA to general defense purposes, were said to have engaged the attention of the Solicitor General.

Standardize Turbines

Establishment of uniform standards for steam turbine generators rating 10,000 kilowatts and more was approved yesterday for the first time in the history of the electrical industry as a step to facilitate wartime provision of power through elimination of unnecessary special designs and sizes.

Adoption of the preferred standards recommended to the National Defense Power Committee by its sub-committee on standardization is expected to speed up construction of generating stations to furnish additional supplies of electric energy.

Among those participating in conferences on the report were Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, representing the National Defense Power Committee; Basil Manly, of the Federal Power Commission; Lieut. Col. L. E. Atkins and Capt. William R. Winslow, U. S. A., and Commander K. B. Bragg, U. S. N.

The Political Arena

The Republican National Committee yesterday was summoned to meet at the Carlton Hotel here Tuesday, November 29, in a call issued by John Hamilton, chairman.

HAMILTON

It will be the committee's first opportunity jointly to study the sweeping Republican gains in last week's elections, in which the party gained 8 seats in the Senate and 81 in the House, and made a net gain of 11 governorships.

Hamilton's announcement said reports will be submitted on the work of the last year, and "consideration also will be given to plans for future activities."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday he did not know whether the Administration will present a general tax bill at the next session of Congress.

"I honestly don't know," he replied to a question at his press conference. "The program hasn't jelled yet. We haven't gotten far enough along to know what there's going to be."

Morgenthau declined to comment on whether the Administration is considering revision of the undistributed profits tax. On the other hand, one of the tax measures which will be pushed at the next session will be the abolition of the tax exemption privilege from future Federal issues and taxation of Federal and State Government employes.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 14 (AP).—A Congressional investigation of election-fraud charges in last Tuesday's balloting in Delaware was opened today behind closed doors.

Representative O'Toole (Democrat), of Kentucky, a member of the House Elections Expenditures Committee, barred newspapermen, but promised a full report "later."

Attorney General P. Warren Green, one of the first witnesses, said he would bring to O'Toole's attention "the fraudulent use of absentee ballots" at a number of polling places in Wilmington. He declared he also had "information regarding the use of money in the elections in Kent County and in the Middletown district."

Representative Maverick, defeated in the Texas Democratic primary, told reporters after a White House visit yesterday that the setbacks the Democrats received in last week's election would do them "a lot of good."

He added that it was "a little beating" and that "the reason most of us got defeated was that we have got crooked Democratic political machines over the country."

Maverick said he had no intention of affiliating with any third party movement and he believed the best chances for continuing liberal government lay with the Democratic Party.

Jefferson Nickel Out; Buffalo on Way to Extinction

There will be no more new buffalo nickels. The familiar coin, which generous daddies for a quarter of a century have handed the kiddies to buy candy and ice cream, will be replaced today, so far as new issues are concerned, by the Jefferson nickel.

The United States mints have coined 11,000,000 of the new nickels for distribution to the public through the Nation's banking machinery. On one side of the coin is the profile of Thomas Jefferson and on the other a relief of Monticello, his home.

The buffalo nickel will not be called in, but will remain in circulation.

The number of nickels now in use, the Treasury said, totals about 1,600,000,000. The Jefferson nickel emblazons the words "In God We Trust." All other coins except the older nickels carry the phrase.

Wallace Is Asked To Justify Farm Program to South

Reidsville, Ga., Nov. 14 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was called upon today by a Metter, Ga., farm leader to explain sectional differences in soil conservation payments when he speaks in Macon, Ga., Thursday.

R. G. Daniell, of Metter, head of the Cotton Producers Association of America, listed three questions he said Wallace should answer:

"Why Southeastern farmers have been receiving only one-sixth as much money from soil conservation payments as have farmers in the Middle West and North Central States; why, after six years of disastrous failure to make the cotton program work, does the Secretary insist on yoking it on the South for further trials, and why did the 1938 tobacco program saddle most of the burden of crop reduction, for tobacco, on the tenant farmers?"

Winkler to Talk At Printer Parley

Leaders in the graphic arts industry will gather tonight for a meeting of the Washington Club of Printing House Craftsmen at the Annapolis Hotel.

J. Homer Winkler, a member of the research commission of the International Association of Printing House Craftsmen and an authority on electrotyping, will speak.

Winkler is a native of Washington, a graduate of George Washington University and now is assistant manager of the Ace Electrotype Co. at Cleveland.

Lie Detector No Experiment, D. C. Court Told

Reminding Justice Laws that New York's Court of Appeals thought fingerprint evidence "novel" in 1915 and the Illinois Supreme Court called ballistics "clearly absurd" in 1923, Attorney James J. Laughlin yesterday renewed his plea that James Curtis, 35, be given a lie-detector test before he is tried again for armed robbery.

Justice Laws recently denied Laughlin's first motion after Assistant District Attorney Jackson pointed out that the District Court of Appeals ruled out such evidence some years ago. The court was not convinced, he said, that the instrument was beyond the experimental stage.

Upper Chesapeake Bay, Tributaries Charted

The Coast and Geodetic Survey yesterday announced completion of its hydrographical survey of upper Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, as far south as Pooles Island, and of approaches to Bodkin Creek and Tolchester Beach.

The survey, a detailed charting of the important approaches to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, was started last May for the benefit of shipping of larger draft now using the canal.

Americans Hurt In Mexican Crash

Mexico City, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mary Cole Lincoln, Minneapolis, Minn., secretary to the United States military attache, and three other persons were injured last night when they attempted to escape from men they thought were highwaymen.

Mrs. Lincoln suffered a skull injury and leg fracture. Her daughter suffered a broken arm. Two Mexico City persons were slightly hurt.

States Urged To Modernize Labor Laws

Roosevelt Sends Note Mrs. Perkins Tells Need 43 Take Part in Parley

Representatives of 43 States, the District of Columbia, Alaska and Puerto Rico in session here yesterday were thanked by President Roosevelt for their efforts in bringing about enactment of the wage-hour law. At the same time the President wished them success in their work "for a sound and well-rounded program of forward-looking State labor legislation."

The delegates opened their three-day fifth national conference on labor legislation with an address by Secretary of Labor Perkins who pointed to "needs still outstanding," despite progress of recent years.

"On the debit side," she said, "we still have 22 States without minimum wage legislation, 20 States without a legal limit of 8 hours, even for women, and 26 States without a legal weekly limit in excess of 48 hours, including 8 States with none at all."

She said also that most hours laws fall short of covering all workers, that 26 States still leave occupational diseases uncompensated and that "perhaps most disconcerting of all is the fact that, while workmen's compensation is our oldest form of major social legislation, and 46 States have such acts, actually today not more than half of our workers enjoy the protection of these laws.

An informal dinner at the Mayflower Hotel tonight will be addressed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

President Roosevelt's message pointed out that last year's conference called for a wage-hour law administered by the Department of Labor, with participation and cooperation by State labor departments, and added:

"Your views were adopted by the Congress and you are deserving of thanks for the yeoman service you rendered in helping to make the people of your States conscious of the need and desirability of legislation to put a floor under wages, a ceiling over hours and end child labor in interstate industry."

Delegates to the conference include:

District of Columbia—Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner, and Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the District Minimum Wage Board.

Maryland—Mrs. Margaret M. Hatfield, assistant commissioner of labor.

Virginia—John A. Titmus and O. C. Moore, of the Virginia Federation of Labor.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Alice Lunch; Talk No Politics

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came here today to fill a lecture engagement, had lunch with her Republican cousin, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

Mrs. Longworth said conversation "was strictly a family affair—we never allow politics to come between us."

Counsel Tells Supreme Court Utilities Fear Monopoly by TVA

Power Firms Foresee Their Destruction McReynolds Questions Projects' Good Faith Hints at Other Motives Than Navigation Aid

By the Associated Press.

Counsel for 13 private utilities contended yesterday before the Supreme Court that the Tennessee Valley Authority's power program would "result inevitably" in a "Federal monopoly."

Raymond T. Jackson, Cleveland lawyer, added that the far-reaching enterprise also would "destroy the power of the States to regulate a local utility and end the right of an individual to engage in that business."

Envisions "Destruction"

His colleague, John C. Weadock, of New York, asserted that "Federal competition means absolute destruction" of the private companies because "it cannot be met."

Just before the court adjourned until today, James Lawrence Fly, general counsel of the TVA, began an argument in defense of the program. He will continue today, followed by John Lord O'Brian, special TVA counsel, who was defeated last Tuesday as Republican candidate for the Senate from New York.

The utilities appealed to the Supreme Court from a three-judge Federal court in eastern Tennessee.

Justice Reed, who as Solicitor General argued for the Government in a previous TVA case before the tribunal, disqualified himself from participating. That means the decision will be by seven justices, since there is one vacancy.

Questioned by McReynolds

After Jackson had contended that the TVA's main purpose was the production and sale of power and that this activity did not result from an essential government function such as improving navigation or flood control, Justice McReynolds broke the silence which the bench had kept.

"How much money has been spent by this set-up?" inquired McReynolds, who is classified by the Administration as a "conservative."

"A little under $200,000,000," was the reply.

"What is the cost to improve navigation?"

"A little less than $75,000,000."

"And they already have spent $200,000,000," McReynolds commented. "It seems to me that throws some light on the good faith of the enterprise."

Prior to the arguments, the Supreme Court refused to sustain an injunction obtained by the National Biscuit Co. against the Kellogg Co. to prevent the latter firm from selling pillow-shaped breakfast cereal and using the words "shredded wheat."

Two Dissent

Justice Louis D. Brandeis said the National Biscuit Co. had no exclusive right to use the term "shredded wheat" because that was "the generic term of the article," and patents on National Biscuit's pillow-shaped product had expired many years ago.

Justices McReynolds and Butler disagreed with the majority, declaring it seemed "sufficiently clear" that the Kellogg Co. was trying fraudulently to appropriate good will built up at great cost by National Biscuit.

The supreme tribunal also announced it would not reconsider its recent refusal to review the conviction of Thomas Mooney for complicity in the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco. Mooney is serving a life sentence in San Quentin, Calif., penitentiary.

TVA Investigators Call Dr. Parran

By the Associated Press.

Four utilities representatives head a list of witnesses called to testify today before the congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In addition, Chairman Dunalsey (Democrat), Ohio, announced that the committee would hear Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general; Representative Sparkman (Democrat), Alabama, and Thomas Cooper, dean of the University of Kentucky and chairman of the Valley States Land Grant College Committee.

Utilities representatives will include Edward L. Moreland, of Boston, representing the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation; C. W. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute; Bernard F. Weadock, vice president of the institute, and Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern.

Hazen Drops First Nickel in Parking Meters

Autoists Differ on Value 310 on Busy Streets 8-Month Experiment

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington's "nickel-for-a-parking-space" experiment was officially inaugurated yesterday amid considerable fanfare along downtown F street.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, assisted by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, deposited the first nickel—at least the first "official" nickel—in one of the 310 parking meters now ready for use. Several hundred bystanders watched the ceremonies with mixed emotions.

Although enforcement of the meter law did not begin until 2 p. m., motorists who sought parking spaces earlier in the day contributed heavily to the "rent-a-curb-space" fund before they were actually required to. The silver paint on the streamlined gadgets was hardly dry before uniformed drivers began dropping in nickels.

Small groups of citizens in earnest discussion could be found beside nearly every meter along the downtown "experimental" streets.

"I'm going to leave my car home from now on," said a man who alighted in front of the Munsey Trust Building and stood staring at the "silent policeman." "I pay enough taxes now and I'll be —— if I'll pay to park my car on a public street."

He was joined by another man who didn't agree with his viewpoint.

"I think they're great," said the second. "I'll bet we can find plenty of parking spaces now—and find them when we want them. I come from a city where parking meters have been a success for several years."

Police Watch to be Rigid

In most cases, the meters will permit 60 minutes of parking for five cents. In front of banks, however, the limit will be 20 minutes—for the same price.

Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Police Precinct, who will direct enforcement of the trial meter system, warned motorists that his men will keep rigid supervision on all meters. It will be impossible, he said, to use "slugs" instead of nickels because each coin remains in a little glass-faced slot until the legal parking period expires and can readily be seen by passing policemen.

Van Duzer estimated the meters will produce $90 a day in revenue. This money, he said, will be used to defray traffic control and highway upkeep expenses. The experiment will continue until July, when the public will be asked to decide whether the meters remain or go.

Meters Off on Sundays

The meters will not be in effect on Sundays and holidays, but every other day from 9:30 a. m. until 4 p. m. Commercial vehicles will be prohibited from using the meter spaces.

It will be permissable to use the unexpired time of another motorist if he happens to leave before his nickel runs out without depositing an additional coin. Parking laws now in effect will govern the meter zones.

The experiment is the result of an act of Congress and meters have been installed along downtown E, F and G streets, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and on Seventh street between E and F streets.

D. C. Doctor Sentenced For Fatal Operation

Justice Proctor yesterday sentenced Dr. James W. Hart, 63, to three to five years in prison for an illegal operation which preceded the death of a 22-year-old woman in a Washington hospital last year. Dr. Hart was convicted by a District Court jury recently. He was acquitted of similar charges several times in recent years.

Irwin Pleads Guilty in Murder of Model; Rants at Judge, Promises to Melt Jail Bars

Admits Killing Others Faces Life in Jail Found to Be Syphilitic

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 14.—Robert Irwin, the "mad sculptor," who killed a mother, her beautiful daughter and their boarder on Easter morn, 1937, today accepted—protesting gibberishly—a life in prison rather than the possibility of death in the electric chair.

The 31-year-old one-time divinity student and erstwhile asylum inmate abruptly was pleaded guilty to second-degree murder before completion of a jury to try him on first-degree charges. He will be sentenced on November 28.

State Accepts Motion

Irwin himself protested almost incoherently, but finally yielded when Judge James G. Wallace asked for a forthright plea. Jacob Rosenblum, assistant district attorney, recommended the court accept the plea.

A thin, wasted figure ravaged by disease and weighing about 120 pounds, he shouted at first that he did not consider himself guilty of murder.

"I looked it up in the dictionary," he screamed, "and it said murder was the malicious killing of one person by another. There was nothing malicious in what I did.

"I am pleading against my better judgment and only to save money," he said.

Pressed by the judge for an unqualified plea, he assented, mumbling, after wheeling to accuse his guards of "abominable" treatment.

Irwin stormed at the prosecution staff, calling them "professional liars." Then turning to the judge, he said:

"I prophesy to you that before 10 years I will be out." His counsel said Irwin hoped to escape prison by "melting the iron bars."

The confessed murderer is liable to sentences ranging from 20 years to life for each of the three killings.

Irwin's victims were Veronica Gedeon, pretty young photographers' model; her mother, and Frank Byrnes, all slain in a rage of twisted jealousy over Irwin's thwarted suit to win the affections of Veronica's sister, Mrs. Ethel Kudner.

Jail for Life

The crime disturbed the normal calm of Eastertide on Beekman Hill, where the Gedeons lived modestly on the fringe of wealth in the middle East Side of Manhattan.

District Attorney Dewey said he would recommend a sentence of 90 years to life for each of the three murders and that they should be served consecutively.

"It is imperative," Dewey said, "that the community be permanently protected against Irwin's possible return to society. This man has been previously committed as insane five times.

"Had the case gone to the jury, Irwin might have been held legally insane at the time the murders were committed and then could have been released on the community again. Now that will never happen."

The guilty plea was entered after 3½ days had been spent in seating eight jurors from among 70 talesmen on a special panel of 150, including no women.

Irwin probably will be taken first to Sing Sing Prison and later, to the Dannemora Prison for the Criminal Insane at Clinton.

The triple slaying occurred shortly after Irwin was expelled from St. Lawrence University at Canton, N. Y., where he went to study for the ministry. Three of the preceding five years had been passed in mental institutions.

After the crime, Irwin fled to Philadelphia and Washington, and then to Cleveland, and got a busboy job at Cleveland's Statler Hotel. He stayed undetected for more than a month, despite a Nation-wide hunt.

Identified by a girl kitchen worker from a photograph in a detective story magazine, Irwin fled to Chicago and surrendered at the office of the Herald-Examiner in June, 1937. He has been in the Tombs Prison here since.

As the trial resumed after lunch today, Irwin's counsel, Samuel Leibowitz, unexpectedly requested the withdrawal of the jury and talesmen.

Indicating a lesser plea would be taken, he spoke for half an hour tracing Irwin's life and his growing insanity on which the defense had planned its case.

(Under the New York State law, a man is not legally responsible for a crime if there is reasonable doubt that at the time he did not know the nature and quality of his act or did not know that it was against the law, civil or moral.)

Leibowitz said Irwin had syphilis, first treated when he was only 9, and now in the "four-plus" or most virulent stage, and probably would die within five years of tuberculosis, "a gibbering idiot."

'Streamlined' School Urged On P.-T.A. Unit

'Memorizing' Criticized 'Practical' Study Asked Curricula Assailed

Curricula in American schools can be streamlined to meet present-day needs by abolishing the "painful tasks of memorizing masses of subject matter" and substituting practical experience, the Parent-Teachers Association of the Whittier School decided last night.

Speakers taking part in a panel discussion on "The Changing Curriculum" told the association that curricula today must reflect the changes that are taking place in everyday life.

"American education must get away from the old, outmoded habits of educating a child for white collar jobs," H. W. Seaquist, representing the parents of the association, asserted.

Co-operation Urged

"There is too much of a tendency in our educational system to look down on the laboring man who makes his living in overalls," he said.

"Curricula must be accepted as a co-operative enterprise, with the teacher and child working together to achieve a balance that will meet the needs rather than supply a large store of subject matter," Mrs. A. L. Kendall, a teacher at Whittier School, said.

Asserting curriculum changes must be especially emphasized in the elementary grades, Mrs. Juanita Winn, of the District schools headquarters staff, outlined "areas of living which should be included in the new curriculum."

Study of Living Proposed

In the first grade, home and school life should be taught to give the child a broad foundation, she said. On this would grow a broader scope in the second grade, with the child studying the activities of the "fireman, postman—even the garbage man, in order to learn co-operative living," she added.

Third grade curricula should include study of living conditions due to environment, Mrs. Winn said. Children should also begin to be interested in reading the newspaper at this stage, she added.

A study of frontier life designed to give the child a chance to compare hardships of early days with the modern-day comforts and to learn to appreciate the democratic principles that guided the pioneers should be included in fourth grade curricula. In fifth and sixth grades, the effect upon modern life of inventions, machines and mass production should be studied, she said.

The discussion was led by Miss Elsie E. Green, principal of Whittier School. Participating were Mrs. Kendall, L. J. Cantrell, principal of Paul Junior High School; Mrs. Howard Jones, Mrs. Carolyn Irish and Seaquist.

Farm Chemists Talk It Over, But Reporter Can't Say What

300 Attending Agricultural Standards Meeting Discussion Far Too Technical for Layman 'Hard to Say What Took Place,' Leader Says

Washington's most technical convention of the year—that of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists—dove into figures, facts, formulas, residues, elements and mystification yesterday and adjourned at 5 p. m. with official expression of sympathy for any laymen assigned to breaking down the formulas and elements for immediate public understanding.

The body, which establishes the standards in foods, fertilizers, soils, feeding stuffs, dairy products, insecticides, medicinal products, caustic poisons, paints, varnishes and materials relating to agricultural pursuits, loaded several blackboards with enough chemical terms to stump a couple of college graduating classes.

It demonstrated that such romantic paper titles as "Wood Alcohol in Brandy," and "Cordials and Liqueurs" can be reduced in topic substance to mystifying chemical hieroglyphics. But the chemists drank it by the hour and left the room loaded with notes and formulae.

"It is a little difficult to say just what took place," said H. R. Kraybill, of Purdue University, the president. "Indeed, any layman who heard the papers may think it a little technical," he said.

But all the standards used now in the materials relating to agriculture originated in the association, and these are too many to single out any of special importance—and besides the subject is very technical, Kraybill asserted, after dismissing the association to reconvene at 9:30 a. m. today.

The program today will include papers on "Hexylresorcinol," "Acetphenetidin in Presence of Caffeine and Asprin," "Microchemical Methods for Synthetics," "Quantum Counter," "Refractive Indices of Sugar Solutions," "Fluorine Compounds," and "Macaroni."

Approximately 300 persons are attending the convention, the fifty-fourth, which is being held at the Raleigh Hotel.

Meanwhile, the Citizens Committee for Medical Freedom, which earlier distributed stickers to attach to pledges, denied these stickers would invalidate the pledge cards. Nathan R. Margold, legal counsel for the committee, said the directions in the stickers were legal and valid and would make the pledge effective "when the Community Chest undertakes to make hospitalization payments, through the hospitalization fund or otherwise, only to hospitals which the Community Chest and the Group Health Association agree are not discriminating against the association or its members."

Ground Is Broken For New Temple of D. C. Scottish Rite

High-ranking officials of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry yesterday participated in groundbreaking ceremonies at the site of the order's new temple on Sixteenth street, just north of the Italian Embassy.

John H. Cowles, sovereign grand commander of the Southern Jurisdiction of Free Masons, dug the first shovel of earth in the ceremonies.

Frank Stetson, chairman of the building committee, said excavation would be completed in about three weeks. The temple, which will cost $380,000, should be ready for occupancy by Christmas, he said.

Present at the ceremonies yesterday were: Monie Sanger, Robert P. Smith, C. C. Coombs, deputy of the supreme council for the District; Austin J. Leister, Hector G. Spaulding, venerable master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection; Frederic B. Blackburn, wise aster of Evangelist Chapter, Knights Rose Croix; John C. 'Exploding Stars' Are Described by G.W.U. Scientist

Stars like our own sun have been know to explode and increase their brightness 10,000 times, Dr. George Gamow, professor of theoretical physics at George Washington University, declared last night during an illustrated lecture at the Hall of Government

These sudden bursts of brightness, once thought to be new stars or novae, and later seen as an increase in luminosity of an old star, may result either from a collapse of the whole star structure, or from a sudden generation of energy, Dr. Gamow explained.

Novae appear in our own stellar system at the rate of about 30 a year, most of them too faint to be seen without a telescope, while about every 300 years a supernovae appears, he said.

Dr. Gamow said although the supernovae explosions would probably happen only to stars much heavier than the sun, ordinary novae have been recorded which before the explosion resembled our sun.

One Killed, 7 Injured In Automobile Crash

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 14.—A man was killed and seven persons injured in a head-on collision of two automobiles today at Fort Littleton, west of here. Henry Wilson, 80, was instantly killed.

The injured are Harry Mort, Mrs. Harry Mort, Ruth Lock, Warren Lock, Mrs. Carrie Brown, Mrs. Harry Cromer and Miss Bernadine Ravenstein, all of the Fort Littleton section. Harry Cromer, driver of one of the cars, is being held pending the outcome of a coroner's inquest.

Depressions Cited as Cause Of Blindness

Poverty, Filth Blamed Vision Institute Opens Children Chief Victims

Economic depressions are the indirect cause of many cases of blindness in children, Dr. E. Leonard Goodman, junior surgeon of the Episcopal Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital, declared yesterday at the opening of the first annual Institute on Conservation of Vision.

Sponsored by the District Society For the Prevention of Blindness, the institute will continue through Saturday.

"A disease which we see less of when times get better," Dr. Goodman said, "is phlyctenular conjunctivitis"—an acute inflammation of the eyelid membrane which infects the eye itself and causes blindness.

Dr. Goodman said the disease appears in children suffering from an unbalanced diet and who either have or have had tuberculosis. These children, he explained, frequently have chronic eczema, tonsilitis and adenoids. Their diet is characteristically "too rich in carbohydrates."

Another cause of blindness which welfare agencies, by working for sanitary conditions and habits, can keep down, Dr. Goodman declared, is trachoma.

In the last year, he said, research has pretty well established that it is due to a virus too small to be seen through the microscope.

Trachoma, he said, is associated with "dirt and squalor" rather than malnutrition.

Eyelid inflammation, he said, may be caused by pneumonia, gonorrhea, and diphtheria germs, or may be merely a symptom of some other eye disease, such as glaucoma, he said, advising people to keep their fingers out of their eyes, and, if they get something in their eye to wash it out with boric acid or some similar solution.

Dr. Benjamin Rones, also of the Episcopal Hospital staff, explained to the institute the delicate mechanism of the eye.

Hospice Luncheon Today

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle and Mrs. Walter P. Fry will speak at a report luncheon of the Girls Club and Hospice of the Volunteers of America in their funds' drive, to be held at 12:30 today at the Cairo Hotel.

Presiding at the luncheon will be Mrs. Ernest H. Grant, general chairman of the campaign. Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, treasurer, will be in charge of the program.

Southern Doctors Favor U. S. Health Program in Poll

Oklahoma City, Nov. 14 (AP)—Members of the Southern Medical Association today approved the general principles of the national health program to be presented at the next session of Congress.

The association itself will take no official action either to indorse or condemn the program, which calls for the expenditure of up to $850,000,000 by 1948 in bettering the medical status of the American citizen, officials of the organization said.

However, individual physicians arriving for the association's meeting said in a private poll conducted today they favored the proposed use of Federal, State and local government funds to provide medical care for the poor, build and maintain additional hospitals, establish new medical clinics, and provide better care for mothers and children.

Spanish Veteran to Talk

James Pistoni, a Washington veteran of the International Battalion of the Spanish government forces, will relate his experiences in the Spanish civil war at a "Spanish Night" celebration of the Tom Paine Club tonight. The meeting will be held at 8:30 o'clock at 509 G street northwest.

Miss Thompson Honored for Achievement

Given Award at Fete
Pearl Buck Heads Jury
N.Y. Dinner Broadcast

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 14.—Miss Dorothy Thompson, special writer for the New York Herald Tribune, The Washington Post, and other newspapers, and wife of Sinclair Lewis, novelist, received the 1938 American Woman's Association award for eminent achievement at the annual friendship dinner at the American Woman's Club tonight. The award this year was in the field of journalism.

Name of the winner was announced by Miss Jane Todd, Republican member of the New York State Assembly, who represented education and public affairs on the jury.

Mrs. Pearl Buck was chairman of the jury and other members were: For commerce and industry, Miss Margaret Cuthbert; for general interests, Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip; for science and law, Miss Mary Rehan, and for literature and art, Miss Fannie Hurst.

Questions Indicate Winner

Miss Todd permitted the audience to name the recipient of the award, by giving it eight questions in the manner of "Professor Quiz." If there ever had been any doubt in the mind of the 700 women as to the identity of the winner, eminent in the field of journalism, it was dispelled with Miss Todd's first question:

"What noted woman journalist was graduated from Syracuse University with the class of 1914, and later went to the University of Vienna?"

Miss Thompson had not been present the early part of the evening, as she had a broadcast with Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra over Station WEAF of the National Broadcasting Co. at 9 o'clock.

Dinner is Broadcast

She joined guests of honor at the speakers' table soon after that program was finished. The speeches of the friendship dinner went on the air over the same station at 10:30.

Miss Caroline E. Slocum outlined the history of the friendship dinner, founded in 1927, and the American Woman's Association award established in 1930. Previous winners have been Mrs. Margaret Sanger, the late Amelia Earhart, Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis (the former Mrs. Charles H. Sabin), Mrs. Ogden Reid, Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve and Miss Hoffman.

Other speakers were Mrs. Margaret Culkin Banning, writer; Mrs. Elizabeth Hawes, fashion expert; Miss Margaret Bourke-White, photographer; Miss Jacqueline Cochran, aviator; Mrs. Vera Micheles Dean, of the Foreign Policy Association, and Mary Pickford.

Daladier Issues 12 More Decrees

the members of boards of directors operating public services must be of French nationality.

The new laws were announced despite an earlier communique which said no more would be promulgated and that Parliament would act on any other measures deemed necessary to cope with France's financial problems.

These problems include the national debt, growing at the rate of 12 per cent a year and which is expected to be 570,000,000,000 francs (about $15,162,000,000) at the end of 1938.

Saturday's 32 decrees, which Finance Minister Reynaud declared would give the government an extra 20,000,000,000 francs (about $532,000,000), in effect abolished the 40-hour week, increased income taxes, and increased the price of sugar, tobacco, bus and subway fares.

Daladier has said next year's treasury deficit would be about 36 [illegible] 7,000,000).

The premier's basic financial decree powers, granted October 5, expire tomorrow.

Concrete resistance came from Leon Jouhaux, head of the General Confederation of Labor.

"At a time when those who lead us are pretending to fix the fate of the working class without consulting us," he said, "reinforced unity will be our first answer to their acts."

The Government was considered determined to force acceptance of revised, labor statutes by putting teeth in the new legislation governing suspension of the 40-hour week when necessary.

and then had been ordered out of that dismembered country, that, shorn of her richest lands and factories, did not know how to feed the mouths that were left.

"He read that Jewish children had been stood on platforms in front of a class of German children and had had their features pointed to and described by the teacher as marks of a criminal race. He read that men and women of his race, amongst them scholars and a general decorated for his bravery, had been forced to wash the streets, while the mob laughed. They were men of his race whom he had been taught to venerate—scientists and educators and scholars who once had been honored by their country. He read that they had been driven from their posts.

Told of War Guilt

"He heard that the Nazi government had started all this because they said the Jews had made them lose the great war. But Herschel had not even been born when the great war ended. He was 17 years old.

"Herschel had a pistol. I don't know why he had it. Maybe he had bought it somewhere thinking to use it on himself, if the worst came to the worst. Thousands of men and women of his race had killed themselves in the last years rather than live like hunted animals. Still, he lived on. His father had a shop in Hanover and was making a living.

"Then, a few days ago, he got a letter from his father. His father told him he had been summond from his bed, herded with thousands of others into a train of box cars and shipped over the border into Poland. He had not been allowed to take any of his meager savings with him. Just 50 cents. 'I am penniless,' he wrote to his son.

"This was the end. Herschel fingered his pistol and thought 'why doesn't someone do something? Why must we be chased around the earth like animals?' Herschel was wrong. Animals are not chased around the world like this. In every country there are societies for the prevention of cruelty of animals. But there are none for the prevention of cruelty to people.

"Herschel thought of the people responsible for this terror. Right in Paris were some who were the official representatives of these responsible people. Maybe he thought that assassination is an honorable profession in these days. He knew, no doubt, that the youths who murdered the Austrian Chancellor Dollfuss are heroes in Nazi Germany, as are the murderers of Rathenau. Maybe he remembered that only four years ago the Nazi leader himself had caused scores of men to be assassinated without a trial, and had justified it simply by saying that he was the law.

"And so Herschel walked into the German Embassy and shot Herr Vom Rath. Herschel made no attempt to escape. Escape was out of the question, anyhow.

"Herr Vom Rath died on Wednesday. And on Thursday every Jew in Germany was held responsible for this boy's deed. In every city an organized and methodical mob was turned loose on the Jewish population. Synagogues were burned, shops were gutted and sometimes looted. At least four people were done to death. Many, many more were beaten. Scores killed themselves. In cold blood the German government imposed a fine of $400,000,000 on the entire Jewish community and followed it by decrees which means total ruin for all of them.

"A horrified world was stunned. In the United States nearly every newspaper protested. A former Governor, Alfred Smith, and the recent Republican candidate for New York State Governor, Thomas Dewey, protested with unusual eloquence.

"But in Paris a boy who had hoped to make some gesture of protest which would call attention to the wrongs done his race burst into hysterical sobs. Up to then he had been apathetic. He had been prepared to pay for his deed with his own life. Now he realized that half a million of his fellows had been sentenced to extinction on the excuse of his deed.

"But I am speaking of this boy. Soon he will go on trial. The news is that on top of all this terror, this horror, one more must pay. They say he will go to the guillotine.

"The world has endured for five years unheard-of things. The fortunes of American citizens have been all but confiscated in Germany. We have protested, and no attention has been paid. What could we do? Some weeks ago some 200 American citizens of Jewish blood were ordered to close their businesses and depart from Italy as undesirable aliens. Our State Department protested, but the protest has been all but ignored. What could we do? Every country in the world has had a refugee problem to add to all its others, as a result of a system which cares nothing for what happens to other countries, and we among them. What could we do?

"We could, of course, do many things. There are half a million non-naturalized Germans in the United States and as many Italians. We might have loaded them on boats, confiscated their property and shipped them home. There are hundreds of thousands of dollars in German and Italian fortunes in this country. We might have confiscated them as reprisals for the confiscated fortunes of American citizens and for unpaid debts. Why don't we do it?

"We don't do it because it isn't, according to our standards, decent. We don't do it because we refuse to hold people responsible for crimes that others commit. We don't do it because our sense of justice is still too strong to answer terror with terror. We don't do it because we do not want to add to the hatred and chaos which is already making this world intolerable. We fear that violence breeding violence will destroy us all, in the long run.

"When the dictators commit what to the rest of the world are crimes, they say there is a higher justice—they claim the justification of national necessity and emergency. We do not think that that justice is higher. We think it low to the point of revulsion, and cannot therefore answer it in its own language.

"But is there not a higher justice in the case of Herschel Grynspanz, 17 years old? Is there not a higher justice that says that this deed has been expiated with $400,000,000 and a half million existences, with beatings and burnings and deaths and suicides? Must the nation whose Zola defended Dreyfus until the world rang with it cut off the head of one more Jew?

World on Trial

"Who is on trial in this case? I say we are all on trial. I say the Christian world is on trial. I say the men of Munich are on trial, who signed a pact without one word of protection for helpless minorities.

"Herschel Grynszpan will be tried by a French jury. But nothing will be able to prevent his being tried by the jury of world opinion. Whether he lives or not won't matter much to Herschel. He was prepared to die when he fired those shots. His young life was already ruined. Since then his heart has been broken into bits by the results of his deed. Isn't it enough?

"I would like to be one among millions to try to save this boy's life, not because I condone any act of violence, but because, like millions of others, I am sick at heart of violence. They say a man is entitled to trial by a jury of his peers, and a man's kinsmen rally around him when he is in trouble. But no kinsman of Herschel's can defend him. No man of his race anywhere in the world can defend him. The Nazi government has announced that if any Jews anywhere in the world protest at anything that is happening further oppressive measures will be taken. They are holding every Jew in Germany as a hostage.

"Therefore, we who are not Jews must speak, speak our sorrow and indignation and disgust in so many voices that they will be heard. This boy has become a symbol and the responsibility for his deed must be put by the jury of world opinion where it belongs. If you are not Jewish and you feel as I do I ask you to wire or write me in care of this station."

Chamberlain Silent on Giving Jews Refuge

London

to return "certain territories" to Germany despite her "deplored campaign against Jews."

Appeasement Hindered

[Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary of state for air, at a meeting in Sheffield plainly implied that the latest outbreak of German violence against Jews had not made Chamberlain's pursuit of appeasement easier.

[Condemning the killing of the German Embassy secretary, Ernst vom Rath, in Paris by a Polish Jew, Sir Kingsley said "but undoubtedly, and it is well that Germany should know it, there is a great measure of sympathy for those who are being made to suffer for it."—Editor's note.]

Pressed by the Labor Party to make a statement concerning events in Germany since the assassination of Vom Rath, the prime minister said:

"I regret to have to say that reports in the press of the actions taken against Jews in Germany appear to be substantially correct. Indeed, they have to some extent been corroborated by Dr. Goebbels to foreign press correspondents in Berlin. The measures taken by the German government have now been published.

To Protect Britons

"No one in this country would, for a moment, seek to defend the senseless crime committed in Paris, but at the same time there will be deep and widespread sympathy here for those victims who are being made to suffer so severely.

"The British charge d'Affaires in Berlin has taken steps to safeguard British subjects, and we reserve the right to present claims for damages. We requested him to call the attention of competent German authorities to the rights of British citizens resident in Germany.

"He has also been instructed to address a strong protest to the German government, with regard to recent articles in the German press associating former British ministers and members of this House, with the recent murder of Herr vom Rath."

These articles accused Anthony Eden, Winston Churchill, Alfred Duff-Cooper and Maj. Clement Richard Attlee of inciting the murder in Paris.

The prime minister was asked by a laborite, A. V. Alexander, whether he would consult President Roosevelt about addressing a joint protest to Berlin. Chamberlain postponed an answer by asking that the question be put in writing.

George Lansbury, former leader of the Labor Party, suggested some place in the vast British empire should be found for 500,000 German Jews to give them a fresh start in life. Chamberlain replied that the problem of Jewish refugees was not a matter for Britain alone, although his government would consider "any possible ways of assisting these people."

To further questions about sheltering the refugees in Palestine or the dominions, Chamberlain said the matter was under consideration by the International Commission on Refugees formed after the Evian conference.

P. J. Noel-Baker, Laborite, asked the prime minister to find some means, either alone or in co-operation with other powers, to make known to Germany the "deep feeling of horror" aroused by the persecution of the Jews.

Reich Gives 300 Jews 24 Hours to Pay

cent of the family fortunes in question, as estimated in the Jewish property registration of six months ago.

Yet, since these fortunes have been sadly depleted in the interval, the real assessment may vary between 33 1/3 and 50 per cent. The assessments with the 24-hour deadline have been addressed, it is understood, to the Jewish families whose fortunes are largely in easily liquidated securities, which can be handed over to the Reich without delay.

The eye of the needle through which the 25,000 to 45,000 Jews arrested in Germany during the recent current terror, must pass to obtain release is definite provision for immigration in the form of visas or documented assurance of visas to enter as residents in foreign countries.

Releases, it is understood, are being made almost solely on these grounds. Made aware of the requirements, the relatives of arrested Jews swarmed to foreign consulates here today in greater numbers than before with desperate pleas for documents concerning visas, sufficiently imposing to make an impression on the Nazi police authorities.

At the American consulate general the machinery of the visa section was almost thrown out of gear by the rush. In the course of the day fully 1,500 Jews—the majority were women relatives of arrested men—crowded into the premises, or waited outside. The members of the badly overworked staff were forced to spend the bulk of their time keeping the crowds back, answering questions, or in preparing papers, where authorized, which might assist relatives in getting Jews out of custody.

Such papers could be provided, of course, only within the strict limit of the American immigration laws. In general, the documents certify the Jew in question already has secured his visa for immigration or that a date has been set at which he might secure one, under the immigration quota. In many cases, at least, such documents presented to the police authorities are proving sufficient to free Jews arrested in the mass raids.

Being without information as to the fate of their men except that they have been arrested, many women callers at the consulate were in a semihysterical condition.

Many relatives of those in custody had to be turned away with the information that because of the provisions of the immigration law, nothing could be done to advance the date at which a visa could be secured. Under such circumstances, pitiful scenes occurred within the consulate premises.

Jews reported today they had been assured by police the wave of arrests which accompanied the new anti-Semitic campaign had ended.

While the Government went forward with its confiscatory measures, Jews were looking with foreboding to next Thursday, the day fixed for the state funeral at Dusseldorf of Ernst vom Rath, the German Embassy secretary slain at Paris by a Polish Jew.

Six Die in Crash Of Dutch Plane Flying Refugees

Amsterdam, Nov. 14 (AP).—A Netherlands airliner loaded with Jewish refugees fleeing Germany crashed in a blinding rainstorm near Amsterdam's airport today, killing six of its occupants.

The entire crew of four and two women among the 14 passengers were killed. The pilot of the ill-fated Berlin to Amsterdam craft was Jan Dulmelaar, one of the Netherlands' most famed airmen.

The women were Mrs. Weidemann-Marx and Mrs. Marion Schneider-Desnitzky, both of Berlin.

The 12 other passengers were injured, all but one seriously.

London, Nov. 15 (AP).—Five Royal Air force fliers were killed in three crashes today, bringing to 201 the number of deaths this year in military accidents. It was the worst day for the Royal Air Force since October 19, when six men were killed.

Herald Tribune Fire Delays Early Edition

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—A small fire in a ventilating shaft at the Herald Tribune building tonight blanketed the West Forty-first street section just off Times Square with heavy smoke. The newspaper's employes continued to work, however, despite the smoke. The first edition was delayed a few minutes. Damage was confined largely to the ventilating shaft, Herald Tribune officials said.

Ickes, Hoover, Landon Assail Nazi Persecution

Radio

attacked "the Nazi clique" by name.

Speaking from San Francisco on the same program, former President Herbert Hoover declared that "our condemnation of the Nazi leaders should be without reserve."

Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, warned America against regarding German anti-Semitic policy as the concern of the Jews alone, reminding his listeners that "unchecked mass brutality is contagious."

"I should be very glad to see our Government recall its Ambassador to Germany," declared Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

"Cries of pain" from individual victims of the Nazi terror often bring "the situation so close to us that we can very readily lose perspective," Dr. Gannon said.

"We may sometimes recall the obvious political significance of a spectacle which shows the destruction for other people of all that we cherish in this ever more dear United States, but we nearly always forget the eternal significance that reaches back beyond our Constitution and the Bill of Rights. . . For the situation in Germany today is not merely political or economic.

Public Sanction Doubted

"The fact that the National Socialists were born in a civilized fatherland, a glorious Germany, rich in cultural traditions, dotted with churches whose lovely painted windows shone with German saints—this fact gives the present campaign of frightfulness a very profound significance, a significance as profound as hell."

Bishop Hughes described as "tigerish behavior" the action of Germans taking part in the anti-Jewish violence of last week, but demanded, "Cannot the autocracy that represents a totalitarian state quickly stop such conduct?"

"Many of us who have traveled in Germany cannot believe that these dreadful happenings are sanctioned by the people who have laid emphasis upon the glory of their culture," he said.

Secretary Ickes asserted that America would be untrue to her highest standards "were she to stand tongue-tied at a time of such violations of the laws of humanity, such brutal, unprovoked and un-Christian acts as we are witnessing today in various parts of the world." He prefaced the remark that he was speaking as "a Christian and human being" rather than a Cabinet officer.

It is no accident, he said, that violence against the Jews was immediately followed by "cruel and barbarous assaults against the palace of a Catholic cardinal. These assaults are at the bottom not assaults against Jews alone, nor against Catholics alone. They are assaults against reason. They are assaults against civilization."

He reminded Germany that "the time comes when neither man nor nation can live without the decent respect of their fellowmen."

Suspects Robbery

Disclaiming any desire "to dictate to other peoples their internal form of government," he contended, "It is strictly in the American tradition, in the Christian tradition, to protest outrages directed against a helpless minority on account of race or religion."

The sharp-tongued Administration official suggested that strangulation of Jewish economic life in Germany may be designed for the personal enrichment of Nazi leaders.

"Anyone who recalls history will remember," he said, "that when the property of any minority, religious or race has been confiscated in the name of public policy, an ample portion of the confiscated property has always eventually turned up as part of the private fortunes of the individual politicians in power who started the confiscation in the holy name of the state.

"It is an old stratagem of tyrants first to make hated those whom they intend to rob."

Several voices in the symposium expressed confidence that a substantial number of Germans are unsympathetic to the anti-Semitic measures decreed by their leaders.

Referring to Germany's notable contributions to Western civilization, even "the kindly fable of Santa Claus which delights our children," Hoover declared, "This outrage does not represent the German people. It comes squarely from their Nazi oppressors."

America has the unmistakable right to deliver its denunciation of those oppressors, he said, because of its efforts to alleviate distress in post-war Germany and "reduce the injustices" of the Versailles settlement.

Landon spoke with alarm, in his address from Topeka, Kans., of the "real danger of the growth of intolerance in this country."

"We are loath to think any semblance of such ideas could spread itself to this country," he said, but reminded his listeners that "we cannot live on an isolated plateau . . . A blood-and-thunder age makes no distinctions."

"We are not protesting simply against anti-Semitism," he continued. "We protest for the sake of all minorities that would be caught in persecution. It would be shocking indeed if we did not protest." He added, however, that "if we are to criticize, we must realize that with that criticism goes responsibility."

King Calls It "Fiendish"

Senator King declared that German treatment of the Jews "can scarcely be paralleled for brutality and fiendishness by primitive peoples in the darkest periods of the world's history."

The Nazi movement, he said, "revives the worst forms of medievalism and manifests some of the characteristics of the ancient Huns and barbarians."

Senator King prefaced his demand for severance of diplomatic relations with Germany by recalling his belief, during the international conference last summer on the refugee problem, that the American Government should have lodged an emphatic protest at Berlin.

"While 30 governments, including our own, took cognizance of the tragic conditions in Germany, I regret that they did not submit, individually and collectively, protests to the Nazi government against its indefensible and wicked treatment of hundreds of thousands of German and Austrian citizens," he stated. "They were warranted in advising the Nazi government that a continuation of its persecution of the Jews would call for a severance of all diplomatic relations with it."

Sees Religion on Brink

Stressing his conviction that the German situation involves more than the fate of half a million Jews, Senator King declared that all faiths "are undergoing a frontal attack" on the essentials of religion. Christianity and Judaism are being brough to "death's grip with paganism," he said.

The broadcast was opened with the hymn, "O God Our Help in Ages Past, Our Hope for Years to Come."

Meanwhile in Washington Presbyterian leaders awaited acknowledgement of a note sent yesterday to German Ambassador Hans H. Dieckhoff protesting the treatment of Jews in Germany.

Although he expected no answer from the Ambassador, Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, who proposed the protest, said "We hope that the action of the Presbytery here will stimulate similar action from religious leaders throughout the country."

The protest was signed by Dr. McCartney, the Rev. H. B. Taylor and the Rev. J. Lowrey Fendrich, all of this city. The text of the communication follows:

"Together with millions of American citizens, and the millions of other nationals throughout the world, we, a company of ministers and officers, members of the Presbytery of Washington City, wish to register our moral indignation at the treatment accorded the Jews by your government. Can you not make it plain to your leaders that every such act but builds higher the barrier against peace, and that all of us who would heal the hostilities of the nations are rendered helpless either to speak or to act when all the instincts of our common humanity are thus violated and outraged.

"We are a group of Christian religious leaders and officers, part of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, numbering 2,000,000 communicants, and we are confident that we are expressing the sentiment of millions throughout the Nation."

First Lady Urges Tolerance

In New York 700 actors and producers and 2,000 theater patrons signed a telegram expressing to President Roosevelt their indignation at Nazi moves against the Jewish people.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in a lecture at Cincinnati, pleaded for racial tolerance.

Demands for an official Government protest against "gruesome outbursts of barbarism" were voiced by the International Labor Defense, which claims a membership of 300,000.

The North American Hungarian Democratic Federation wired President Roosevelt: "We believe that it is time to break off diplomatic and trade relations with the Reich immediately, in the name of humanity and decency."

Matthew Woll To Organize Relief for Jews

Says Many Urge Action
Mrs. Roosevelt Appeals
N.Y. Considers Boycott

Plans for formation of a Nation-wide organization, with international representation, to relieve and defend persecuted peoples in Europe were announced here yesterday by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

"I am acting upon the urgent request of a number of groups and individuals," said Woll, who said he woud be here until Thursday to expedite plans for this new undertaking.

"With the ghastly outbreak of unprecedented persecution in Germany these requests have been repeated in the most emphatic manner," he declared. "I cannot ignore them and I am not inclined to ignore them. No person can turn a deaf ear to the demand for help.

Meanwhile, at Cincinnati, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, there for a lecture engagement, pleaded for "racial tolerance," the Associated Press said.

"While I cannot speak for anyone but myself, I hope that we, in our country, will remain as free of prejudice and tolerant as we have been," he said in an interview.

Woll's statement said:

"At the earliest possible moment I shall invite representatives of several groups to meet with me here or in New York, so that we may launch an organization having a scope and strength adequate to deal with the situation. We shall, I am sure, prepare to offer relief to persecuted peoples and to relocate them if and where possible. Already I have asked associates of mine to investigate all the possibilities as to relocation of refugees. I am taking steps also to form contacts in Europe. . . ."

U.S. Calls Ambassador Hugh Wilson Home From Berlin As Anger Mounts Over Pogrom; Roosevelt May Take Stand

Wilson

Secretary gave no direct answer.

He said he had no official information on reports that Ambassador Wilson had protested alleged damage to properties of American Jews during the recent unprecedented outbreak.

Talked With Dieckhoff

Secretary Hull last Saturday conferred with Hans Dieckhoff, the German Ambassador, but he said their conversations were on a purely minor matter.

This Government has made no official protest since early last May, when it emphatically opposed application to American-Jewish nationals of the German decree requiring registration of the property of all Jews in Germany. At that time it asked prompt "assurances that the measures will not be applied to American citizens."

Six weeks later Germany replied that its officials were waiving application of the registration order to property held by American Jews permanently living abroad, except in case of former German nationals who had emigrated.

The German Embassy here, when informed of the development, insisted they saw no especial significance in it, and Associated Press dispatches from Berlin said Wilson's return to the United States was privately disclosed to correspondents there before the Jewish question reached its recent acute stag.

But Washington observers, pointing to repeated suggestions that Wilson be called home as one means of demonstrating America's attitude, regarded it as a move of more than usual import.

American leadership in a movement for parallel protests by civilized nations against German persecution of Jews was regarded as one possible course.

Precedent for such moral force was believed offered in former Secretary of State Lansing's denunciation of mass terrorism in Russia during the Bolshevik massacres of 1918.

Lansing on September 20, 1918, wrote all American diplomatic missions to sound out governments abroad on their readiness to take united action "to impress upon the perpetrators of these crimes the aversion with which civilization regards their present wanton acts." The proposal met a general cooperative response around the world.

Describing conditions in Russia at the time, Lansing said in his note:

"Thousands of persons have been shot without even a form of trial; ill-administered prisons are filled beyond capacity and every night scores of Russian citizens are recklessly put to death, and irresponsible bands are venting their brutal passions in the daily massacre of untold innocents."

Washington observers cited an abundance of other precedent for official American protests against foreign persecutions of Jews.

As far back as the Grant Administration in 1870 and 1872, Secretary of State Hamilton Fish sent representations to Rumania remonstrating against that nation's maltreatment of the Jews. The Rumanian persecutions were called a grievance "so enormous as to impart to it a common character, in the redress of which all countries and governments and creeds are alike interested."

Hay Protested in 1902

Again in 1902, Secretary Hay opposed outbreaks of anti-Semitism in Rumania, both from the standpoint of humanity, and because of the likely effect on immigration of refugees beyond this country's ability to absorb them.

During the Arthur, Taft and Roosevelt administrations, oppression of Jews in Russia met similar indictments from this country, leading up to the abrogation of the Russo-American trade treaty in 1911.

A veteran career diplomat, Hugh Wilson served here four months as Assistant Secretary of State before he was named to succeed Dodd as Ambassador to Germany. Previously he served more than 10 years as Minister to Switzerland.

Dodd's first public statement in this country following resignation of his German post was in bitter condemnation of Nazi religious persecutions and race hatreds.

Dodd Forced to Resign

Dodd accepted the German portfolio in July, 1933, "in the hope that I might render some service to my country and perhaps aid in the cause of world peace." He said that "within a year after my arrival there were some real discouragements" and his friction with the Nazi regime reached the breaking point when he opposed American acceptance of an invitation to be represented at the Nazi Party conference at Nuremberg in September, 1937. He resigned; effective last January, after Nazi officials openly called him persona non grata.

Official German protests followed Dodd's later speeches in this country, and Secretary Hull came to his defense with a statement that Dodd as a private citizen enjoys American rights of free speech.

Germany on Blacklist

Germany now is on the State Department trade "blacklist," benefits accruing to other favored nations from American trade pacts being barred to the Nazi regime.

Dr. Rudolph Brinckman, German secretary of State for economics, in a speech last August, suggested a bilateral trade agreement between Germany and the United States on the German barter basis, but Secretary Hull speedily rejected the offer. He expressed willingness to negotiate only on the American basis of multilateral commerce.

Last July, the Foreign Policy Association noted increasing troubled relations between the United States and Nazi Germany, with "growing friction and ill-will," in a documented survey of relations between the two countries.

A year earlier, Mayor LaGuardia's sharp oral shafts at Hitler reached proportions of an international incident when Germany twice protested. Secretary Hull at that time apologized and expressed hope that "vituperative utterances in this country and in Germany" would soon be concluded.

One increasing source of irritation has been the competitive struggle for South American markets, notably Brazil. Other outbursts of German ill-will followed United States refusal to sell helium to Germany for use in lighter-than-aircraft, and America's demand that Germany assume Austria's debts to this country.

Indictment and trial of alleged Nazi agents for alleged espionage activities in this country widened the existing rift.

Canadian Trade Pact to Be Ready Within 3 Days

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull indicated yesterday the new Canadian trade agreement would be reached within two or three days. He also said he hoped to be able to sign the British agreement before he left November 26 for the Americas conference at Lima, Peru.

State Department officials said the Anglo-American trade agreement would not contain any provisions regarding pound-dollar parity or for payment of the British war debt, the latter of which is blocked by the trade agreements act of 1934.

They said the agreement would contain the usual escape clause permitting either country to denounce the accord if fluctuations in the currency of the other should be so drastic as to affect the tariff reductions.

Reds Got Cash Of Auto Union, Inquiry Told

Voted to 'Causes' Then Spent in Overhead Organizer Names Ten

By the Associated Press.

Zygmund Dobrzynski, youthful organizer for the United Automobile Workers, testified before the House committee on un-American activities yesterday that Communist members of the union had diverted union funds into organizations controlled by the Communist Party.

He said they accomplished this by a well-planned strategy at union meetings as the result of which "contributions" were made by the union to various groups.

Asserting the intention of his evidence was "not to harm the union" but to defeat the "forces which are trying to destroy it," he expressed apprehension lest some punishment be meted out to him as the result of his testimony. He stressed the point that he appeared under subpena.

Homer Martin, president of the automobile workers, had been scheduled to testify yesterday, but, as upon several past occasions, failed to appear. Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, said, however, that there was no conflict between Martin and the committee. The union leader was again excused because of urgent business, Dies added, and would positively appear Wednesday.

Expense Funds Diversion

Dobrzynski, director of the drive to unionize workers at the Ford plant in Detroit, testified that he had been in open conflict with "Communist elements" within the union for some time.

Early in the history of the union, he said, William Weinstone, then secretary of the Communist Party in Michigan, approached him to obtain his co-operation for the Communist cause. At that time, the witness continued, Weinstone named to him a list of union officials who were Communists or working with the Communists.

Later, Dobrzynski continued, Weinstone was "tripped up" in a union election and all of his candidates but one were defeated. Meanwhile, however, Novack, Anderson and Ganley had tried to persuade him to join the Communist Party, he said.

Union money went to Communist organizations, in this manner, he told the committee:

An outside speaker would address a union meeting on behalf of some Communist-controlled organization "against war," or "against fascism," to help the babies in Spain, or some similar purpose. A Communist member would immediately present a motion that a contribution be made by the union. Another would second it, and a third make an "emotional speech." A vote would follow.

"It usually carried," Dobrzynski said.

"So that the money goes right out of the union into some avenue dominated by the Communist Party?" inquired Representative Mosier (Democrat), Ohio.

"That's right," the witness replied.

C. I. O.

collective bargaining will be furthered by a united labor movement making for co-operation, and labor peace which will be in the interest of all Americans."

After Lewis read the President's message, the delegates cheered for several minutes.

The C. I. O. Peace Committee, headed by Phillip Murray, a leader of the steel union drive and vice chairman of the C. I. O., participated in the unsuccessful unity negotiations carried on in Washington with an A. F. of L. committee in November and December last year.

The conferences collapsed at that time after Lewis and A. F. L. president, William Green, met face-to-face and threshed the subject out.

Since the 1917 peace conference Lewis had held to the position that peace could not be attained unless all C. I. O. unions were taken back and chartered by the A. F. L. before jurisdictional conflicts were settled.

Lewis declared in opening the convention that Adolf Hitler might "extend his domain into the realm of the Western Hemisphere" and that "if war comes," the Nation must look to labor for manpower and materials.

The militant leader struck at those "people in high places who have opened the sluice gates of propaganda against the C. I. O." and added:

German Pogroms Denounced

"The day may come when they will rush to C. I. O. and beg protection for their special privileges."

In a bitter denunciation of the German Reich for what he termed the "appalling" oppression of the Jews, Lewis pledged that "20,000,000 C. I. O. members and their dependents" would stand firmly behind the American Government if the State Department protested "these atrocities on the Jewish people."

Amid a tumultuous greeting from some 900 delegates, Lewis said the C. I. O., with three years of industrial unionism behind it, offered a "program of rational procedure."

"It is a coincidence," he said, "that 57 years ago the great Samuel Gompers founded in this city the labor movement of his generation."

"But," he added, "the old order changes. What the American Federation of Labor could not do in 54 years, the C. I. O. has done in three years."

Calls Hitler "Mad Wolf"

He declared the A. F. of L. served Gompers' generation "when skills were those of the craft and not the skills of the machine age.

Lewis asserted the C. I. O. stood for the protection of the privileges of all Americans whether they be Gentiles or Jews, any creed or religion, or any school of thought that maintains respect for our American institutions.

"I say to my fellow countrymen," he shouted, "to the rich and influential Jews and to the rich and influential Gentiles, as well, you can't strike down in this country a powerful movement of the workers like the C. I. O. which stands for equality and for the protection of any group, minority or religion that exists in our country."

Lewis characterized Hitler as the "mad, bloodthirsty wolf of the German government" and declared that "it is possible that we will have to meet the German dictator as he tries to extend his domain into the realm of the Western Hemisphere."

"If that day comes," Lewis asked, "who is going to sustain the United States, man its industries and send its young men to war?"

He said labor was the important factor, and added:

"And if war comes, the United States will need the co-operation of the millions of workers in the C. I. O."

As Lewis finished speaking, Heywood Broun, president of the C. I. O. American Newspaper Guild, offered a resolution, adopted unanimously by the convention, calling upon "all labor, organized or unorganized," to stand with the C. I. O., which "has offered leadership for the fight of American labor against the Nazi threat."

Lewis touched upon the unemployment problem, saying:

"We must not forget that we have 12,000,000 more or less unemployed people in America who have a right to work, but who have not been given work, that there are dependent upon these 12,000,000 many more millions who are underprivileged, ill provided for and who are asking for a participation and are looking to this convention to devise policies, to state objectives, to lay out procedure that will cause them to have hope for the future."

Blind Former Fighter Trains 'Eyes'

Felix Distrito, who a few years back was "Young Aguinaldo," a flyweight boxer of ability until his numerous fights cost him his sight, is shown with Red, a dog he taught to lead him in the manner of "Seeing Eye" dogs. Red was bought from the dog pound for $2. Felix acquired a "Seeing Eye" dog a year ago but it was killed in front of the Distrito home, 1095 Greenwood avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and necessity made an animal trainer out of the former fighter. Now he hopes to be able to start a business training dogs for the blind

Paralysis Fighters Name Labor Man

Chester M. Wright was yesterday named national director for labor as the American Federation of Labor joined the Nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis. Appointment was made by Keith Morgan, of New York City, chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's birthday, which sponsors the annual paralysis campaign.

William Green, A. F. L. president, praised work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, created by President Roosevelt to unify the battle against the disease that maims.

A conference of A. F. L. officials will be called shortly in Washington to work out details in the labor drive. The national campaign ends January 30, when President Roosevelt will observe his fifty-seventh birthday.

Inquiry Launched Into Poisoning of Gallinger Nurses

More than 40 Gallinger Hospital nurses were stricken with food infection following their Sunday noon meal, it was revealed last night as Health Department officials opened an investigation.

All of the hospital's 200 nurses were back on duty last night, Dr. Edgar H. Bobcock, superintendent of Gallinger, said.

Although Bureau of Preventable Diseases experts have not yet given suspected foods the required laboratory tests in an attempt to find the cause of the outbreak, officials believed chicken a la king was responsible.

The nurses were stricken 10 hours after the meal and many required treatment. It was pointed out that the chicken a la king might have become infected.

Privilege Tax In Test Today

Validity of the District business privilege tax act of 1937 will be tested in a $245 case to be argued before the Court of Appeals today.

"Retroactive, confiscatory and unconstitutional," contend Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and David G. Bress, who represent William H. Neild and J. Emerson Sauerhoff, commission merchants, in attacking the statute The merchants, partners at 1303 Water street southwest, took a writ of error from Municipal Court, where they failed to recover a tax they paid "under protest."

Girl Wife Is Slain; Md. Man Seized

By the Associated Press.

Pikesville, Md., Nov. 14.—John Tillman, 32, was held without bail today on a charge of shooting and killing his estranged wife, Mrs. Edith Tillman, 18, with a shotgun blast fired through a window of her sister's log cabin home near Reisterstown.

Baltimore County Patrolmen Francis Byrd and Edward Miller, who arrested Tillman after the shooting last night, said they found him lying on the floor of the cabin with his arms around his wife. She died in a Baltimore hospital early today.

Sign of Protest

The action of the Department of State in ordering Hugh Wilson, our Ambassador to Germany, to leave Berlin and return home "for consultation" is clearly more than a routine move.

Modern methods of communication being what they are today, it is possible for government to keep in constant and direct touch with its envoys without compelling them to leave their posts. The Government's move would thus appear to be an extraordinary one. If nothing more, it signifies the intense concern felt by the United States regarding the ghastly developments taking place in the Third Reich.

The barbarous treatment of the Jews by the Nazi regime has shocked and outraged every section of American opinion, every class and every creed. The civilized world is aghast at the spectacle of a great nation in the grip of a regime which employs tactics against a helpless minority that would shame savages.

It is certain that if the peoples and governments of the world do not make known in every legitimate and peaceful manner their abhorrence of what is going on in Nazi Germany, the Nazis will not stop with the despoliation and destruction of the Jews alone. Already the Third Reich has given indications that it is sharpening its ax for the Catholics, who may be the next victims of the Nazi terror. The peace of the world may well be endangered by such unbridled license. For this reason, even if sentimental and humanitarian considerations of the highest order are left out of account, the latest events in the Third Reich are legitimately of international concern.

In summoning Ambassador Wilson to Washington ostensibly to report on the latest German developments, the United States has given an indication that it may be prepared to take the lead in protest to Germany at the barbarities practiced with official consent on a helpless minority. It is clearly up to Great Britain and France and other civilized countries to follow this lead.

Jericho Recaptured

Once more the famous town of Jericho, ancient capital of the strange and shadowy Canaanite world, that "city of palm trees" promised by the Lord to the seed of Abraham, has fallen to a besieger. On Sunday the Coldstream Guards and the Black Watch recaptured Jericho more easily, even, than when

"Go blow dem ram horns," Joshua cried.
" 'Case de battle am in my han'. "

It took seven days of trying before the concerted blasts from the shofars, trumpets and the massed lungs of Israel made "de walls come tumblin' down." But day before yesterday, after a little aerial demonstration, the British walked in and took it almost without resistance from the insurgent Arabs, who had been holding it for a week. As was written of old of the Kings of Gideon, the hearts of the Moslems seem to have "melted within them" at the sight of the troops and tanks pouring down from the hills of Moab.

In the long and restless history of the Holy Land Jericho has had both a symbolic and strategic importance. It was in the plain of Jericho, "the land that floweth with milk and honey," that the long exodus from Egypt came to an end. It was there, after the conquest of the city by Joshua, that the foundations of an Israelite state were laid. And on this same plain the state was destroyed when the hosts of Nebuchadnezzar put to rout the Israelite army and led King Zedekiah in chains of brass to Babylon.

Since that sad day of Jewish history many another army has occupied the plain of Jericho. Pompey's legions camped there, and, just before the diaspora, the legions of Vespasian. Centuries later the Crusaders were quick to learn that whoever would hold Jerusalem must also hold Jericho. And on February 21, 1918, Gen. Allenby's troops consolidated their conquest of the Holy City by the capture of Jericho.

So once again the famous road from Jerusalem to Jericho appears to be open and guarded. And to that extent, at least, the prospect of peace in Palestine has been advanced. Certainly, too, there is a happy symbol in the thought that this road is the scene of the Gospel story which points the lesson so badly needed in our troubled world—the brotherhood that binds together Jew and Gentile.

Rules Of Fair Play

In the excitement over the elections and the disturbing events abroad during recent months the public has almost entirely overlooked a vital domestic issue which appears to be shaping up for action at the next session of Congress. It involves judicial review of the decisions and orders of the Government's numerous administrative agencies. On its face the controversy may appear to hold little interest for the average citizen. Actually it involves the preservation of civil rights as well as the efficiency of governmental agencies closely allied to the welfare of the people.

On one side of the dispute is the American Bar Association, which last July denounced the procedure of some Federal commissions as "administrative absolutism." On the other side are various Government attorneys and spokesmen for the so-called independent agencies. The latest denunciation of the bar association's attitude has come from Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The bar association attacked the problem from the viewpoint of preserving the rudiments of fair play in the administration of far-reaching regulatory laws. It called attention to the confusion of procedure now followed, and emphasized the cases in which arbitrary official conduct has replaced the concept of "due process of law." A bar association committee drafted a remedial bill requiring administrative agencies to adopt within a year rules and regulations implementing all statutes enforced by them wherever those acts affect persons or property. The courts would be authorized to set aside such rules if they should be found incompatible with the Constitution or the law under which they are issued.

Mr. Frank takes the opposite approach. Administrative rules must be flexible, he insists, to avoid paralysis of both Government and regulated business. He goes so far as to suggest that the purpose of the bill under study by the bar association is "to paralyze administrative government—with the intent of thus destroying it."

There will be general agreement with Mr. Frank that our economic system must not be subjected to straitjacket rules. Indeed, that point was emphatically made in Dean Pound's report to the bar association which Mr. Frank attacks.

Mr. Frank made the bar committee's bill appear ridiculous largely because he misrepresented it. For example, he declared that the bill would have forced the SEC "to adopt regulations, good or bad, wise or unwise, despite the absence of adequate data on which to base regulations, and without proper opportunity for consultation with the industry to be regulated." On the contrary, the bill provides that commissions should adopt rules "after publication of notice to and hearing interested parties." One of its primary purposes is to prevent the adoption of rules by officials without adequate consideration of an industry's problems.

The intent of the bill is not to make administrative rules static, as Mr. Frank seems to think. It specifically provides that "such rules and regulations may be amended from time to time with the approval of the President." The objective is only to prevent arbitrary rule making—to give the public a chance to know how officials interpret the law before it is applied.

Mr. Frank's blanket defense of administrative agencies was particularly weak because he repeatedly used the SEC as an example. It is well known that the SEC has been tactful and wise in its application of difficult statutes. Other New Deal agencies have been less so, as the Supreme Court recently found.

No doubt the bill being studied by the bar association will undergo many changes before it is enacted. But its objective is undoubtedly sound. There is an urgent need for regularization of rule making and administrative procedure. To permit numerous agencies to continue following their own inclinations in this delicate field would lead only to chaos. Business is dynamic, as Mr. Frank says, but the rules of fair play remain the same from year to year. The need for flexibility in regulation of private enterprise does not justify enroachment by any agency upon the Bill of Rights.

Shift In AAA Policy?

Secretary Wallace continues to talk about his "two-price" plan for increasing the consumption of agricultural commodities. But practical application of this latest by-product of the AAA seems to be making no progress. There is good reason to conclude that it was doomed by last week's elections.

At the ballot box the corn and wheat belts expressed their dissatisfaction with the AAA program in emphatic terms. There was not the slightest indication of welcome for a new experiment which appears even more dubious than crop curtailment and price-pegging through Government loans. By inviting the new Congressmen from the Middle West to submit their plans for improvement of the outlook for farmers, Mr. Wallace gives rise to an impression that he is willing to let the "two-price" idea die a natural death.

It is significant that last week's conference on ways and means of increasing cotton consumption kept aloof from the "two-price" plan. Representatives of the cotton textile industry attending the conference were frankly skeptical of Secretary Wallace's latest proposal. Department of Agriculture officials assured the manufacturers that the surplus cotton problem is being attacked by a different approach. Their present objective is to move a larger volume of cotton into consumption through the manufacture of such products as mattresses, without interfering with the regular channels of trade.

Details of this plan are yet to be worked out by expert committees representing the industry as well as the department. They may or may not evolve into a practical arrangement for stimulation of cotton consumption. But at least the approach is constructive. Representatives of Government and industry have been given an opportunity to study the problem together in all its aspects. If this policy is followed in dealing with other surplus commodities there will not be much danger of inaugurating expedients that would lead toward further ill-judged experimentation.

The U. S. At Lima

The delegation which President Roosevelt has named to represent the United States at the Lima conference next month is of extraordinarily high caliber. Composed of seasoned experts and qualified laymen, it will enable this Nation to put its best foot forward at a parley whose importance to us and to the other republics of this hemisphere has been enormously accentuated by recent world events.

Headed by Secretary Hull, whose foreign policy has met with Latin America's enthusiastic approval, the delegation includes Department of State officials, diplomats, experts on international law and representatives of both of the major American labor organizations. Included also is the chief justice of the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico, which is not only a tribute to the character and ability of Emilio del Toro Cuevas but is also a recognition of the fact that one corner of the American domain is Latin American in origin and culture.

It was an inspiration on Mr. Roosevelt's part to have named to the delegation his defeated Republican opponent for the Presidency in 1936. The presence of former Gov. Alfred M. Landon emphasizes the fact that politics ends at the water's edge, that in the matter of foreign relations there are no Democrats or Republicans but only Americans. In a very real sense, therefore, the United States will be represented at Lima not as a government but as a Nation, and above all a united Nation.

Mary Mallon

A few inches of type in Sunday's obituary columns recorded the death and burial of a woman who, if we dare still believe in justice, was greviously wronged by her fate. Her name was Mary Mallon and a generation ago her cause celebre was a favorite meat of Sunday supplement editors.

For the first 30-odd years of her life—about which, however, nobody but herself ever knew very much—Mary Mallon lived as a decent, self-respecting human being, as indeed, had she been born, say, 50 years earlier, she might have lived and died. She was a tidy, capable, honest and industrious domestic servant—one of those "jewels" for which housewives search so sedulously. She was as ignorant as her employers of the queer bacteriological circumstance that made her more of a menace to society than the worst of criminals. But wherever she went she brought sickness and sometimes death.

It was Dr. S. Josephine Baker, a New York health officer, who, after sanitary authorities had matched one strange coincidence with another, became Mary Mallon's nemesis, and who succeeded in getting her officially labeled as a distributor of the dread bacilli typhosi. Accordingly, Mary Mallon became a life prisoner of science in a hospital on a lonely island in the East River not far from Hell Gate. Because she was the first identified American carrier, the newspapers tagged her with the miserable name of "Typhoid Mary."

Once, to be sure, Mary Mallon was released after certain pledges. But presently the temptation to earn a living at her old trade of cook became too strong to resist and two terrible outbreaks followed. Again Dr. Baker tracked her down. It is not strange that all this hounding, imprisonment and unkindly publicity should for a time have warped Mary Mallon's personality.

But ultimately, to the great credit of human nature, which now stands in some need of it, she accepted her fearful fate, not with passivity, but with great courage and grace. As an aging woman she trained herself to become an efficient worker in the hospital laboratory. The city gave her small salary and a cottage on the island in which she lived until she was brought to bed six years ago by a stroke.

Now Mary Mallon is where she will never cause anyone to sicken or die. May she find there the freedom that life denied her.

Every moving part about an automobile should be well oiled except the nut at the steering wheel.

The Pedestrian Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily agree with the opinions recently expressed by Mr. Reed in his letter entitled, "Control the Killers." Let us first make an honest attempt to enforce the present rules for drivers before embarking on a crusade against jay-walkers.

Why need there be so much confusion in the handling of our traffic problem? If Providence and San Diego can reduce the pedestrian death toll to almost zero, so can we. The system those cities employed with such amazing success is not a carefully guarded secret. It is available to every community.

In any humane traffic system the pedestrian will be granted absolute right of way. Why should a selfish and inconsiderate motorist be permitted to step on the gas the instant the light changes, while he honks his horn menacingly and proceeds to plow right through groups of helpless pedestrians trying frantically to scurry to safety but cut off from advance or retreat by onrushing lines of cars?

In the meantime, immediate attention should be given to the problem of improving our system of traffic lights. These are apparently now designed solely for the convenience of the driver. A pedestrian proceeding along the left-hand side of a street will find no traffic light or walk signal facing him when he reaches a corner. At intersections where traffic on one side of the street alternates with traffic on the other, as at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, the situation is particularly confusing and undoubtedly is responsible for many accidents to pedestrians. The time to act is now. Conferences and orations can come later.

Daffodils

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not being a newspaperman, it is easy for me to admit that I don't know everything. And like all timid citizens, I know what the law forbids but am not sure what it permits. Therefore, I'll ask you smarties on The Post this question: Does the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press give slap-happy news writers the right to publish such obvious fiction as that story about the Quantico Marines fearfully weeping and praying because the Marines believed Martians were attacking the earth? Personally, I don't think that the United States Constitution permits a gang of long-haired, pencil-pushing jerks to palm off such trash on the American public. But if it does, it is unfair and I say, amend the Constitution!

It is common knowledge that the ultimate ambition of all the daffodils known as "newspapermen" is to strut around in English drape suits and write fiction. Although I agree that even such daffodils as they, a have a right to ambitions, nevertheless, it is my opinion that they, too, should be compelled to follow the straight and narrow in the pursuit of slappiness—beg pardon—happiness. The fact that they use legal means to attain 50 per cent of their ambition does not justify their using false pretenses to attain the other half. So, while the convenient ten-payment plan legally gratifies their drape suit desire, the selling of fairy tales under the guise of news for the purpose of taking pennies from the public, is wrong. And I think the G-men should be informed about it.

JOHN J. COGAVIN.

The Jefferson Memorial Scheme

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "False pretenses" is a mild phrase for the insufferable deceptions by which the scheme to fill up the Tidal Basin with concrete and cement in the name of a memorial to Thomas Jefferson has been foisted upon Washington.

Not within memory has any public project, and one that so vitally concerns so many, been covertly promoted by such flagrant misrepresentation and misinformation. Clamor of public denunciation last spring was stilled by bland assurances that the present location and plans for the controversial Jefferson Memorial meant no destruction of trees and no change in the present lovely contours of the Tidal Basin.

Now within a week of the opening of bids we have sprung upon us admission of representatives of the National Parks Service that not only numerous cherry trees but also 128 50-year-old elms are to be destroyed, to make way for seven miles of cast concrete piles and nearly five miles of caissons as a mere preliminary to the foundations of this masonry octopus.

Mr. C. Marshall Finnan favors us with the hope that perhaps the holly trees will be spared. How did they come to be overlooked? The space occupied by one holly tree could well and lucratively be filled with one more concrete pillar, thus adding just that much more to the profits of this pork-barrel project, for that whole affair is nothing but pork, and with practically unlimited gravy, has become too evident to be longer obscured.

The Tidal Basin site provides the biggest sink hole possible to fill with masonry—90 feet down to strike bedrock—hence the implacable determination on the part of its sponsors to have this site and none other, when 50 more suitable locations were suggested and available.

Those who have closely followed this whole disgraceful affair are more than outraged, they are angry. I venture to predict that if public opinion is flouted to the extent of actually jamming through this misguided enterprise, there will be started political repercussions that may work to the discredit of the entire present Administration.

Already the question is being freely asked just what individuals inside the public service are so flagrantly betraying their trust that they are willing to deliver over our public park system to be exploited by cement firms and steam shovel contractors.

That much of the Government's spending has been wasteful and worse than useless has long been apparent, as for instance the so-called "Parks Rehabilitation Program" which resulted in the virtual ruin of Lafayette Square and other local parks, at an expense of $2,000,000. But nothing quite so shameless as the Tidal Basin scheme has so far been put over.

This thing can still be stopped. Mr. Frederic A. Delano is chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and he presumably has the ear of the President.

Mr. Arno B. Cammerer apparently occupies an important strategic position. Mr. Cammerer is vice chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning as well as executive agent of the Memorial Commission as well as director of the National Parks Service. The chairman of the Fine Arts Commission also has jurisdiction.

Let these gentlemen call at once upon their respective bodies to revoke their approval of the Tidal Basin site.

MRS. CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.

Housing in Puerto Rico

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read a letter in The Post for November 11 in which Mr. James Christy attempts a defense of PRRA housing projects in Puerto Rico that seems to me to beg the original question. A previous letter writer had pointed out that Federal Housing projects in Puerto Rico have not cleared a single slum and it is doubtful if more than a single slum family has been removed to any of these structures. The failure of the projects is recognized by the Federal Housing Administration that has entrusted future slum clearance activities to the insular government and to the municipalities.

All that Mr. Christy says of the magnificence of the resettlement projects is true and if is on that score that they have missed their target completely. They are attractive buildings and pleasing suburbs but erected at a cost and of materials that places them beyond the range of the people in a low income field who need them most. While declaiming about rising living standards and improving housing conditions PRRA officials have neglected to recognize the fact that such adjustments are not made overnight. By the time living and wage standards raise the slum dwellers to appreciation of the refinements and beauties of PRRA housing, the buildings and settlements will be old and out of date.

The people who ocupy these buildings are very fortunate and it is true that their living scale is much improved. But they are not slum dwellers. I happen to know two school teachers who have qualified for resettlement quarters in one of these areas, and American school teachers resident in Puerto Rico have salaries of $100 a month. I am not familiar with the procedure outlined for the benefit of prospective tenants, but I do know two or three people have edged their way in by the familiar and well-worn political path.

Mr. Christy does well to spring to the defense of his organization. It is being severely criticized and the demand of the hour is for some one qualified to laugh off the failure of PRRA slum clearance projects that do not clear slums.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I, a simple hand laborer, ask you for a few lines in your paper? I am a bricklayer, born in Hamburg, Germany, of Christian parents. I want to declare publicly that after the latest events in Germany I feel deeply ashamed of what has happened and that I regret that my former fatherland has sunk so deep.

The Post Impressionist

Vox Voterorum

WHAT WOUNDS the New Deal suffered during the recent national skirmish is a question best left to the professional commentators who are paid to determine such matters in print and who earn their honorarium generously. Whether the Administration merely sprained its left ankle or stopped a shot one with a vital spot can better be determined in any event by the months to come.

On the day after the election Mrs. Roosevelt's newspaper diary offered a cooling hand for the rational fevered brow, and wise and kindly dressing for the wounds of the political casuals who limped off the field. It was kindly, it was not overt and it was done with the Christian anonymity and nonpartisanship of the professional nurse. If I were Frank Murphy or Tom Dewey or any one of many deserving men who emerged mangled from the voting machines last Tuesday night, I would hope that Mrs. Roosevelt in one of her "Days" would find time and space to speak a few words of comfort to my bruised and wounded ambitions. This Nation has no wound binder so deft.

But I should think Messrs. Murphy and Dewey and Earle, and the other boys lying on cots in the base hospitals, would be disturbed to find Mrs. Roosevelt bothering her gracious head over the well-known vagaries of the American electorate.

"It is difficult," she says, "to understand some of the things which happened. For instance, in California the amendment for which Mr. Downey stood was voted down, but Mr. Downey was elected. In North Dakota the amendment for a $4 pension was passed, but its author was defeated."

It is disheartening to see the sangfroid of one who has walked for six years in the thick of battle, unscathed as the bullets whine by, threatened by a bullet fired from so puny a popgun as the vagaries of the American voter. This popgun is a traditional national toy. It's likely to go off on any election day at any point between the Atlantic and Pacific and Canada and the Gulf of Mexico, with results which may be astounding if one retains the childlike capability of being astounded by such phenomena.

Long ere this experience should have forearmed us against being surprised or abashed at anything the American people, or any segment of them, do at the polls. We should know that only the incredible is credible. It is this factor which can and does, if we remember it, explain so many phenomena which otherwise are inexplicable.

If an Ambassador to the Court of St. James speaks out of turn, we rationalize for him and say, "Oh, well, it is the fogs they have over there, or the Cliveden set. Didn't George Harvey wear buckles or something?"

If immigration officials detain Santa Claus at Ellis Island over Christmas on grounds of communistic turpitude, we find excuse for them, too. We say probably Mr. Chamberlain, for reasons of his own, has quietly asked the State Department to keep Santa Claus out of this country and we tolerantly concede that there's no sense in putting such a strain on the harassed British Empah.

If the University of Oldpotato pays its president $5,000 a year and its football coach $25,000 a year, we say, "After all, a college has to advertise."

The truth of the matter, however, is that the blame lies not with the fogs or the Cliveden set, not with the sotto voce commands of Mr. Chamberlain, not even with that uneducable ogre—publicity.

Divest the Ambassador of the habiliments of his ambassadorship, strip the badge from the breasts of the immigration officials, take back from the college regents the portfolio of their regency, and what have you left?

I say that in every case you have an American voter staring wide-eyed at you. Under the ambassadorial ribbons, under the immigration badges, under the academic gowns are the naked, authentic voces populi Americani in person.

If 96 Senators tomorrow were to parade down Pennsylvania avenue, walking on their hands, if John Lewis and Bill Green should rent a flat in Georgetown and quietly spend the remainder of their laborious lives in amicable and admiring contemplation of each other's visages, no one need be surprised, if he will only remember that these men, too, however exalted, are American voters.

The American voter can and, by the grace of God, will do anything under the sun which it occurs to him as a free citizen to do. If he wants to charge the moon and the stars admission for looking at the United States of nights, there can be no reason to doubt that he will pass a law fixing the price with luxury tax thrown in.

It is because I have a tremendous liking for Mrs. Roosevelt that I grieve to see her pondering the imponderable. Had I political wounds to be healed, I would limp out into the night and flag down her train as it thundered across the continent to San Diego or Walla Walla or Tucson. At some little way station known only to God and those who call it their native heath, I know we should meet. A few kind, wise words would be spoken and the pain in my political sinews would be eased. I would cast away my crutches and stamp back into the arena.

I think if Mrs. Roosevelt should run for a third term as First Lady, she would far outdistance her ticket. Her election might be unanimous. Certainly I should vote for her. But stop. Would she be elected? Would even I vote for her? Because it would be so eminently sane and sensible a thing to do, I doubt that it would be done.

Plea Of Guilty

NOBODY APPRECIATES the doctor's service to mankind more than your correspondent, but this essay will admit that the defense of the profession in the case of the Philadelphia woman who bore a baby unattended after several doctors had declined to assist, sounds more like a plea of guilty than vindication.

PEGLER

Several professional bleeding hearts broke down and bawled over the tragedy of this rather celebrated mishap, not in honest sympathy for the unfortunate woman and the pair, but in propaganda for collective medicine. The American Medical Association investigated, and now presents its own account of the case with a note of satisfaction which is not justified by the facts.

The account says: "Sunday morning, October 22, at 7 o'clock, the patient was delivered of a six or seven months' still-birth at a rooming house to which she went only about an hour before. Her home address is not known, and she was in labor on arrival at the rooming house.

"SHE HAD PREVIOUSLY been taken to two hospitals by a roomer and had been examined and refused admission because she was not registered in either as a patient. One of the roomers called the sergeant at the police station, who failed to call the district physician because he said he did not wish to disturb him on Sunday. The roomer then tried to reach five different doctors in the neighborhood. The first was taking a bath, and when he answered the doorbell no one was there. He reported that he had not taken care of an obstetrics case in 30 years.

"The second doctor, a specialist in diseases of the eye, was asleep and did not answer the doorbell. The third does not practice obstetrics but offered to send an ambulance. This offer was refused. The sergeant telephoned a hospital, and the assistant chief resident offered to call on the woman if the police would send a car. On his arrival he found the patient and the dead infant. He administered treatment and left instructions to call the hospital if further treatment was necessary.

"THE PATIENT REFUSED to answer questions, made no statements and disappeared one week later. It appears that there are ten hospitals within a distance of from three blocks to one and one-half miles from the place in which this delivery occurred."

Well, now, in the first place, the author of this writ apparently can't even count, much less compose a coherent, journalistic statement. He says the roomer tried to reach five doctors but fades into static after telling of the third man's offer to "send an ambulance."

The meaning of that offer is not made clear, but the patient and the friend who was trying to promote a little human kindness at that hour of Sunday morning cannot be blamed for regarding it as just another stall. She already had been examined at two hospitals and refused admittance because she was not registered as a patient, which seems a cold-blooded excuse for turning into the street a woman who obviously was an emergency case.

ON THE FACE of this account it is necessary to exonerate the so-called district physician and pass the buck to the sergeant. The next man, the one who was taking a bath, vindicates himself easily, but the stipulation that he hadn't taken an obstetrics case in 30 years indicates a false attitude. What difference would that make? Kid internes handle such tasks, and even policemen have been known to meet emergencies of this kind in New York.

A doctor is a doctor, and a preference for localized practice would not impress laymen as an excuse for refusal of emergency help to a stricken human being. The next also "does not practice obstetrics," a fact which may be ignored as of no value, but he was asleep, and apparently sleeps very soundly. The one who offered to send the ambulance doesn't take advantage of the opportunity to do himself justice. He doesn't explain why, in this critical moment, he didn't go himself, and the layman is left to suspect that the ambulance service might have found excuses for delay or refusal, considering the cold indifference which the woman encountered at the two hospitals

PEOPLE DO IMPOSE heartlessly on doctors. This woman had an obligation to make inquiries and arrangements months before. While she was having this wretched experience a lot of habitual indigents far and wide in this country were calling out ambulance doctors to treat them for drunkenness, wakefulness, worry and the itch. But the journal of the A. M. A. hasn't exonerated the profession in this case. By the journal's own account it was a miserable incident, with strong indications of heartlessness at the two hospitals where a mere paper-work formality excluded a desperate penniless person.

Pedestrian Protest

More Letters On The Traffic Problem

Enforce Existing Rules

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to current discussions in the press and in local District associations regarding further traffic rules to restrain pedestrains, many people believe that in numerous cases the safest point to cross the street is in the middle of the block where the walker has only to look first to the left and then to the right to see if his way is clear. This esteemed way of crossing it is proposed to prohibit. There is no real safety in crossing on the green light at corners because many motorists making a turn offer no pretense of yielding the right of way to walkers as the rule requires, and the police make little or no effort to enforce the rules.

Not a few persons of both sexes are natural bullies and these find opportunities of gratifying their brutality by charging into foot traffic at the corners and trusting to the walkers' dread of injury to have their lawless way. In case of collision, it is the walker who always pays a physical penalty. If he is made legally liable also, selfish motorists will feel themselves released from all responsibility and accidents will increase.

We do not now need additonal rules, but enforcement of existing ones. After the police have showed themselves willing and able to enforce the present rules against motorists at corners—then and not until then, will it be worth while to think of enacting new rules applying to walkers. Additional unenforced rules are futile, and there is now no reason to think that any new ones will be better enforced than existing ones. Let the police and the public show what it is possible to do with the rules we now have, as a first step to betterment.

The Mars-Eye View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I were one of the Martians who landed in New Jersey Sunday, October 30, I should, after reading The Washington Post, conclude it was pedestrians and children that cause traffic deaths and injuries. Therefore I would say they should be chained in cellars. This would cause a notable drop in the number of deaths from automobiles.

I would read that a police official had recommended taking children's toys away from them as a safety measure. I would also read that taxi drivers and truck drivers had been politely asked to drive with care. The laws here it would seem do not compel them to drive sanely. I would read that everybody had instructed everybody else to be careful. Through education by The Post, children would warn parents to be careful, parents would warn children, traffic experts would warn pedestrians, etc.

I would find out by experience that it is almost impossible to cross the streets with a green light, because of automobiles and trolley cars that turn left and right on green. After the turners are around it leaves hardly time to get half way across and stranded in the middle of Washington's wide streets.

In one of the most congested cities in the United States a yellow traffic light is shown all around for pedestrians, protecting them from turners and giving time to cross the street. Such a light is needed here, with cars inclining toward the crossing, and rocking back and forth in gear ready to leap ahead at the first sign of a changing light.

Some time ago signs reading "no left turn" were placed at Maryland avenue and Seventh street southwest. Nobody seems to pay any attention to them. I ride to work every morning in a taxi, 9 out of 10 drivers ignore the signs, maybe with some funny remark about it being too foggy to see.

The only plan that will cause a definite drop in traffic accidents is the strict enforcement of, at least, existing traffic laws. I guess that is the only plan that has not been tried as yet. (I have driven a car since 1908.) J. E. C.

Washington, Nov. 1.

'Go Home And Stay Home'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why must there be pedestrians and children? They have been outmoded long ago, for they date back before the horse and buggy days. Besides they clutter up the streets and avenues, slowing down the wheels of vehicles and sometimes even stopping them. Why not outlaw them once and for all? Go home and stay, I should, where you belong.

Such is the impatience with which the average motorist has for pedestrians and children, or anything which moves at a lesser speed than 45 miles per. Yet how many motorists do not infringe upon the rights of pedestrians? Few it will be found, if one will just make a note of the numerous violations at any busy corner.

Ever hear of Rule 4? This rule states that upon entering a public highway from an alley or private driveway driver shall stop and then yield the right of way to pedestrians crossing on the sidewalk. Most motorists stop on the sidewalk, necessitating either going out into the street or going behind the vehicle, if one does not want to wait until the traffic has cleared sufficiently for the driver to pass on. Sometimes it is impossible to get around and one is forced to wait.

If motorists are acquainted with Rule 17, one would never guess it after crossing a few intersections. Yet this is one of the questions asked on the examination for a driver's permit. Another rule reads "Upon approaching 'Stop' sign come to complete stop before crossing the crosswalk area," etc. Yet motorists continually go beyond the white line, causing pedestrians to enter the traffic region in order to cross the intersection.

It is just as important that pedestrians make time or to arrive at their offices or destinations as motorists, yet who are unjustly delayed. Often in a rain, one must wait until a long line of vehicles has made right-hand turns, and by the time they have all passed the light has changed to red.

A. SMITH.

Washington, Nov. 10.

Why Blame The Walker?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must protest against the continual disposition on the part of the officials, as reflected in the daily press, with respect to the traffic situation. To blame the unprotected pedestrian for all the fatalities that occur in Washington is not only unjust but is not supported by the facts. Under the present regulations the pedestrian has no protection whatsoever.

I must of necessity cross the streets four or five times each day at the intersections of Connecticut avenue and K, and Seventeenth and I. If one will stand at those intersections and observe the hazards the pedestrian must undergo to get from one curb to the other, he would be less inclined to levy all the blame on the unprotected walker. On numerous occasions I have personally barely escaped serious, if not fatal, injury by being caught in the middle of the stream of automobiles coming from the right and left, although the lights favored my crossing when I started.

One must have more eyes than a spider to see all the hazards at one time. In addition, under present regulations, not infrequently one must wait on the curb until the right and left traffic has passed, by which time the lights have changed and he must wait for another opportunity. In many of the large cities in the United States which I have visited the pedestrian has the absolute right of way when his time comes to cross. I would particularly refer to the regulations in Cincinnati and San Francisco.

As one who offers a special prayer each time he reaches the opposite curb, in behalf of many hundred thousand similarly situated, I must protest against the disposition that seems to exist in favor of the automobile.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Pair Of Winged Horses And The Charioteer

THE QUESTION has long been discussed by philosophers as to whether malevolence, that is to say the disposition to bring pain and misery to others or to take pleasure in it, can ever be disinterested. Francis Hutcheson, who was professor of moral philosophy at Glasgow during the second quarter of the eighteenth century, thought that "human nature seems scarce capable of malicious disinterested hatred, or a sedate delight in the misery of others," and the late F. H. Bradley, of Merton College, Oxford, argued that malevolence, which could not be denied as a fact, should be ascribed to excitement, the love of power or to self-assertion. But his contemporary, Alexander Bain, who was professor at Aberdeen, took the other view, and insisted that "the abundance of examples of delight in mischief of the most absolutely gratuitous kind, beginning in tender years and continuing more or less until maturity," indicate that there is such a thing as "the pleasure of malevolence."

LIPPMANN.

But if thoughtful men have differed about the psychological springs of malevolence, there has been no difference of opinion among the great teachers of the western world that there is in human nature a disposition to evil, that government is not government which cannot restrain it, and that religion is satanic that does not seek incessantly to overcome it. Long ago Plato fixed the image of man's moral problem as that of a charioteer who drives a pair of winged horses: "One of them is noble and of noble breed, the other is ignoble and of ignoble breed." And living as he did in an age of disaster and disorder, Plato added that "the driving of them of necessity gives a great deal of trouble to the charioteer."

HE PERHAPS had seen what we have seen, the use of civil authority to arouse the disposition to kill, to maim, to plunder rather than to subdue and control these lusts. For he, too, lived in an age of revolution, and this is the very essence of revolution. For whatever the outward and temporary appearances of order and even of splendor, the certain sign that a people is in the grip of revolution is that government and what passes for the official religion surrender to, cultivate and then use for their own purposes the slumbering barbarian in man's nature.

For it is only a revolutionary government that can, and by its own inexorable logic must, organize the primitive lusts of mankind into methodical violence. Left to themselves, the resentments and hatreds of men are fitful, soon sated, and quickly regretted. But revolutionary governments cannot maintain themselves for long if they permit the normal instincts for decency to reassert themselves. For revolutionary dictatorships are so entirely abnormal, are so alien to the lasting interests and ideals of all civilized men, that they can prolong their existence only by an ever-growing intensification of violence.

THIS NECESSITY can be observed in all the great social revolutions of modern times, particularly the French, the Russian, and the German. Deep social revolutions such as these, it should be said in passing, must not be confused with political revolutions which merely change the form of government and the personnel of the governors—with revolutions like our own in 1776, or like most of the revolutions of Latin America during the past generation, perhaps not even, though this is still debatable, with the Italian revolution under Mussolini. A deep social revolution is one which destroys the whole structure of a society, and raises to power a faction of men who regard themselves as the mortal enemies of the regime and of the civilized tradition which preceded theirs.

These men live in perpetual terror of their very lives for they know that they can never be trusted by all the people they have dispossessed and conquered. How intense is the fear of a dictator has been shown in recent years by the systematic and ferocious killing to which Stalin resorted after the assassination of one of his henchmen. For however large and efficient the police, the members of a despotic regime can never feel entirely secure against the assassin who is willing to spend his own life. Therefore, methodical terrorism and cruelty so great that the very report of it will cow men and break their spirits, seem the only protection. Thus one of the classic methods of dealing with a mutinous army was to select every tenth man by lot and execute him. It was known as decimation, and its efficiency was supposed to lie in the very fact that by making no distinction between the guilty and the innocent, the general terror was all the greater.

BUT THAT IS NOT the only reason why revolutionary dictatorships proceed to these extremes of violence. Continually they must provide places for their own supporters, and once the original revolutionists have installed themselves in all the desirable offices, the young men who follow them soon grow up. Places have to be found for them, or the second wave of the revolution will engulf the aging veterans. At this point the revolutionary dictatorship is in danger unless it can open up new posts of command by foreign conquests and by dispossessing some part of the population at home. In Russia this has been done by slaughtering the old Bolsheviks and by deporting millions of farmers, independently minded workmen and middle class officials, managers and professional men to work at forced labor in the empty spaces of the Russian continent. In Germany it began with the expropriation of the Jews and if the manifestations against the Catholic hierarchy mean what they appear to mean, will soon find a new world to conquer.

These expropriations not only open up patronage for the younger men of the revolutionary party; they also provide the party with funds of which a dictatorship is always in need because of its inordinately unproductive expenditures. All property which does not serve the immediate purposes of the dictatorship is in principle subject to confiscation. But the property which it is most desirable to confiscate is, of course, the property of those who, having been wronged by the regime, are hated as men hate only those whom they have wronged, and then the property of those who, because they can never in their hearts accept the regime, will always provide points of resistance to it.

THUS IF WE STUDY the thing, seeking to understand what we are unable to prevent, we see that in the madness there is method.

Third Party Hopes Fade

By Mark Sullivan

LaGuardia Shrewd

OF DEVELOPMENTS following the election, one of the most interesting is the step taken by Mayor LaGuardia of New York. He has announced he will hold conferences with persons of like mind to his own, persons whom the Mayor calls progressives, but including many that others think of as radicals. The gesture looks in the direction of a third party.

SULLIVAN

Superficially, this seems strange; but it is shrewd. It may be a shrewdness born of desperation, but from the mayor's point of view it is still shrewd.

Superficially, conditions seem less promising for a third party than at any time during our long, two-party history. For third parties, last election day was the time of the big wind. Everywhere, the elections went against them.

In Wisconsin, there is a third party, the La Follette's, which, one way or another, has had an independent existence for practically 40 years. At first, it was a dissident branch of the Republican Party. Later, it took on formally the status of a separate party, the Progressive Party. Still later, a little over a year ago, the La Follettes ambitiously expanded it still farther. They organized it as the National Progressive Party and announced they would set up tickets in all the States.

THIS STEP BY THE La Follettes was taken soon after President Roosevelt suffered his reverse in connection with his court proposal. Common surmise felt that the La Follettes looked forward to a break-up of the Democratic Party and that they hoped to be heirs to the liberal and radical wing of the Democrats.

But the National Progressive Party did not prosper. The ambition to set up tickets in all the States was realized in only a very few, and unimportantly. Then, last week, the party was defeated in its home State. The Republicans won every office.

In Minnesota there was another third party, the Farmer-Labor. For some 20 years it has been sending Senators and Representatives to Congress and electing Governors. It spread into nearby States. It has the favor of President Roosevelt. In 1936 and again just preceding the recent election, Mr. Roosevelt took steps designed to help it. But in the election last week the Farmer-Labor Party suffered a set-back much like that of the La Follettes' National Progressive Party.

THERE IS ANOTHER third party. It is called the American Labor Party. Its existence is mainly in New York City, to some extent in the State. Outside New York it has little or no substance. It is to this third party that Mayor LaGuardia adheres. So far as the mayor's activity looks toward a third party, it is the American Labor Party that is likely to be the beneficiary of his movement.

Between the American Labor Party and the other third parties there is a distinction. The others, the National Progressive Party and the Farmer-Labor Party, aimed to have the same kind of status as the two old parties. They aimed to be major parties with tickets of their own wherever they could set them up, ultimately in every State in the Nation.

The American Labor Party, on the other hand, has followed a different tactic. In the main they have nominated few separate candidates of their own. Their strategy has been to indorse candidates of either the Democratic or Republican Party, whichever at the time would best serve the American Labor Party's objectives.

Thus, the American Labor Party seems to aim to be not an independent third party but a so-to-speak balance-of-power party. They aim to throw their strength to whichever of the two old parties most conforms to their wishes.

HEREIN SEEMS to lie Mayor LaGuardia's political acumen. One can see a real possibility of his making the American Labor Party into a group which, in the 1940 Presidential election, will throw its strength to whichever of the two parties will, in its platform and candidates, bid highest for the American Labor Party's support.

The move would be shrewd. The American Labor Party seems to have in New York something approaching half a million votes. This half million votes might swing the 1940 Presidential election in New York. And by swinging New York it might swing the national election. One can imagine Mr. LaGuardia reasoning thus: As goes the American Labor Party, so goes New York State; and as goes New York State, so goes the Nation. For this course of thinking there is much support. In every Presidential election for 50 years, except one, New York State was decisive. If you add up the electoral votes of all the States carried by the Republicans last week, and then add to this the electoral vote of New York, the sum would be the majority that would elect a President.

The World Protests

By Barnet Nover

Can Hitler's Hand Be Stayed?

REPORTS from London suggest that the revulsion of feeling in Great Britain against the Nazis, because of the ghastly treatment of the Jews, may make it impossible for the Chamberlain government to continue its so-called policy of appeasement toward the Third Reich.

This flare-up of public sentiment in the British Isles does credit to the British people. It shows that they, like the people of the United States and the peoples of other civilized lands, have not become wholly callous to manifestations of brutality and barbarism. It shows, too, that the "nonconformist conscience," which has played so significant a part in British history, is still at work.

If, however, the British people believe that British opinion alone can turn Hitler from the path of persecution of Jews, Catholics and other groups that have incurred his wrath or may do so, they are flying in the face of history.

FOR PRACTICAL reasons not unconnected with the fact that to do so might mean his and his government's political doom, Neville Chamberlain has never admitted to the British people that the Munich accord was a surrender. He has cought to coat the bitter pill with the sugary hope that Munich would mark a new and happy state in European relations with the four great powers, two democratic and two totalitarian, henceforth acting as equal partners in a great enterprise of peace. On that basis he could convience himself and seek to convince the British people that any further concessions—colonies, for instance—would be voluntary on Britain's part and be rewarded by the gratitude and good behavior of the Third Reich.

Now the Nazis are not at all averse to having Chamberlain believe as he does and persuade the British people to that belief. But their own interpretation of Munich and what it stands for is quite different.

AS THE NAZIS see it, Munich was the victory of the strong over the weak, of the prepared over the unprepared, of a nation ready to use force to achieve its goal over nations that shrank from the possibility of a war. If, previously, they set enormous store by force and intimidation as instruments of policy, Munich only confirmed them in that attitude. And by the same token it made them more contemptuous than ever of appeals to moral standards, right conduct, humanitarianism as deterrents of ruthless national conduct.

In other words, to the extent that Great Britain, turns the other cheek, offers territorial and other concessions, speaks of appeasement and the possibility of democratic and totalitarian states living peacefully side by side, to that extent Great Britain, in the Nazi opinion, is weak. If she were not weak, the argument goes, she would not have to make any concessions for she could then employ against the Third Reich the same methods of intimidation the latter has employed against her rivals and with such conspicuous success.

WITH RESPECT to every action taken by the Nazi regime, whether within Germany or without, the criterion is force. If the attacks on the Jews in the earlier days of Hitler's rule were milder than they are today, it was because the Nazis were then not wholly certain how far they could go. The same is true of the relations between the Third Reich and the Catholic Church, the relations with confessional protestant groups, the relations with the powers.

Thus, instead of growing more moderate as successive victories were won over internal elements that the Nazis sought to conquer and crush, the Nazis have grown more virulent.

It is, therefore, no coincidence whatever that the Munich settlement should have been followed by persecution of the Jews on a scale never before attempted, even though that persecution has been continuous for more than five years. On the contrary, this development followed inevitably on the Munich victory. For, after Munich, as it appeared to the Nazis, it was far safer to ignore world opinion than it was before, because Munich had so palpably revealed the weakness of the democracies.

IN THE LONG RUN their savagery is certain to prove a boomerang. The fact that they have so repeatedly flouted world opinion and suffered no penalties does not mean that they can continue to do so indefinitely. No nation can put itself outside the pale of decent opinion as Nazi Germany has done without courting ultimate retribution. No nation ever benefits by failing to exhibit that "decent respect to the opinions of mankind" displayed by the founding fathers of our Nation.

But such considerations of ultimate results probably play no part in Nazi calculations. Force is their god. And it is not threats of the abandonment of the policy of appeasement, which they regard as a sign of weakness and decadence anyway, that will win them over to moderation. The Chamberlain policy, far from making Hitler more reasonable, has only proved to him that unreasonableness pays.

Nation's Business Advised to Invest In South America

The president of a corporation owning one of the largest privately held land tracts in the world said in his Washington office yesterday that "America's field for economic expansion lies to the south."

Jesse H. Knight, youthful head of the American Colombian Corporation, declared on the eve of departure for his company's 1,500,000-acre property in northern Colombia that "Colombia needs foreign capital."

The republic needs it so badly, he observed, that "there's no danger of expropriation or confiscation, as in Mexico, at least for 25 or 30 years." It may be another story, he suggested, after Colombian resources have been well developed.

Tokyo to Offer U. S. Share in Rebuilding Asia

Note to Be Sent Friday To Attack 9-Power Pact River Closing Defended

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Nov. 15.—Domei (Japanese news agency) said today Japan would reply Friday to the United States' protest against closing the "open door" in China with a demand for revision of "understandings respecting China made immediately after the World War."

The reference was believed to mean the 1922 Nine-Power Pact by which the signatories, including the United States and Japan, pledged respect for China's territorial integrity and the principle of the "open door."

In return, the news agency said, Japan would offer the United States an opportunity to participate in a "proposed construction of a new order in east Asia" in its reply to the American note of October 6.

Pretext Is Army Operations

The reply also would state, Domei said, that other American demands for equal opportunities cannot be accepted because of military operations in China and "natural phenomena accompanying the projected construction of a new order in east Asia."

The government yesterday rejected the protest of the United States, Great Britain and France against the closing of the Yangtze River to all but Japanese vessels.

"Although Japan has no intention of deliberately hampering commerce and navigation of the third powers in the Yangtze," a foreign office statement declared, "the Japanese government holds the view that the time has not yet arrived to warrant a general opening."

Invaders Drive on Changsha

Shanghai (Tuesday), Nov. 15 (AP).—Japanese forces pushed steadily toward Changsha, capital of Hunan province, today, mopping up straggling Chinese units along Lake Tungting and in the hills to the east.

Although Japanese naval units reported they controlled the entrance to the lake, largest in China, there was no indication Japanese warships were attempting operations there.

From Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's secret headquarters, Chinese reported rapid mobilization of Szechuan, Kwangsi, Hunan and Hupeh province troops to attempt to stop Japan's invasion of the southwestern provinces. Even some men from the primitive Maio and Lolo tribes in southwestern China were said to be joining the defenders.

Fund to Stave Off Recession Now Half Spent

The New Deal's current $1,712,905,000 emergency relief program, which may come in for a Congressional airing, passed the half-way mark just prior to last Tuesday's elections, an official Treasury report disclosed last night.

The report summarizes the status of the huge fund which Congress appropriated last June in an attempt to head off the recession. It shows that up to October 31, marking the end of the first four months of the program, participating Federal agencies had spent $883,330,475.

The Works Progress Administration, which received $1,500,000,000 topped the spending list with disbursements of $770,282,000.

G. M. C. Acts to Stabilize Weekly Pay of 150,000 Men

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr. (right), General Motors board chairman, and Charles M. Schwab, Bethlehem Steel head, are shown in New York discussing a security program which will affect 150,000 General Motors workers. The plan is intended to assure at least partial income during depressions and lay-offs wholly-owned subsidiaries within the United States. To be eligible for the income security plan, an employe must be in the employ of the corporation during December, 1938. Employes who start work any time after December 1, 1938, will be eligible for participation in the lay-off benefit plan.

Explaining the "income security plan," for five-year employes, Sloan said it would enable every eligible employe to "make his personal arrangements for a full year ahead," and added:

"The weekly guaranteed income will consist of (a) pay for the amount of work performed for the corporation; (b) pay for any other regular employment; (c) unemployment compensation; (d) an advance to be made by the corporation to insure a minimum weekly income of at least 60 per cent of standard.

"The advance by the corporation is made on the request of the employe and is payable only in terms of opportunity to work. That condition cannot be too greatly emphasized. An advance is not a liability in the ordinary sense, is payable only through work and bears no interest. When the weekly earnings exceed 60 per cent of standard, the employe will repay advances at the rate of one-half the amount by which such earnings exceed 60 per cent of standard. Should any employe die, his unpaid advances will be canceled.

"The income security plan, when declared operative for any particular year, is independent of changing business conditions."

Sloan described the plan for two-year employes as follows:

"Employes eligible (under the lay-off benefit plan) will be entitled to receive weekly 40 per cent of their standard earnings under the same general conditions as apply to the income security plan, except that the total advance made by the corporation is here limited to an amount equivalent to 72 hours' earnings at the employe's latest average hourly earned rate. Amounts so advanced will be repaid by the employe, but only in work performed, under the same conditions as apply to the income security plan."

He explained there were "the usual provisions allowing for suspension of the plans in case of fire, floods, wars, riots, strikes or other circumstances beyond the control of the corporation." Changes may be necessary, he said, since the plans are more or less experimental.

"Particular attention is called to the fact that the corporation is not guaranteeing work for which there is no need," Sloan said. "However, using the resources of the corporation as an income stabilizing factor, giving the largest group of employes possible a definite assurance of a substantial minimum weekly income for a definite period is, according to my beliefs, sound and highly desirable."

How To Hold FALSE TEETH More Firmly In Place

Do your false teeth slip, slide and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). D. C. Man Reveals He Is U. S. Agent For Gen. Cedillo

The Mexican rebel leader, Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, who is now in hiding following collapse of his revolution, has an agent in the United States, according to a registration made at the State Department yesterday under the law requiring registration of agents of foreign principals.

He is Douglas L. Cullison, office address 61 Broadway, New York City, and residence at 2138 California street northwest, Washington.

Cullison registered as the agent of the State of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, which he called a sovereign state, and Gen. Cedillo, who he said was a farmer.

He said he was employed in March, 1938, and that his compensation was a "per cent of the moneys raised."

Pope Appeals In Person on Marriage Law

Wrote to King, Duce Protest Disregarded Still Expects Accord

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Nov. 14. — Fascist Italy's prohibition of marriage between "Aryan" and "non-Aryan" Italians has opened a fresh breach between the Vatican and the Italian government.

A protest of the church against the new marriage law as a violation of the 1929 concordat was announced today along with disclosure Pope Pius himself had appealed personally to both Premier Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele in an effort, which proved futile, to forestall the legislation.

L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, in reporting the papal view spoke of the new marriage decree both as "wounding" the agreement between the church and the Italian government and as "breaking" it.

The newspaper expressed the hope, however, the new friction "over a question of principle on a matter of vital importance" could be healed by agreement.

"The august person of the holy father himself," said the newspaper, "intervened directly with two paternal, handwritten letters—one directly to the chief of government and the other to the King-Emperor.

"Notwithstanding that, new legislative dispositions have come out without agreement with the Holy See which, it is understood, with keen regret feels it a duty to express its protest as we know it already has done."

L'Osservatore indicated the Italian government might be able to patch up the differences by providing for exceptions to the marriage ban. It pointed out that in its "general and absolute prohibition" of marriage in the case of "Aryans" and "non-Aryans" the law violated canon law.

Girl Spy Suspect Blushes at Hint Of Code Omission

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—A flustered German fraulein, on trial for plotting to steal American military secrets, blushingly acknowledged in Federal court today that when she decoded secret letters found in her baggage she omitted a word indicating a close friendship with Karl Schlueter, fugitive German agent.

The German girl, Johanna ("Jenni") Hoffmann on trial with two co-defendants—Erich Glaser, 28, United States Army Air Corps private, and Otto Hermann Voss, 38, an airplane mechanic—repeatedly charged that Leon G. Turrou, former F. B. I. agent who directed the spy probe "framed" her into silence before she testified before a Federal grand jury investigating Nazi espionage plots in the United States.

She said Turrou gave her a $100 bill last May 2, telling her it came from Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, a fugitive, and that Griebl wanted her to "keep my mouth shut" when she went before the grand jury.

Turks Vote $500,000 For Ataturk's Funeral

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 14 (AP).—The National Assembly today voted $500,000 for an elaborate funeral next Monday for Kemal Ataturk, founder and first president of modern Turkey, who died Thursday.

After the funeral Ataturk's body will be placed in a museum pending construction of a mausoleum from earth and stones collected throughout the country.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

In all fairness, it should be said that the La Follette inquiry has been slanted (you might say biased) as much toward reform as the Dies inquiry is toward reaction. The big difference is that Senator La Follette is deftly at his job. His questions are shrewder, his witnesses less melodramatic, more factual. Maybe they should trade jobs for a week or two.

At a dinner where devastatingly witty Mrs. Homer Cummings was the ranking feminine guest, the dessert was Bavarian cream pudding. She took two helpings; liked it very much. It was not till later that the cook confessed that the recipe was Mrs. Cummings' own, culled from the Congressional cook-book. But the Attorney General's wife hadn't recognized it.

Capital socialites, who travel eastward more than westward, have been seeing America via the excellent Whitney exhibit of modern American paintings at the Museum of Modern Art. Maybe you couldn't see more in a 5,000-mile trip. I enjoyed watching the foreign diplomats ogle Curry's painting of a baptism in a Kansas watering trough. One of the sponsors is beauteous Mrs. George Garrett (once of Pittsburgh), one of the Capital's brilliant ladies whose I. Q. is well above that of the average Senator.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS

G. O. P. STAFF MAN.

Brilliant, resourceful Richard Sanger, youngest of the Republican skull squad, here which averages only 37 years, is a typical reason for the G. O. P. triumph. Son of an Assistant Secretary of War under Roosevelt I, he was bemused with communism when he left Harvard amid thick depression. He took his scintillating blonde bride to Russia. For 18 months they worked in Soviet bakeries, factories, collective farms, journalism. She piloted a Moscow street car, taught Russ housewives to bake. What he saw in Russia drove him toward conservatism and a G. O. P. headquarters post, where he helps steer toward liberalism and youth. They have built a handsome modernistic house which overlooks the reservoir, retains a Georgian dignity; helped organize a skating club, leased a private island in the Caribbean, whither they sail today to meditate on 1940.

Foreign diplomats in Washington nowadays are on a day-to-day, cash-and-carry basis. No longer do they blare forth their love of all things American. They shop around for the best deals and bargains for their own countries, and are careful not to let an incautious outburst of airy Moslism here offend a possible customer elsewhere.

"—a concert by the two Toms"

As soon as the post-election hullaballoo dies down it would be nice if Mr. Roosevelt would invite Tom Dewey, the famed baritone, to the White House, to sing "Happy Days Are Here Again," accompanied by Tom Corcoran on the accordion, with Marvin McIntyre carrying the melody.

CAPITAL DIDO: All seems amicable now between Justice Hugo Black and Justice Harlan Stone, who hazed Mr. Black as a freshman justice. They sit next to each other on the bench, and the other day I saw Mr. Stone nudge Mr. Black and show him what seemed to be a humorous passage in a law book. (Or do the justices hide novels behind their law books, as we used to hide Hardy behind our geographies?) Anyhow, both of 'em grinned boyishly.

5 Bandits Stage 2 Holdups for $53

Three armed bandits last night took $15 from three employes of a liquor store at 1820 First street northwest, locked their victims in a bathroom and escaped.

Police said the victims, Jacob Kassler, Ernest Madison and Chester Sunina, were closing the store when the gunmen entered and took what money they had in their pockets.

Earlier two men took $33.87 from a cleaning shop at 1813 K street northwest and escaped after threatening the night manager, Kathryn Smith, of 2620 Ontario road northwest.

Intricacies of Long Distance 'Phone Calls Unveiled at Open House

Phone Company's Open House Shows Long-Distance Method

Operators Demonstrate Speed of Connections
Trick Instrument 'Talks Back'
Visitors See Wirephoto, Radio Rooms

A voice traveled 3,000 miles to span an 8-foot gap between two speakers, a telephone "talked back," another phone automatically flashed a light when improperly handled and scores of visitors to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday watched a radio program flashed to the Nation by the flick of a switch.

It was all part of the telephone company's "open house" in the long-distance division. To show the public how easy it is to talk to Aunt Sue or Uncle Jake out in Podunk as well as down in Rio, the long-distance rooms were thrown open to the public from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. and will remain open during those hours through Friday.

In the first demonstration—staged for a group of visiting business, civic and municipal leaders—it took little better than a minute for two persons in the same room to be connected by telephone via Chicago, St. Louis and Atlanta. They talked while standing less than 8 feet apart, but their voices traveled 3,000 miles through the "key" long-distance connecting cities.

9,000 Calls Handled Daily

In the long-distance room, where incoming and outgoing calls are handled at the rate of nearly 9,000 a day, the "open house" visitors watched in wonderment as long rows of young women operators expertly manipulated intricate webs of multi-colored cords and plugs.

Approximately 140 operators are constantly on duty, it was explained, and the force can be quickly boosted to more than 300 in case of emergency. Through the efforts of these trained women, 7,000 communities across the country can be reached by telephone in a matter of minutes.

Talking to Themselves

In the company's display room, several exhibits disclosed the inside workings of the dial 'phone system and at one booth, visitors spoke into a telephone and heard their own voices talk right back at them.

The demonstration opened with a luncheon given by C. A. Robertson, general manager. Guests included John A. Remon, vice president of the company; Riley Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Capt. Charles A. Tansey, assistant Engineer Commissioner; L. A. Carruthers, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney, director of naval communications.

Exhibits include rooms where the Associated Press Wireless Wirephotos are handled and where national network radio programs are dispatched to the various stations.

Friends (?) Hail Allen's Resignation

Cronies Celebrate
Ridicule Record
He Buys the Lunch

A self-appointed committee for the celebration of George Allen's resignation as District Commissioner invited him to a luncheon yesterday at the Carleton Hotel and after a good-natured roasting gave him the bill.

George (Without Pay) Allen, who still serves as District WPA director at no salary, defended his record as best he could against the jibes of Harry Butcher, vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Steve Early, secretary to the President, and others.

Butcher explained that the committee of Allen cronies had organized the affair "to join the District taxpayers in appreciation of George's resignation as District Commissioner"

"I'm proud of my record," responded Allen, modestly. "I made a great fight for suffrage for voteless Washington and lost, but it's just as well in view of what happened last Tuesday.

"When I became Commissioner Washington was second in death rates; when I left it was first. And the population at St. Elizabeths increased, too.

"Before I took office the District used to get 50 per cent of its revenue from the Federal Government. When I left this had been whittled down to less than 10 per cent."

He also cited the increase in relief and traffic casualties during his administration and the fact that the Commissioners got three new automobiles.

"I was responsible for chasing away the starlings from the District Building by toy balloons," he added, "but the starlings paid me back with their only weapon."

The committee gave Allen, who now is vice president of a New York insurance company, a desk set "bound in brass" at the suggestion of Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, and a bound volume of letters.

Butcher, before calling upon J. Russell Young, of the White House correspondents, for a "benediction," called attention to Allen's numerous titles, such as:

"Judge of the United States Supreme Court by presidential humor;" "Big Buffalo Moth of the Boy Scouts;" "Honorary doctor of laws of Tupelo Barber College;" "loudest football player ever discovered by Grantland Rice," and "living exponent of the passion for anonymity."

Among the regrets sent by old friends of Allen was a telegram from Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, that he would be glad to join in a similar subscription when Allen resigns from his insurance job.

Included in guest list were WPA Administrator Hopkins, Commissioner Hazen, Corporation Counsel Seal, Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, and Ross Haworth, deputy District WPA administrator.

The committee adjourned subject to recall when the Allen-for-President boom is launched.

30 Protest Plan For Closing Of Otis Place

Commission Hears Plea
Urged by Schools
Street Cuts Playground

More than 30 property owners appeared at a District Commissioners public hearing yesterday and voiced objections to a proposal, to close a section of Otis place northwest to consolidate two sections of the Park View School Playground, bisected by the place.

Petition Submitted

The plan recommended by the schools would have closed the street between Warder street and an alley just west of Sixth street. When the proposal was suggested about six months ago District Surveyor Edward A. Dent informed the Commissioners property owners would raise serious objections. Brig. Gen. Dan I. Sultan, at that time Engineer Commissioner, suggested a public hearing.

James C. Wilkes, an attorney, representing the property owners, submitted a petition with 102 signatures protesting the street closing. No one appeared at the hearing in favor of the proposal.

H. M. Goldstein, representing the Park Road Citizens Association, also appeared at the hearing protesting the closing of the street. He said closing of the street would be unfair to the citizens of that area and would vitally affect their property rights.

At the same time the Commissioners approved a proposal to close Austin street, between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-sixth streets southeast, and to close a public alley extending from Bangor street to Austin street southeast.

Highway Change Approved

Action on charges in the Northwest section bounded by Foxhall road and Forty-ninth street was deferred by the Commissioners. In another action, the Commissioners approved proposed changes in the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Northeast section bounded on the north and northwest by Douglas street, on the east by Seventeenth street, and on the southwest by Montana avenue, providing for the extension of a new proposed street in this territory.

Approval was also given a project for a change in the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Southeast section bounded on the northeast by Massachusetts avenue and Randle Circle, on the east by Anacostia road, on the south by M street and on the west by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad right-of-way.

$100,700 Low Bid For Auto Stations

The Harwood-Nobel Construction Co., Inc., 1520 K street northwest, submitted a low bid of $100,700 yesterday for the construction of two automobile inspection stations, it was announced.

Congress appropriated only $99,726 for actual construction costs of the stations, but the local company submitted several alternatives with the bid which would bring the total estimate below the appropriation figure. A total of $103,000 was appropriated.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMANLY" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

85-Ton Cyclotron Latest Weapon in Fight on Cancer

An 85-ton atom-smasher developed at the University of California was described yesterday by Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, executive director of the National Advisory Cancer Council, as the latest experimental weapon in the fight against cancer.

The enormous mechanism, called a cyclotron, produces neutron rays which seem to be more effective than X-rays in the treatment of some malignancies in smaller animals.

Dr. Hektoen said that a selected group of patients has been placed directly under the cyclotron to receive the neutron rays. Clinical significance of the investigations still "remains hidden in the deep doubts of the future," he added.

Bearded Man Attacks Girl, May Be Auto Sniper

A bearded white man with wavy hair last night was sought as a suspect in sniping attacks on three persons, one of which resulted in death of a colored man.

The man grabbed Louise Moser, 323 Eleventh street southwest, from behind, and attempted to throw her to the ground, police reported. She fought with him and he was frightened away by her screams. His description tallied with that of a man who fired two shots Saturday night at a colored motorist who refused to give him a ride in the 1900 block of Alabama avenue southeast.

A second colored suspect was in custody last night in connection with the attacks. He was arThursday or Friday, days of the day.

Education Plan Suggested to D. C. Baptists

Convention Opened
Missions Reviewed
Sessions to Continue

A National Baptist program of Christian education was urged last night by Dr. Frank W. Padelford, executive secretary of the northern Baptist Board of Education, in the opening meeting of the Sixty-first annual District Baptist convention.

Padelford, addressing Washington leaders of the denomination in the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest, declared the program should support denominational schools and colleges.

A second speaker, Dr. Norman W. Cox, of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church in Huntington, W. Va., reviewed the missionary program and praised its founder, Luther Rice, one time member of the First Baptist congregation here.

Dr. Cox said Rice had "caught the imagination of our Baptist people for missions" and in helping to found the mission program 125 years ago, he had made possible many educational and missionary institutions still active today. Among these institutions Dr. Cox listed George Washington University.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the convention, introduced Walter T. Lawton, deacon of the First Baptist Church and a descendant of Dr. Luther Furman, associate of Rice, and the Rev. Walter H. Brooks, for 56 years pastor of the Ninth Street Colored Baptist Church.

The convention will hold sessions at Calvary Baptist Church today, with Dr. William S. Abernethy giving the address of welcome in the morning. The Rev. Dr. Howard Hughes Pruden, of the First Baptist Church, will also speak.

D.C. Driver Denies Auto Death Guilt

Henry B. Byrd, jr., of 1013 Fifteenth street northwest, yesterday pleaded not guilty to a charge of "unlawfully and feloniously killing" W. W. Tussing, of Gum Springs, Va., in an automobile accident. He was ordered held for the grand jury following a hearing in Fairfax.

Tussing and two companions were walking on the Richmond Highway near Gum Springs when he was struck by an automobile which failed to stop. He died two hours later in Alexandria Hospital. Byrd was arrested by police shortly after the accident.

Druggist Laughs Last as Judge Jails Bamboozler

When Henry Taylor, 34, colored, of the 200 block of D street southwest, bamboozled Dr. Yancey King, pharmacist at 1509 Kenilworth avenue northeast, out of a dollar, he laughed.

It was the doctor's turn to laugh, however, when Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday sentenced Taylor to six months in jail.

Taylor entered the drug store, bought a package of gum, paid with a $2 bill and received $1.95 change. Then Taylor added a nickel to the 95 cents and asked for a $1 bill. Another man came in and asked for 5 penines for a nickel, Dr. King still holding the dollar in change in his hand.

Taylor then asked for his $2 back, and tossed a $1 bill on the counter. Dr. King thought nothing of the involved transaction until he checked the cash register later and found it $1 short.

Jury Examines Files of Two More D. C. Hospitals

Awaiting decision by Justice Proctor as to whether it can enforce its broad subpena for the records of the American Medical Association, the health extraordinary grand jury yesterday received files of two more District hospitals.

The hospital files are being scrutinized for evidence of the Government's charge that the A. M. A. and District Medical Society caused them to exclude patients treated by Group Health staff physicians.

Testifying secretly before the grand jury yesterday were Dunlap P. Penhallow, former head of the Veteran Administration's Mount Alto Hospital; Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent of Children's Hospital; C. M. Bean, assistant secretary of the Children's Hospital board of directors; James Rogers, president of Casualty Hospital, and Dr. J. Rogers Young, of the Casualty Hospital staff.

Businessmen Protest Potomac Hobo Jungle

A petition to the District Commissioners to wipe out the "hobo jungle" which stretches along the Potomac north of the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, was decided on last night at a meeting of the Southeast Businessmen's Association. The members also went on record as being in favor of some form of pedestrian traffic control.

Cherry Tree Defenders Reinforced

Blossom Loss Feared
Hotelmen Protest
Citizens' Groups Act
President Advised

Six District civic and business organizations yesterday voluntarily joined the protest against possible destruction of cherry blossom trees to make way for the proposed Jefferson Memorial at the Tidal Basin.

Objections and resolutions were passed by the Hotel Association of Washington, and Kalorama, Piney Branch, Stanton Park, Hillcrest, and West End Citizens Associations.

A unanimous protest against destruction of "several hundred" cherry trees was registered by the Hotel Association in a resolution adopted at a meeting in the Burlington Hotel.

The resolution was sent to President Roosevelt, the Fine Arts Commission, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Jefferson Memorial Commission.

Pedestrian Control Opposed.

The Stanton Park unit pointed out that the site for the memorial was crowded and would required destruction of numerous cherry trees.

The group also urged a city council for the District with power to pass on the budget and recommend to Congress all revenue legislation. Pedestrian control in congested areas and enforcement of bicycle laws was also recommended.

West End citizens opposed pedestrian control and asked prohibition of turns at busy intersections, and passing to the left of street car platforms and loading zones.

Officers Elected

Kalorama Citizens Association elected the following officers: Mrs. Edna L. Johnston, president, re-elected; H. Hobart McCubbins, first vice president; Dr. Loren B. Johnson, second vice president; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, recording secretary; Fletcher Tilton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marian L. White, treasurer; Monie J. Senger and Mrs. Wiley, federation delegates.

An Old Minstrel Man Brings Back Past

Eddie Leonard, at Earle, Is a Veteran
Joan Crawford Dances Again in Film
This, That and the Other in the Theater

THERE used to be quite a flock of them around during a theatrical season—Lew Dockstader, George Primrose, George "Honey Boy" Evans, Neil O'Brien, Al G. Fields, Willis Sweatnam, Haverly and, yes, Al Jolson. Now they don't bob up so frequently. In fact, there are few of the old-timers of minstrelsy left to bob up.

BELL

But Eddie Leonard is back after all these years, as an extra added attraction with Ted Lewis' stage revue at the Earle Theater. That may not mean much, if anything, to the present gelatin generation of theatergoers, but it means plenty to the veterans who are able to recall a day when minstrelsy was minstrelsy, instead of merely one of the theater's most fragrant and most enlivening memories.

Eddie Leonard is one of the genuine, blown-in-the-bottle—and I don't mean what you mean—surviving symbols of one of the most colorful forms of American theatrical entertainment. He has sat in many a burnt-cork circle, beginning as far back as 1895. The year 1895 was quite a while ago, but you'd never suspect it to see and hear Eddie in his "Roly-Boly Eyes" and "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider" numbers, into which he interpolates a dash of the old soft-shoe and sand dances that helped add to his fame 'way back yonder. The Earle assays a high nostalgic content this week.

While Eddie is back, it is doubtful if minstrelsy, as it was known in its heyday, ever will be. There are many reasons for this. One of them is the incursions that were made into its ranks when vaudeville came to be a prime favorite among the footlights' various forms of amusements; another is the proselyting of all forms of talent that has been done by the motion pictures; another, radio. But Eddie is back and that is something.

Eddie Leonard has not always been a minstrel man. Indeed, he hasn't toured as a "Sambo," "Tambo" or olio specialist since the old days of the Cohan and Harris Minstrels, a de luxe edition of the old form of semicircle that toured some 30 years ago and eventually was inherited by George "Honey Boy" Evans.

That was quite a troupe of blackface artists that Cohan and Harris sent on tour. The late "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, was the interlocutor; "Honey Boy" Evans and Eddie Leonard were "hot" on the ends; Julian Eltinge, the greatest of the female impersonators, played the "wench" parts and the Waterbury Brothers and Tenny were a standard musical act, appearing as a feature of the olio. Mrs. Waterbury, mother of the Waterbury Brothers' two-thirds of the team, by an odd coincidence, used to conduct a theatrical boarding house on Thirteenth street at about the point where the entrance to the Earle Theater now beckons to the stage where Eddie Leonard is playing.

Eddie now is creeping up into his mid-60's, but you'd never imagine it to see the enthusiasm and the "spizz" he puts into the type of stage work he loves best and the one with which his name always will be associated. He still has the old spark, if you know what I mean.

But I started to say, back there somewhere, that Leonard has not always been in minstrelsy. After the Cohan and Harris tour, he went in for musical comedy and vaudeville. They aren't what they once were, either. But Eddie is.

Musical comedy and vaudeville may never "come back," any more than minstrelsy has, but there are a good many of us who hope Eddie Leonard will—often and for many years to come.

On his present tour, Eddie is accompanied by his wife, the former Mabel Russell, a popular stage star in her own right. They were introduced back about 1917 by the late Nora Bayes, in front of the old New York Theater, on Broadway, where Miss Russell had just heard her future husband sing "Big Brown Booloo Eyes." They have been sweethearts ever since and always will be. Boy, do me a favor and tear up the calendar!

Speaking of musical comedy—and in the strict sense it isn't one—that crazy-quilt production that confounded the New York critics by turning out to be the greatest smash hit of the season on Broadway is outgrowing one theater after another. I mean "Hellzapoppin," starring those two priceless zanies, Olsen and Johnson.

"Hellzapoppin," when it opened in New York as a traveling vaudeville unit expanded into a full-length revue, drew down the scorn of every critic in the metropolis with the single exception of Winchell, who used to be a vaudeville "hoofer" himself and so probably got the "feel" of the thing beyond the capacities of his fellow members of the "death watch." Heartily lampooned in the press, it became an overnight hit with seats at fabulous premiums.

This amazingly insane symposium of hilarious lunacy now is in its ninth capacity week at the 46th Street Theater. On November 28 it will move into the Winter Garden, a house of considerably larger capacity and one whose name is indelibly written down in the records as the home of precisely this sort of gay gaucherie—musical fol-de-rols that the public apparently never tires of attending in large and button-bursting numbers.

We dramatic cricks are pretty smart fellows!

The Film Society of Washington, in co-operation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, will inaugurate its season of ten films of unusual interest, to be shown on Wednesday evenings already announced, tomorrow night at 8:30 in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The opening bill will feature "The Adventures of Chico," a Mexican picture, starring a small boy (Chico), who is described as a sort of Mexican "elephant boy." While primarily for the entertainment of film society members, tickets for the programs may be secured in advance from the organization's office at 1734 F street. None will be available for purchase at Pierce Hall.

A. E. Lichtman, head of the theater chain bearing his name, was elected "Chief Barker" of the Variety Club of Washington for 1939, at the club's annual election held in the Willard Hotel yesterday afternoon.

Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keiths Theater, was named first assistant chief barker; Sidney Lust, independent theater operator, was elected second assistant chief barker; Harry Brown, branch manager for Grand National Pictures, was made secretary, and Sam Galanty, division manager for Columbia Films, re-elected treasurer, a post he has held since the organization of the showmen's club. Ray Bell, head of publicity and advertising for the Loew Theaters here, was renamed executive secretary, and A. Julian Brylawski, manager of the realty department for the Warner Brothers Theaters, who is the club's current chief, was voted delegate to the councils of the national organization of Variety clubs.

A. E. Lichtman, J. Makover, Angie Ratto, H. Brown, Ed Fontaine and Sidney Lust were voted to the club's board of governors and will serve with Archie Engel, Sam Galanty, Sam Flax, Hardie Meakin and Harry Lohmeyer, whose terms on the club's governing board do not expire until December, 1939. Also on the club's board are its former chief barkers, John J. Payette, Rudolph Berger, Carter Barron and A. Julian Brylawski.

Subscribers to the series of six plays to be offered this season in the National Theater by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington are notified that their tickets for the second play of the series, "Golden Boy," due the week of November 28, will be in the mail for delivery by the end of the present week. No further changes of address can be accepted by the local office for this attraction. Any changes desired to be made for the third subscription play, "Our Town," beginning Monday, December 12, must be filed not later than Saturday of this week, November 19. So now you know.

Cowboy actors, even when they are only 9 years old, have a way with them. Dickie Jones, under 10, typified the junior riders when he insisted that he be given a fully grown horse, instead of a pony, so that he could "keep up with" Bill Boyd, the star of the Hopalong Cassidy westerns.

"Ponies are for tenderfeet," Dickie is reported to have told Producer Harry Sherman. "I'm no softie and I'll ride no cut-down horse."

Dickie's mother was called in and tried to impress her son with the fact that the script of "The Frontiersman" called for him to ride a pony. "I don't care what the script calls for. I'm calling for a horse," declared Dickie.

This apparently is as it should be. If they'd look the matter up, they'd probably find that Dickie actually is Richard IX, or X, or something, whether he has a kingdom to give for a plug or not!

Ol' Massa Ed was made a full-fledged chief of the tribe, with the name of Chief Motion Shades. He has a chief motion, out there on that floor, but nobody can quite figure out what it is!

There are elements of greatness in Friedrich Hebbel's drama of "Herod and Mariamne" that have not been captured in Clemence Dane's English prose adaptation of the classic play, presented by Katharine Cornell in the National Theater last night.

Concerning itself with events in ancient Judea immediately before the birth of Christ, events as mighty as those that are reshaping the nations of the earth today, the play peoples itself with heroic figures in whom were instinct the tremendous impulses of pride, passion and conquest. Herod, King of Judea, ruled with Mariamne, whose brother, Aristobulus III, he had caused to be murdered to perpetuate his reign upon the throne. Octavius Caesar, in Rome, had dispatched Anthony to Egypt to form an alliance with Cleopatra in the far-flung interests of a complete world dominance by the Roman Empire. The courts of all the rulers were honeycombed with jealousy, intrigue and the lust for bitter revenge for daring and far-reaching treacheries. The bloody building of empire spans the highest and the lowest qualities of mind and heart with which man may be endowed.

Rooted in this mire of hatreds, enmities, jealousies and lusts there blossomed a transcendent love between Herod and his queen. A love of such passionate and intoxicating intensity that it transported them, tortured them and consumed them in its blazing flame. There is something of magnificence, nobility and grandeur in such a posturing of the grand passion against a mosaic of such titanic events. It is the stuff of which enduring dramas of spacious and sometimes fantastic dimensions are contrived.

It is in these majestic proportions that Hebbel shaped his tragedy in its original blank-verse form. It is this quality of immensity that seems almost completely to have eluded Miss Dane in her prose adaptation. It is graced by only an occasional noble flow of speech and seldom by those galvanizing periods of power essential to drama in the heroic mold.

Beyond the ineptness of the adapter's work, annoyance at the present stature of "Herod and Mariamne" cannot, with either justification or justice, be carried. It has been staged with dignity and beauty and costumed with an eye-filling and arresting array of colors. It is furthermore, acted by Miss Cornell and her associates as competently and convincingly as the diluted substance of the two acts and five scenes permits.

As the queen whose love for her king was so overwhelming that she expected him to know that she would die when he died, Miss Cornell presents a Mariamne of vast beauty, tenderness and tragically rebellious spirit. Herod's vague doubts of the overpowering strength of her love and his nebulous suspicions of her fidelity are, to her, a death sentence. That he should twice set a spy to slay her, to prevent another's possessing her charms, if he should die in battle, is the unforgivable affront. She dies, self-condemned at her own trial, to bring to her lord and master, after her death, the full knowledge of her devotion—and her pride. Miss Cornell encompasses all this with the fluent grace of an admirable artiste. Had Miss Dane written a better part, Miss Cornell would have made it great.

Kortner Excels As Herod

As Herod, the sovereign whose ruse was his own undoing and the end of all his dreams, is played by Fritz Kortner, eminent German actor, making his American stage debut in this role. Kortner's interpretation of the character is one of infinite variety and deep feeling. One sometimes wishes that his voice might be a little more robust, but never that his sure appreciation of the role's every light and shade be altered. Not of the American school, to be sure, this Mr. Kortner, but of the European, where grounding in the rudiments of fine acting is painstaking and thorough.

Florence Reed, as the plotting Alexandra, mother of the queen and the slain Aristobulus, lends vibrance and authority to a character that somehow recalls the splendid portrayal she gave of a similarly somber part in O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Among the others cast as important figures in the play, there are several who give performances of outstanding worth. Kent Smith's Titus is a sympathetic addition to the play's tragic flavor; Joseph Holland contributes vehemence and rebellion as Lamech; Lawrence Fletcher is an adequate Judah and Robert H. Harris a satisfactory Joab. The third feminine role of prominence is played a little outside the ancient picture by Dorothy Patten.

An interested audience accorded the play six curtain calls last night, dividing its favor equally between Miss Cornell and Mr. Kortner and by no means ignoring the rest of the company.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 14.

DESPITE AN AFFIRMANCE by the United States Supreme Court—highest in the land—the Luciano case still isn't finished. Federal agencies now are conducting their private investigations . . . On the day Col. Batista arrived in this country, former President Machado left New York. His destination is a secret.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON two little girls from Tuckahoe, accompanied by their nurse, went to Bloomingdale's Art Corner and examined some peasant art dolls . . . A young lady asked them to select those they liked best . . . "We like them all," the youngsters chorused . . . "Very well," the lady offered, "I'll buy all of them for you." . . . "Oh, no," the girls protested. "We never accept presents from strangers." . . . The disappointed benefactor departed—somewhat amazed that she should be a stranger to anybody in America . . . Her name is Katharine Hepburn.

MRS. MEYER DAVIS now is attending the Univ. of Pa.—where two of her children are students . . . All World's Fair concessionaires who haven't put up the money required have been notified of a deadline . . . Commissioner Dave Marcus was invited by the mayor to head a bureau of criminal identification but spurned the job. He'll be elevated, instead, to commissioner of correction, if McCormick resigns from the post . . . Paul Vincent Carroll, author of "Shadow and Substance," whose last voyage to America was front-paged here, arrived in town Monday, without a line of mention. His newest play goes into rehearsals next week.

IN "AMBUSH," the Gladys Swarthout picture Paramount is producing, one film-shot calls for a $96,000 bank roll to be flashed upon the screen . . . It required two months of negotiations with the Treasury Department before Paramount received permission to present such a scene—because of the law banning the photographing of money . . . "We're not using real money," the movie officials explained. "The bills are reproductions of Confederate money used in 'Birth of a Nation.'" . . . The Treasury Department finally consented—but on condition that the numerals on the bills are removed.

BLANCHE YURKA will emerge as a red-head next week . . . Armand Tokatyan, who sang at the Chicago Civic Opera and at Met, now is considering acceptance of a role in the new play "Carousel." He'll portray a comic, sliding and falling all over the stage . . . Prof. Fairchild, of N. Y. U., who was being considered for the job of replacing the late B. Charney Vladeck as majority leader of the city council, eliminated himself—by not enrolling as a member of the American Labor Party . . . Ethel Merman, who left N. Y. for a vacation, will fly back here Tuesday. Her father is ill and will be operated upon that day.

The A. A. A., parent body of the organizations of actors here and in Hollywood, soon will launch a movement to revise the income tax law so that the surtax on incomes of entertainers will be based on a three-year average instead of one . . . The movie version of "Golden Boy" will eliminate the Act 2 highlight when the prizefighter here kills his opponent. Also eliminated will be the suicide ending . . . For real enjoyment: Frank Sullivan's new book, "A Pearl in Every Oyster" . . . Robert Morley at last believes the drama critics who have acclaimed his portrayal of "Oscar Wilde"—and yesterday risked the leasing of an apartment.

NOW THAT IT has become academic, the ethics committee of the County Lawyers' Association has dropped the question of whether or not it is ethical for a district attorney to be a candidate for higher office and retain his job at the same time . . . 30 of the town's bands will appear at the Musicians' Union show at Manhattan Center Tuesday night . . . Pursuant to Edwin Booth's will—at the fiftieth anniversary of The Players—Walter Hampden, Otis Skinner, Mare Connelly and others "drank" from the silver mug Booth had bequeathed. But some one forgot to fill the cup.

HAROLD ROSS, the editor of the New Yorker, met Nick Kenny, the columnist-song writer at the Stork Club last night . . . As a tribute to Mr. Ross, Kenny began to create, on the tablecloth, a testimonial poem. . . . The first line read: "To Harold Ross, of Holy Cross" . . . "Just a moment," Ross interrupted. "I didn't attend Holy Cross" . . . "I know," replied the Bard of Lindy's, continuing to write, "but I don't know of any other college which rhymes with Ross.'"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 14.—Get out your boots and saddles and git along with Gary Cooper in "The Cowboy and the Lady." The boy who made his hit on a horse has escaped from the drawing room—and you'll love him. Gary has the sort of smile babies get when you give them candy.

HEDDA HOPPER

It's the realist thing Merle Oberon has ever done. And the homey little touches Stuart Heisler put in will get you right in the mood for fragrant kitchen snooping at Thanksgiving time. Heisler used to be a cutter at Paramount. He was second unit man assisting Hank Potter directing. Stuart's touches are head man stuff, and if he'll only ask for salary large enough he'll be given a real opportunity.

Whoever was responsible for giving Harry Davenport a part that's worthy of him should get a great big kiss. How about starring Harry and Minnie Dupree, and letting the kids support them for a change?

From this you may have guessed "The Cowboy and the Lady" is swell stuff.

Flora Robson, played Queen Elizabeth in "Fire Over England," and for that performance her entrance into Hollywood should have rated a reception committee at the train consisting of a couple of producers, limousines, cameramen and a fleet of publicity men. Instead, however, she got herself a tiny apartment within walking distance of the studio and after three days here reported ready for work in "Wuthering Heights."

Laurence Olivier, in that same picture, hasn't arrived yet. I have a feeling when he does, he'll perpetuate his five years' grudge against us and make them pay through the nose. They may even have to engage the Coliseum to hold a reception for him. And he has good reason for his peeve.

Now we have green-eyed, red-haired Greer Garson, who's definitely in the Hedy LaMarr and Garbo class. Noel Coward told me she's one of the most promising young actresses in London. Mr. Mayer saw her there in "Old Music" and signed her. After sitting here 11 months without getting a chance, Director Sam Wood saw a test of her just before he left for England to direct "Good-by, Mr. Chips." And Greer is now on her way back to England to play opposite Robert Donat in the picture. She'd be a perfect Lady Edseth. But how could anyone cast her for it when they didn't know she was here?

Fitz Jack Benny! Even his brother-in-law double-crossed him. Jack gave him $10 to place on his horse, Buck, but the other knew Buck wouldn't win, so put it on another. Buck came in and paid 40 to 1. Having won a race, Jack's bringing him to Santa Anita.

Zasu Pitts went out for a three weeks' personal appearance tour—and stayed three months. Hollywood found out that she "Always Leaves Them Laughing." Now she's doing a picture by that name at Warners and has three others lined up. Again proving it isn't your fans who get tired of you.

There's no geography to BOYS'-TOWN

- Boys'-Town isn't just a place in Omaha. Its spirit lives and breathes right here in Washington. It's a vital part of your Community Chest activities.
- But Character Building and Youth Development can't flourish in back-alley crap games. We've got to get these fellows off the street.
- Your gift to the Community Chest will help. It will keep youngsters from going wrong, by giving them a chance to go right. It will help to batter down back-alleys—and lead the way to good citizenship.
- Give to the spirit of Boys'-Town! Give to the Youth of today, decency and respectability for tomorrow!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 14.

ALTHOUGH the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo has gone its way after jam-packing the Metropolitan Opera House, which would make a good garage if primped up a bit, the devotees of the toe-pointers are not left without their favorite drug. A brand-new ballet organization has twittered into town, under the leadership of the great Michael Mordkin, for many years the partner of the sainted Pavlowa, and now a teacher here. The two top girls in Mike's troupe are singularly interesting.

One wears the modest moniker of Lucia Chase. This prancer is the young widow of a carpet millionaire named Thomas Ewing, jr. As a debutante Junior Leaguer, Lucia was active on her toes, and now, an artist rather than a time-waster, she is devoting all her energies to the ballet business and is one of Mike's prize pupils. The other ace is the widely known Patricia Bowman—whom the spouse has known since the days when she was Edna Bowman and the ballerina of the late Father Hurney's St. Patrick Players in Washington. Patsy was a Roxy discovery, and for years she danced 28 shows a week at the Roxy Theater and the Radio City Music Hall—her toes always in agony, but her line always beautiful. It is the helpmate's idea that Pat is the most under-rated and undervalued ballerina in America. True, she has danced before more people than any toe-hopper in the world—literally, millions. But she still has a great reputation to make as an artist.

Two things have operated against Pat, probably. First, she has been "popular," working before movie house audiences four times per diem. Second, she has refused to bow to the prevalent fallacy that all ballet artists must have Russian names, and the same goes for the Chase girl. If Pat would cease being Irish, and become Tanya Aspirinovna, maybe the moaning critics would moan over her.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My niece, Barbara, now a sophomore at Cornell, enlivens my days now and then. Ecstatic about the life above Cayuga's waters this year, she writes me of the wonderful dates and times—and occasional disillusionments common to all flesh. "I had a date with what I thought was a marvelous boy the other night," she writes, "but he turned out to be the most awful drip." Staggering slightly, I gathered this was her quaint way of remarking that the Dream Prince of the campus turned out to be a sad flopper-ino, or bus-kerco, as an escort. "Out of the mouths of babes and sophomores," as the Good Book hath it.

Susan J. Hunter, of here, has suddenly plastered Manhattan with "locality magazines." Since her first, "Gramercy Life," was a business success, she now blooms with other "Lives" of neighborhoods, including Washington Square, Sutton place, Lenox Hill, Fifth avenue and my own Murray Hill. Gee whiz, wonder if we'll get our names in the paper! Probably not—me and my ilk don't rate. We're just the workaday type.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unable, After Two Years, to Forget Man Who Broke Her Heart, Girl Asks Whether to Write Him

Dear Mary Haworth: Two years ago I came to Washington to forget a young man. So far I have not succeeded. I have made quite a few friends and I have dated a lot of different boys in the hope that I would find the man who could help me to forget. But nothing seems to keep my thoughts from him.

During my first summer's vacation, I returned home for a visit, with the intention of not seeing him. However, when he learned I was in town, he called to see me, and our love seemed stronger than ever. We had a wonderful time together until the last three days of my stay, when he suddenly ceased to call. He didn't come again, not even to tell me good-by. I cannot understand the sudden change.

I haven't heard from him since my return to Washington—and that was a year and a half ago. Now I am planning another trip home. I will be going in a few weeks. My mother has moved to another town, 50 miles from the vicinity of this young man's home. What I want to know is this—when I get home, should I write this man and let him know I am in that region? Or should I let things stand as they are? I would like very much to see him. Incidentally, our first bust-up was caused by his heavy drinking.

G. E. I.

Victim of Fancy

DEAR G. E. I.: Never, at any time, have you been sincerely committed to the proposition of forgetting this young man. Such was not your purpose in coming away, although you may have thought it was. Your flight was inspired by an instinctive, unreasoned impulse toward psychic and social self preservation. You had a profound necessity to escape from the discerning, speculative, opinionated attention of family and friends, in seeking a measure of healing privacy in which to collect your chaotically disorganized forces of personality.

And more than that, of course, you entertained the idea, the hope—possibly the secret conviction—that the young man would be impelled, by your flight, to follow after you and take the initiative in re-creating the relationship on a better, happier and permanently enduring basis. You may have thought he would be conscience-driven to make amends for the hurt he had dealt you. Or you may have believed he would find, after you had gone, how much he loved you and how indispensible you were to his happiness.

The fact that you have failed so signally to make a sound adjustment to a new environment after two years shows clearly that it has never been your purpose to leave him behind you on the path of life; but rather that you have been dreaming, all the time, of running into him again around some future bend in the road. Had you been sincerely dedicated to the proposition of living down the unhappy association, you would not have permitted him to see you on that first visit home. When he called, you would have sent him away in double-quick time.

I daresay his calls and attentions were purely for the purpose of learning whether or not you still cared for him as excessively and defencelessly as of yore. And when he learned that your heart and soul were still his for the taking, he retired from the scene well satisfied. If such was the case, it would mean that he is a shallow, sadistic type of individual, whoe glamour for you has its origin solely in your imagination and not in his qualities.

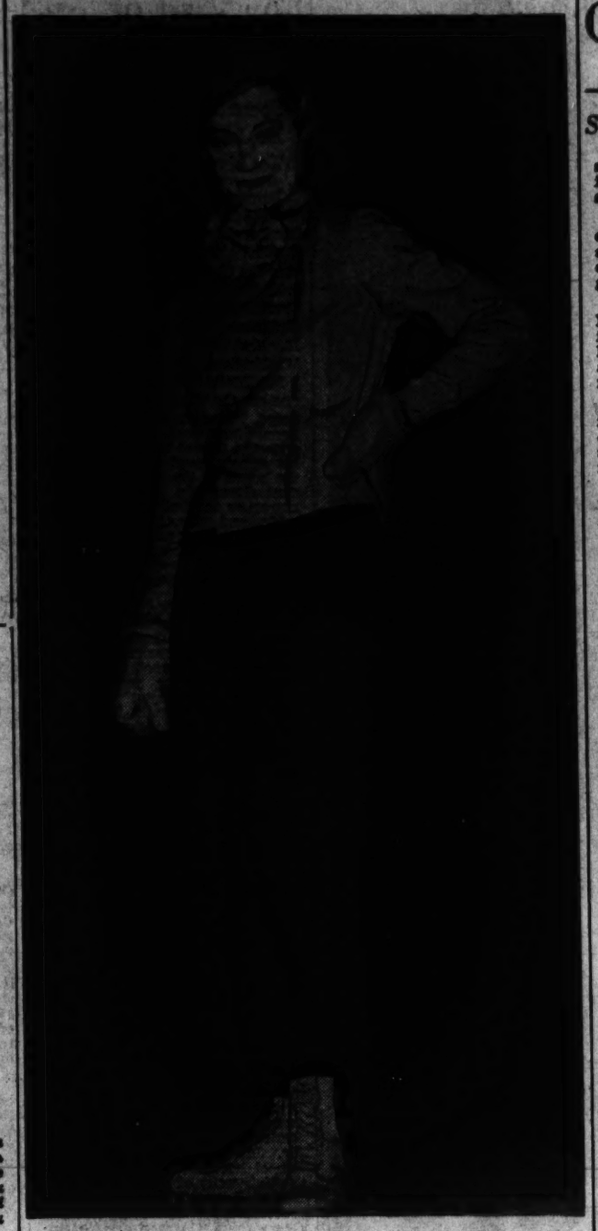
If you are ever to recover from your heedless infatuation with this man who, obviously, doesn't return the compliment, you will have to arrive at a better understanding of the nature of your emotional preoccupation with him. I suggest you read Dr. M. Esther Harding's "The Way of All Women," a volume which explain woman to herself and interprets her to men. As she writes: "A girl may be in love with a man whom, in the absence of the glamour resulting from her state of mind, she might find not even likable or attractive . . . She projects onto him some important element from her unconscious and then is attracted . . . by that which she sees in him, quite unaware that it has originated deep within her own psyche."

You are the victim of your own fancy; in love with a phantom lover who doesn't exist outside your imagination, and whom you try to externalize in the form and appearance of this man. If you have found it impossible to become interested, to any consolatory or stimulating degree, in other men you have met in the past two years, it is because you have been looking over the shoulder of each man in turn for the appearance of this phantom Ideal in human guise. You have never given the real man a chance to register on your consciousness.

It would be utterly futile to write this man on your return home. You would be abasing yourself to no purpose whatsoever. The only thing to do is to let the dead past bury its dead; and to address yourself with common sense realism to whatever romantic opportunities your present environment offers. Forgetfulness of that youthful madness will come easily and automatically when you are once committed to a down-to-earth courtship with some congenial average man; and have ceased to pine, in sickly fashion, for a nonexistent ideal. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Scarlet and Blue Ski Suit



Ski trains and the near-by Poconos are priming themselves for a lusty season of Alpine sports. Even though every snow addict cannot afford Sun Valley or a season of Lake Placid, a week-end in the near future into Pennsylvania can be made more momentous by just the right ski clothes. The crisply tailored girl, above, combines comfort, and freedom of movement with individuality. She blends her vivid scarlet zippered whipcord jacket with Gainsborough blue pants of the same sturdy fabric. The stanchness of natural rawhide boots contrast with the frivolity of scarlet angora mittens and suede skull cap

Protective Foods Necessary On 21-Day Reducing Diet

Eggs and Meat Should Be Included
Fruits and Vegetables Give Vitamins
Milk Is Source of Needed Calcium

By Ida Jean Kain.

HERE is a complaint that has the cheery ring of encouragement for every other reducer: "I have been following the Twenty-One Day Diet, but not very closely, so I did not lose the full amount. I lost only 12 pounds."

Well, well . . . only 12 pounds! She was supposed to lose only 10. It is a 21-day diet, not a 21-pound diet.

You can, of course, repeat the diet and keep on losing satisfactorily. The longer you stay on any diet, however, the less weight you will lose over a given period of time, and this is true of the Twenty-One Day Diet.

You should follow the diet as closely as possible. Don't take too many liberties with the menus, for they have all been planned with the protective foods in mind, since on such a restricted diet you must adhere to the rule of "no calories without vitamins."

Of the 1,000 calories allowed per day, at least 300 always are in the form of fruits, vegetables, skim milk, eggs and lean meat—the foods that enable you to keep your health and beauty as you lose weight.

Eggs and Meats Necessary

To lose weight you must draw upon the surplus fat for energy and the restriction in calories takes care of that. But there are other important elements of which your body has no surplus and the fewer changes you make in the menus the less risk you run of drawing on your body for these elements.

A prolonged dietary deficiency of eggs and meats—principal sources of protein and iron—will leave you weak and ill-tempered for the simple but highly important reason that your vitality is lowered. You can keep your health and disposition intact and even improve them by including in your daily diet the specified meats, eggs, green vegetables and whole grains.

For vitamins and minerals you must have fruits and vegetables. You need the two fresh fruits, two cooked vegetables and one raw vegetable—one of these being the green leafy variety—given in the Twenty-One Day Diet menus.

Milk Provides Calcium.

Milk also is in the menu for a very good purpose. If you leave it off, your calcium intake is inadequate. You can, if you like, use skim milk and buttermilk.

The disadvantage of skim milk is that the Vitamin A is removed along with the cream and these menus are necessarily low in many of the high Vitamin A foods—butter, cream, whole milk and other fats. This disadvantage is overcome by the use of the vitamin concentrates and by the use of other foods high in Vitamin A: carrots, apricots, beef liver, eggs and turnip greens.

You will find it very easy to lose the 10 pounds in 21 days, and these menus, reinforced with vitamin concentrates, provide an optimum diet. Even an optimum diet can never be a complete reducing program in itself, however, and you must not neglect the exercise part of your program. Exercise not only makes you look better—it makes you feel better. Follow the menus as closely as possible, and get your daily exercise in so that you finish your reducing looking brand-new.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Spinster's Dilemma

If she likes feminine clothes, she is a dressy, "fixy" old maid; if she likes severe tailored ones, she is a mannish old maid.

If she keeps her bureau drawers and her desk in order, she is a cranky, prissy old maid; if she does not, she is a messy, disorganized one.

If she adopts a child or if she keeps a cat, dog or canary, she is a frustrated old maid; if she lives alone or goes in for travel and antiques, she is a selfish old maid.

If she belongs to clubs or goes in for civic reform, she is a nosey old maid; if she stays at home and meditates, she is a queer, neurotic old maid.

If she manages to keep her size 38, she is a skinny old maid; if she becomes comfortably plump, she is a fat old maid who has "let herself go."

If she retains the manners of a gentlewoman, she is a mid-Victorian old maid; if she becomes modern and aggressive, she is a hardboiled old maid.

If she makes witty remarks about people or things, she is a catty old maid; if she always speaks sweetly and kindly, she is a sentimental old maid.

If she reveals any knowledge of the facts of life, she is a questionable old maid; if she assumes an air of innocence, she is a too-dumb-for-words old maid.

If she is afraid of the dark or a mouse, she is a typical old maid; if she is bold and independent and can take care of herself she is also a typical old maid.

If she is friendly or entertaining in the presence of men, she is a man-crazy old maid; if she is aloof, she is either a man-fearing or a man-hating old maid.

So—apparently her only recourse is to do exactly as she pleases.

Wife's Dilemma

If she is a perfect housekeeper, she is a fussy housewife; if she lets things go, she is a slatternly one.

If she is economical and wears her old clothes, she is a dowdy wife; if she buys new ones and dresses in style, she is a spend-thrift wife.

If she is a competent family financier and handles the money, she is a wife who "wears the pants;" if she can't budget and runs in debt, she is one of those poor scatter-brained wives with "no head for business."

If she is apparently contented with her lot and brags about her home and family, she is one of those "smug wives;" if she is discontented, she is one of those "whining wives." (And if she doesn't say anything—well, there's "something mighty queer.")

If she reveals she has brains and uses them, she is "poor Smith's wife;" if she is stupid, she is just Smith's wife."

If she talks about her husband, she is one of those wives who is all puffed over having gotten a man; if she never mentions him, she is one of those cold modern wives.

If she joins clubs and goes in for civic reform, she is a repressed wife; if she stays at home and doesn't join anything, she is also a repressed wife.

If she goes everywhere her husband does, she is a jealous, suspicious wife; if she lets him run around by himself, she is either a neglectful or a neglected wife.

If she keeps her figure and patronizes beauty shops, she is a frantic wife trying to keep her husband; if she lets herself go and gains a few pounds, she is, pronto, a fat housewife.

If she goes out in the business world and works, she is a fur-coat-crazy wife; if she stays at home and lets her husband support her, she is a parasitical wife.

If she is friendly and charming to men, she is a dissatisfied-with-her-husband wife; if she pays no attention to them, she is "just a wife."

Painting Gourds

It is time to shellac some of the small, unusual shaped gourds and squash. Select fruit that is free from blemishes and soft spots and paint with clear shellac. Dry thoroughly, and they make interesting decorations.

Today's Menu

By Alice Clayton,
Post Food Editor.

BREAKFAST.
Chilled orange juice
Sausage filled omelet (use yesterday's leftovers)
Buckwheat flapjacks
Maple syrup
Hot coffee Milk for children

LUNCHEON.
Cream of spinach soup (from last night's leftover vegetable)

FRESH FRUIT SALAD

Mix ¼ cup of French dressing with 1 tablespoon of lemon juice and the following fruits: 2-3 cup of seeded grapes, ½ cup of diced pineapple, ½ cup of cubed oranges, ½ cup of sliced bananas and ½ cup of diced apples. Chill. Add ¼ teaspoon of salt and 1-3 cup of broken nut meats. Serve on crisp lettuce, with French dressing.

New Fur in Style

Paris (AP).—Add to the dictionary of furs the word "guanaco"—and the definition—South American skunk. As for the description; the fur is long-haired, with light tan underhairs and tophairs of dark brown. Its chief use is for sports, in long or short swagger coats. Vera Borea features a long coat of guanaco, worn over a suit with a plaid wool jacket and a plain rusty red wool skirt.

Victorian Trend Again Revived In New Jewelry

New York (AP).—That influence of Victorian days is seen in dog collars, lockets, enameled lapel pins and gold chains hung with a watch which can be tucked into the breast pocket of a suit.

Among the most intriguing earrings are jewel-studded gold scrolls which cover the lobe of the ear and swirl half-way up its side. Another earmark of chic is a little gold bow.

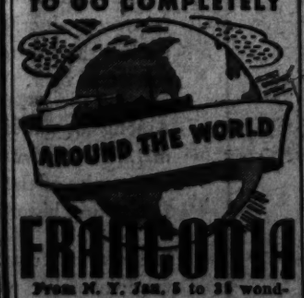
Gems have crept on up the head to nestle in high coiffures. Jeweled stars and side combs are designed to accent the front and diamond bars and gold clips are made to hold back locks in place.

And this year glitter even extends to the floor. The platform soles of some of the new evening slippers are encrusted in sequins or shimmering pearls.

For Bright Silverware

Silverware will stay shiny and untarnished if it is used daily, washed thoroughly and stored carefully. Use hot soapy water for washing, hot clear water for rinsing. Wipe the silver carefully with a lintless soft cloth. Don't pile silverware; that is likely to scratch it. To remove tarnish from silver, use a polish that is very soft and is free from grit.

THE ONLY CRUISE TO GO COMPLETELY



FRANCONIA
From N. Y. Jan. 5 to 21 wondrous ports of South America, Africa, India, Siam, British and French Orient, Malaya and the South Seas. 147 days. $1,900 up, with shore trips—less than $13 a day. Your local agent or CUNARD WHITE STAR, 1504 K St. N.W., Washington, or THOS. COOK & SON, 812 Fifteenth St. N.W. (Shoreham Bldg.) Washington.

Start Window Garden Early

A CHEERY little garden! You can quickly have one like it for flowering bulbs and root plants thrive in water, do well even in a north window.

The lovely French - Roman hyacinth blooms early—and it's easy to grow if you keep the bulb just above the water in its container. Best to use a vase with flaring brim to hold the bulb as the diagram shows.

Set the hyacinth in a cool dark spot until the container's well filled with roots, then expose gradually to the light for the gorgeous blooming period.

Would you guess that a graceful vine grows from a lowly sweet potato? Other root plants grow decorative foliage, too—carrots, parsnips, turnips and horseradish.

Put the root with stem end up in a vase with flaring top, fill with enough water to cover lower third of root. Add more water as evaporation occurs.

Complete your window garden with a Chinese evergreen—an exotic plant with dark glossy leaves on graceful stalks. It grows beautifully in water and does especially well in dark corners of your room.

And wouldn't you like a dainty dish garden or a terrarium for that odd table which looks so bare?

Our 40-page booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers," gives complete directions for making dish gardens and terrariums. Tells how to grow flowering plants, bulbs and ferns. Tips on watering, repotting, forcing slips help you keep your home a bower of beauty the year round.

Mrs. Mitchell, Daughter Are Song-Writing Team

Composed 20 Pieces Worked in Europe Now Visiting Here

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

In town for a brief stay are Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, of Greenwich, Conn. and New York City, who came to Washington for the Cuban Embassy fete on Saturday night and will leave tomorrow.

Both have a host of friends here and their visits always are crowded with engagements. Lunching with them yesterday, I had an opportunity to find out something about their progress in a fascinating line of activity they began a few years ago. Fact is, they comprise a mother-and-daughter song-writing team that definitely is going places.

Mrs. Mitchell, who signs her songs Heart Mitchell, composes the music. Her daughter does the lyrics and between the two they have turned out a number of popular songs, several classical numbers and a couple of operas.

Completed 20 Songs During Stay in Europe

The past summer when they were spinning about Europe . . . from London, where they spent "the season," and on down to Riviera, where scores of their acquaintances go each year, they managed to find time between parties to complete 20 songs. No matter how many engagements crowded onto her schedule, Mrs. Mitchell set aside a couple of hours each day for her work. Her daughter worked on the lyrics whenever she could find the time; but when they sailed home on the Normandie early in the autumn they had a good deal more to show for their summer abroad than memories of a continual round of social engagements. In one of Mrs. Mitchell's trunks were 20 new songs and two operettas, all of which were done while she was in Europe.

Not long ago, she and her daughter blew into Washington for another of their brief stays; but while they planned their trip in order to be here for a certain party, they also found time while in the Capital to see to the copyright on some of Mrs. Mitchell's latest songs.

Now, it's up to Ann Mitchell to write the lyrics to another batch of her mother's compositions, and that's some of the work she hopes to get off before next spring. Then she and her mother will put aside their work for a number of weeks while they entertain shoals of their friends from Europe who will be over to see the New York World's Fair.

Once Longed to Be A Concert Pianist

Mrs. Mitchell's career, begun at middle age, stemmed from her desire as a girl to be a concert pianist. Since, at that time, few mothers wanted their daughters to give "public performances," she abandoned hopes for a life behind the footlights, but learned to play the piano for her friends, and to compose for her own amusement. But, now, her musical training has come in handy. Beginning by playing her compositions just for her acquaintances, she later decided to go into composing seriously, and before she knew it, some of her songs were published, and royalty checks began to pour in.

At their magnificent estate in Greenwich, and in their apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, Mrs. Mitchell still plays for her friends the songs she and her daughter have written; but frequently they also have had the pleasure of hearing their compositions over the radio, at night clubs and on the concert stage.

Some of their latest numbers are "Song to the Sun," "Night-Blooming Lotus Flower" (the latter was recently sung at New York's Town Hall), "Moon Ectasy," and "Visions of You." "Tamyra," one of the operas has a French Eighteenth Century setting; the other is modernistic in effect. "The music in both is exceptionally good," says Ann Mitchell, who wrote the words.

"You really should hear the words; they're better than the music," says Heart Mitchell, who wrote the music.

Mrs. Mitchell and her daughter plan to leave tomorrow for New York, having accepted a flock of invitations for parties this week-end. They plan, however, to return for a longer stay later this season.

Mother-Daughter "Team" Visiting Here Briefly

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell, widely known as Heart Mitchell, song writer, and her daughter, Ann Mitchell, who writes lyrics for her mother's compositions, came down to Washington from their home in Greenwich, Conn., to attend the Cuban Embassy fete Saturday evening. They will leave tomorrow for their apartment in New York, but plan to return to the Capital later in the season

McAdoos Here For Visit of Two Weeks

Spent Time in N. Y. He Is Closing Office To Live in California

Former Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo are at the Shoreham, and expect to remain in the Capital about two weeks. They spent a few days in New York with Mr. McAdoo's daughter, Mrs. Francis Taylor, and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. McAdoo, before coming to Washington.

Mr. McAdoo is closing his office at the Capitol, having tendered his resignation from the Senate last week, simultaneously with the formal announcement of his appointment as chairman of the board of the American President Steamship Lines, formerly known as the Dollar Line.

Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo expect eventually to give up their home in Santa Barbara, Calif., and move to San Francisco, where the headquarters of the steamship line are located.

For 26 years Mr. McAdoo has been a leading figure in the political life of the Capital. In 1912 he was acting chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and the following year he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury. He has been in the Senate since 1933. Mrs. McAdoo has made a popular place for herself in Washington since her marriage three years ago.

Miss Vera Allen Engaged to Wed James W. Jones

Princess Stanislas Czetwerynski, of Glendale, Ohio, and Warsaw, Poland, and William Thompson Allen, of Kenyon Ranch, Tubac, Ariz., announce the engagement of their daughter, Vera Virginia Allen, to James Wilmer Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Parker Jones, of Washington and Marblehead Neck, Mass.

The bride-elect, who received most of her early education in France and Italy, was graduated from Dana Hall and Pine Manor Junior College in Wellesley, Mass. Mr. Jones attended St. Albans School here, was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, attended Harvard Law School and is completing his law course at Georgetown University. No immediate plans have been made for the wedding.

Dorothy Nutt Is Betrothed

Of interest here is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bulkeley van Zile, of Chesham, N. H., of the engagement of Mrs. van Zile's daughter, Miss Dorothy Fitch Nutt, to William Alexander Bell, jr. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. William A. Bell, of New York and the late Mr. Bell, of New Orleans, and with his mother formerly resided in Washington. He was a member of the staff of the Evening Star and United Press, and is now with the Associated Press in Philadelphia. The wedding will take place in the spring.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hurd Nutt, of Grantwood, N. J. and Mount Dora, Fla., and of the late Dr. Neil O. Fitch, of Long Island, and Mrs. Fitch, of Fishkill, N. Y. She is a graduate of the Katherine Gibbs School in New York.

Mr. Bell is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell of New Orleans, and the late George Maclean, of London, England, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hyman Maclean, of New Orleans.

He attended the Aiken Preparatory School in Aiken, S. C. and Phillips Academy, Mass. He was graduated from Tulane University in 1931 and is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Mary Pickford To Talk in Capital

Mary Pickford will arrive in Washington this morning and will be at the Carlton Hotel. She will be guest speaker at the luncheon of the Women's National Press club today at the Willard at 1 o'clock.

Talking on "American Liberty Against Madness," she will warn of the danger of falling into ways of living now being followed in Fascist countries.

Foremans Hosts To Messersmiths At Dinner Party

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George S. Messersmith were among the guests of Col. and Mrs. Albert W. Foreman at the dinner party they gave last evening in the blue room of the Hotel Shoreham.

Col. Foreman, who recently retired as the chief of staff of the Ninty-Fourth Division, Infantry, in Boston, and Mrs. Foreman, have been spending a week at the Shoreham and are returning home today. Other guests last evening included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Andrew Moses, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank S. Cocheu, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walter C. Baker and Capt. and Mrs. Riley F. Ennis.

Emma Louise Munroe's Engagement Announced

Mrs. Henrie Munroe, of Woodside, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Emma Louise, to Robert Lindsay Fletcher, of Washington.

The wedding will take place in the spring.

The bride-elect, who is the granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Munroe, of Forest Glen, Md., attended George Washington University and is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

ANNOUNCEMENT of the engagement and approaching marriage of quiet, publicity-shy Nancy Newbold to John Morris Legendre may have come as a surprise to some members of Capital society, but it culminates a friendship of several years. The future bridegroom worked here in the early New Deal days and since divided his time between New York, Southern California and his home in New Orleans.

DUDLEY HARMON.

AT LEAST ONE Washington resident has cause for cheer at some of the recent depressing happenings in Europe. Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation, has gotten back lands formerly belonging to his family in the slice of Czechoslovakia which Germany recently handed back to Hungary.

Prince del Drago, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, will give a dinner next Tuesday evening to celebrate the event. The party will also be a housewarming as he has joined the flock of people who recently took up residence on Tracy place. The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Coleby and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt are among those recently moving there.

Another dinner scheduled for next Tuesday is that at which the former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson will entertain in honor of Rebeca Trucco and her fiance, Robert Knowlton.

DOUBTLESS only the fact that she has been appointed a delegate to the important Pan American Conference consoles Kathryn Lewis for seeing her name on the front pages. The daughter of the C. I. O. chief loathes publicity. A brilliant young lady, she attended Bryn Mawr for two years then quit because she wanted to work. Outside of her job, reading and music are her chief interests.

UNABLE to accompany her husband to the Pan-American Conference in Lima, Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the economic advisor to the State Department, is thinking about consoling herself with a short cruise. Her 4-year-old daughter is the reason she will not go to South America.

Most of the other delegates, however, will be accompanied by their wives. Mrs. A. A. Berle will sail with the Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Laurence Duggan and Mrs. Henry Norweb are others who will embark on the Santa Clara. Mr. Duggan is chief of the American Republics Division of the Department.

YOU CAN'T pick up a magazine now without seeing a story or article with a Washington background. Leonard Q. Ross has an interesting yarn in a current publication about a Capital newsman who gets mixed up in all sorts of interesting intrigues. But we meanly spotted two flaws in his local color. Once he describes the diplomatic gallery of the Senate as full of sleek envoys and their suave wives, whereas it is unusually almost completely empty except for a Presidential address to both houses or a similar rare event . . . And he has guests assembling for a smart dinner party at 7 o'clock, which seems an hour too early.

ODDS AND ENDS: Already far-sighted hostesses are making plans for Christmas entertaining, though the holiday still seems a long way off. Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse have cards out for their annual carol singing and supper party, which this year will take place December 21 . . . Mrs. Robert Dove, not to be outdone by her husband, who is manager of a smart Washington hotel, has taken a similar position with a fashionable apartment house . . . John Stonborough is back in Washington after an exciting four weeks in Austria, where his mother lives.

Miss Clark to See Harvard Game

Miss Frances Clark, daughter of Mrs. Volney O. Clark and the late Lieut. Comdr. Bert F. Clark, U. S. N., is one Washington girl who is making the most of the football season. She will attend the Yale-Harvard game Saturday and on Thanksgiving she and a house guest, Miss Mary Louise Kountz, of Pittsburgh, will attend a hop at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. With Miss Mary Couden, also of Washington, she spent last week-end at West Point.

Accompanied by Mrs. Clark and Miss Kountz Miss Clark will go to Philadelphia for the Army-Navy game on November 26. They will be joined there by Miss Katherine Kountz, a student at Smith College.

Mrs. Frazer Recovers

Mrs. James Carroll Frazer has entirely recovered from her serious accident last summer as a result of which she contracted blood-poisoning. She has left Emergency Hospital and is at 1411 Thirty-fifth street for the winter.

Miss Imboden Bride of Julian Frank

Arlington Ceremony Services at 7 P. M. Dr. Mitchell Officiated

The First Baptist Church in Arlington last evening was the scene of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Virginia Imboden, daughter of Mrs. Walter W. Imboden, of Arlington, and the late Mr. Imboden, to Julian Lloyd Frank. Mr. Frank is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Frank, of Baltimore, and formerly of Aurora Hills, Va. The Rev. Perry L. Mitchell officiated at the ceremony, which took place at 7 o'clock.

Given in marriage by Earle G. Beale, of Arlington, Miss Imboden was gowned in ivory satin, fashioned on princess lines, and her single ornament was a gold heirloom pin set with a diamond. Her tulle veil was draped from a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

MISS LOUISE IMBODEN was her sister's maid of honor and wore a Spanish raisin taffeta dress, also made on princess lines and trimmed with a bolero. Her headdress was a halo of Johanna Hill roses and she carried the same flowers in her bouquet.

The bridesmaids included Mrs. Dwight Bisel, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Catherine Russell, both of whom were attired in rose taffeta, and whose bouquets were made of yellow, white and orchid chrysanthemums. The other bridesmaids were Miss Isabel Imboden, another sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Maupin. They wore blue taffeta and had flowers of matching shades. The flower girl, little Mary Ellen Warner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Warner, of Bel Air, Md., and a cousin of Miss Elizabeth Imboden, was dressed in a green taffeta frock.

Dwight Bisel Is Best Man

Dwight Bisel was best man, and the ushers were George Shreves, Thomas Helm, Hoover Kemp and James Garner.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's mother, the couple left on a southern motor trip. On their return they will make their home in Arlington County. Both are graduates of Washington-Lee High School. The former Miss Imboden is a granddaughter of the late Maj. James A. Imboden, of the Army of the Confederacy.

Betty Meyers Feted at Dinner

Debutante Betty Meyers, daughter of Mrs. Howard Meyers, took the spotlight in the Blue Room of the Shoreham last evening as she was feted by her mother's friends, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William D. Connor. Gen. Connor, former superintendent and commandant of the U. S. Military Academy, and Mrs. Connor have been spending the early fall at the Shoreham, but are leaving Thursday to spend the winter in India and other points in the Far East.

Guests at the dinner party included other debutantes and several of the White House aides. They were Miss Ashby Proctor, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Jane Eustis, Miss Julie Camp, Miss Ruth Scheuman, Lieut. Comdr. Walter R. Jones, Lieut. Loren F. Cole, Lieut. Chester Hammond, Lieut. Orville N. Stokes, Lieut. George W. Bixby, Lieut. Edwin S. Hartshorn, jr., Lieut. N. M. Martin, Lieut. John H. Anderson and Lieut. John H. Van Vliet, jr.

Mary Alice White To Make Debut At Tea on Dec. 3

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White have issued cards for a tea on Saturday, December 3, at which their daughter, Miss Mary Alice White, will be presented to society.

The party will take place from 5 until 7 o'clock at the White residence at 1420 Sixteenth street. Miss White, who is studing at Vassar this year, will spend the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, then will return to school for one week, coming back here December 2 for that week-end.

Miss Harllee Returns From Philadelphia

Miss Ella Fulmore Harllee, daughter of Col. and Mrs. W. C. Harllee, has returned to Washington after spending the week-end in Philadelphia as the guest of Miss Marion E. Weeks.

While there she attended the Navy-Columbia football game last Saturday afternoon at Franklin Field.

Frau Thomsen Back

Frau Hans Thomsen, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen, arrived yesterday in New York on the Bremen.

Negropontes Stop Here on Return Trip to England

Mr. and Mrs. Dmitri Negroponte of London, England, have returned to the Shoreham, where they stayed during their visit to the Capital several weeks ago, and expect to remain a few days before going to New York, whence they will sail the latter part of the month for the British Isles. They are on their wedding trip.

Mr. Negroponte is the brother of Countess de Gramont, wife of an attache of the French Embassy, and a round of diplomatic parties featured the couple's previous visit in Washington. Since that time they have been in California. They visited many of the Holywood studios while there.

Brazilian Attache Lands in New York

The newly appointed First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Mario de Costa Guimaraes, arrived in New York on the Bremen yesterday and will come directly to Washington to assume his duties here. He is accompanied by Senhora de Guimaraes.

Senhor Guimaraes, before his Washington appointment, was Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Legation in Prague, Czechoslovakia. He and his wife have been spending several months touring Europe before they sailed to this country.

In New York

Miss Newbold To Be Bride

Plans have been completed for the wedding on Thursday of Miss Nancy Newbold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold, of Washington, to John Morris Legendre, of New Orleans The ceremony, which will take place at the home of the bride-elect's parents at 12:30, will be a very quiet one and will be witnessed only by immediate members of the families Mr Legendre is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert Legendre, and is a nephew of Mrs. Hennen Jennings, of Washington.

The bride-to-be, a granddaughter of the late Count Max Seckendorff and a niece of Mrs. Frank Brett Noyes, made her debut in 1930, studied in Paris and also attended the Formata School in Aiken, S. C. She is a sister of Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart of New York.

The prospective bridegroom was educated at Tulane University and Princeton and was also a Rhodes scholar at Brasenose College at Oxford. He is the brother of Sidney J. Legendre, the explorer, and of Mrs. Charles J. Biddle, of Philadelphia.

Daughter Is Born To Lieut. Long, Wife

Lieut. Victor D. Long, United States Navy, and Mrs. Long announce the birth of a daughter on November 8 at the Emergency Hospital, Annapolis, Md. The baby is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey F. Long and Mr. and Mrs. Phil B. Parke, of Washington.

Mrs. Long before her marriage, was Miss Virginia Parke.

Mexican Ambassador Is Host To Archaeological Society

Dr. Fernando Castillo Najera, scholarly Mexican Ambassador, was host last evening to the Archeological Society of Washington, whose members met at the embassy for a talk, a reception, and a buffet supper. Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, the principal speaker, lectured on "Recent Discoveries in the Mayan Area." He was introduced by Wade Ellis, president of the society.

Among those invited were the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios; the Cuban envoy, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga; the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close; the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza; the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Guachalla; the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan, and the Charge d'Affaires of the Honduran Legation and Senora de Caceres.

Others on the guest list were Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown, Frederic A. Delano, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Dr. and Mrs. John C. Merrian, Mr. and Mrs. Boas Long, Dr. and Mrs. John A. Fleming, Maj. and Mrs. George O. Totten, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William H. Bell and Mrs. Wade Ellis.

June Butler Writes On Old Gardens

Book, 'Floralia,' Is Out Covers 18th Century Now at Gunston Hall Lectures Scheduled

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Add to this season's growing list of books from the typewriters of Washington women, "Floralia" by June Rainsford Butler (Mrs. George Butler) just issued by the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill Press.

Mrs. Butler, who is a member of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women, the D. C. Branch of the League of American Pen Women and of the American Horticultural Society, has been here for the last two years, doing research work at the Library of Congress. Only part of her delving into old records there has been for her own book, although she has been reading for it for nearly two years, both at the Congressional Library and the Department of Agriculture.

"Floralia," which is her first full-length work," is the culmination of a life-time of interest in books and gardens, she says. A boxwood garden dating from the eighteenth century at Edgefield, S. C., her girlhood home, was her introduction to the gardens and garden lore of that period with which her book deals. She found little had been written about that era and promptly assumed the task of recounting its horticultural history.

Personalities of The Period Discussed

A widespread interest in horticulture was characteristic of the century, she says, for there was leisure for gardening, opportunity for travel and a growing interest in science. Her book is, to a large extent, a study of the personalities of Linnaeus, Richard Bradley, Sir Hans Sloane, Sir Joseph Banks, William Kent, the Bartrams, William Curtis and Redoute. Gordon Dunthorne has written the foreword for the book and it contains several beautiful color prints.

She traces the rise of landscape gardening in England and reveals the close relation between England and America in the field of horticulture. Plants and seeds were brought from the Old World to the new and strange species were taken back to England from America. Long, detailed letters passed between members of the Royal Society, describing newly discovered plants and their possible uses.

On travels abroad Mrs. Butler has had opportunity to observe many of the beautiful gardens of the Old World, flowers on the hillsides of Sicily and Switzerland, cottage gardens of Holland, the horse chestnut trees in bloom in Paris and Heidelberg and the formal gardens of France, Germany, Italy and England.

Active in Garden Clubs of South

Mrs. Butler retains active membership in the South Carolina Garden Club and is State chairman of program. She has written for garden magazines, reviewed books on gardens and has done extensive lecture work. This year, in addition to carrying on her independent research at the Library of Congress, she has become associated with Gunston Hall as librarian and makes her residence at the school.

Her lecture schedule will get under way January 3 when she will go to Charleston to address a joint meeting of all of the Charleston Garden Clubs to be held at the old Dock Street Theater, recently restored. She will discuss the early plant explorers of this country with which one chapter of her book deals. On January 9, she will speak before the Fairfax Garden Club and, on January 24, before a group at Danville, Va. Other lectures in nearby Maryland and Virginia also are on her calendar.

Democrat Club Hears Traveler

Germany's military strength is overestimated, in the opinion of Melvin D. Hildreth, member of the League of Nations Association, who addressed the luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday on his recent observations in Europe.

Mr. Hildreth, who maintained the League of Nations even now offers the only instrument for a real solution of international problems, declared he believed England and France could have dictated different terms at Munich had they held out against Hitler's demands. There were military forces back of the German dictator who knew weaknesses they would not have dared to risk in war, he said. He also asserted 3,000 was nearer to a correct estimate of the number of Germany's planes than 10,000.

He told of the desperate situation of the Jews which he had witnessed within recent weeks and attributed their persecution and seizure of their property primarily to the German government's need of money.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MISS JANET RICHARDS will speak today at a meeting of the Housekeepers' Alliance at the home of Mrs. Walter W. Husband, 2439 Mecomb street. Miss Richards, who is chairman of international relations for the alliance, will speak on "Highlights of the International Situation and World Economic Conditions in Relation to the American Home."

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, will be guest of honor at the meeting and the president, Mrs. Frederick Newburgh, will formally install officers of the junior group of the alliance which has just been formed.

AN EXECUTIVE MEETING of club presidents and the advisory board of the Maryland State Federation will be held today in Baltimore. It follows the one-day institute held there yesterday with 150 attending.

The institute was opened by Mrs. Harry Harcum, of Salisbury, State president, and Mrs. Thomas J. Tingley, of Baltimore, served as chairman. Isaac Lobe Straus, former Stat attorney general, talked on the Maryland Constitution; J. Milton Patterson, executive secretary of the board of State aid and charities, on "The Maryland Relief Program" and State Senator Raymond Kennedy, "Almshouses."

A SALE of Christmas gifts and benefit entertainment for scholarship fund will be held tomorrow at the meeting of the Smith College Club at the home of Mrs. W. Chapin Huntington, 1906 Twenty-third street. The hours are 4 to 8 p. m.

"A FEMINIST'S NOTES OF THE WORLD" will be the subject of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley's talk Thursday night at an informal supper being given by the District Branch of the National Woman's Party. Mrs. Randolph Keith will preside and the dinner committee includes Mary Dean Powell, Mrs. Horace W. Pole, Mrs. Lucy Cooper Shaw and Mrs. Helen Hunt West.

MRS. HAROLD W. JONES, chairman of the publicity committee for the carnival and tea dance being given December 3 at Sternberg Auditorium by the medical division of the Army Relief Society, will entertain members of her committee and a few others working for the event at a luncheon today at the Army and Navy Club. The guests will be Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds, Mrs. Henry C. Coburn, Mrs. James C. Magee, Mrs. Addison D. Davis, Mrs. William B. Meister, Mrs. James E. Baylis, Mrs. George R. Callender, Mrs. Daniel B. Faust, Mrs. Eugene W. Billiek and Mrs. Elbert De Coursey.

DR. PAUL RENNO HEYL, physicist of the Bureau of Standards, will give an illustrated lecture this morning at the Washington Club on "A Tourist's Impression of Egypt."

Dr. Heyl, a well-known writer and lecturer, is also coinventor with Dr. L. J. Briggs of the Earth Induction compass.

With Mrs. Heyl, he spent some time in Egypt bringing back with him pictures of various remarkable butterflies and other objects he will describe in his talk to the Washington Club members.

Junior Mizrachi Women To Hold Benefit Party

Tonight the Washington Chapter of the Junior Mizrachi Women will hold their annual bingo-card party in the vestrey rooms of the Adas Israel Synagogue at Fifth and I streets.

The proceeds will be contributed to the financing of the new adolescent girl refugee home in Tel-Aviv, Palestine. Refugees from Germany, Poland and Rumania are housed and clothed there and taught various vocations, such as dietetics, agriculture and business administration.

Mrs. Dorothea Friedman is chairman of the party, with Mrs. Bernat Weiss and Miss Eva Morfitt serving on her committee.

Mother Singers Group Tunes Up for New Year

Mrs. Gates Begins 2d Year as Chairman Choral Units Sponsored by the P.-T. A. 1,000 to Take Part in Vocal 'Pleasure'

By Christine Sadler.

After a woman has spent 8 of 10 years concentrating on being a parent, it does her good to get out with other mothers about once a week and sing, in the opinion of Mrs. T. David Gates, who is beginning her second year as chairman of music for the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mother Singers, a group which entertained last year at various city festivities, were rehearsed under Mrs. Gates' supervision. They will be heard again this year, with more and better songs. Already the 70 separate Parent-Teacher units have their choral groups started. Counting from 16 to 18 singers to a unit, that gives Washington more than 1,000 singing mothers!

Once a month the unit singers gather at a central location for mass rehearsals and direction by Mrs. Gates. From each unit two or three representatives are selected for the Mother Singers.

"We have an abundance of singing material to work with. It is often surprising how well a woman can sing after years of no practice. Some of them haven't sung in so long they have forgotten whether they were ever good at carrying a tune. Others of them are top-notch musicians, even professionals. We try to get songs that will be within the abilities of all," Mrs. Gates said.

MRS. T. DAVID GATES

Must Chose Music For All Groups

Selection of the music all groups will sing is one of Mrs. Gates' jobs.

"The Hills of Home" is one of the group favorites. Others are: "American Lullaby," "Indian Dawn," "Trees," "Spirit Flower" and "Sweet and Low."

"We try to get semi-popular songs of good quality, for the purpose of the group is to keep the women singing and to provide them with the opportunity to become acquainted with some of the better music," Mrs. Gates said.

The music committee is in charge of obtaining music for all the parent-teacher union programs, sees about contributions of the P.-T. A. to music week and to the National Symphony, and works with the teachers in any capacity needed.

This year its members will sponsor the sale of "circles of keys" in the schools, working with the music departments. By means of the circles the pupils can find musical keys and see their relationship to each other.

Attends Meetings Of Choral Units

As much as possible, Mrs. Gates gets around to meetings of the choral groups of each parent-teacher unit. Naturally, she cannot visit all 70 very often and depends on the large monthly gatherings for her main District-wide contact.

In addition to her parent-teacher work, she serves as chairman of music for the Takoma Park Women's Club, sings in church and is secretary of her college alumnae group in Washington. A native of Tennessee, she received her early musical training at Ward-Belmont School in Nashville.

She has lived in Washington most of the time since her marriage to Dr. Gates, who is a Washingtonian. Youthful and attractive, she is the mother of two daughters, one of them a freshman at George Washington University and the other a lively 4-year-old. She lives at 536 Peabody street northwest.

Sigma Kappas Mark Founding

Sigma Kappas the country over last night celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of the founding of their sorority. Zeta Chapter, George Washington University group, joined with the Washington Alumnae Chapter in a "founders' day" banquet at the Highlands.

At the head table were Mrs. Orrin Elliott, toastmistress; Mrs. Edward Lawlers, chairman of the committee on arrangements; Mrs. J. Earl Bassett, former District of Columbia tennis champion and president of the alumnae chapter, and Miss Marian Fowler, president of the university chapter. Others taking part in the program included Mrs. Donald H. Saunders, Miss Alma Barker, Mrs. DeWitt C. Bennett and Miss Ruth L. Smith, regional president.

Founded at Colby College, Waterville, Me., in 1874, Sigma Kappa was the pioneer Greek-letter sorority in New England. The chapter at George Washington University as founded in 1906, and two years later the alumnae association was organized. The total number of initiates who have joined the local chapter through its 32 years of existence is 321.

The international philanthropy of the sorority is the educational work of the Maine Sea Coast Mission.

At the calling of the roll, traditional features of the founders' day celebration, among those who responded were Miss Irene M. Pistorio, Zeta initiate, No. 1, and first Sigma Kappa to be graduated from George Washington; Mrs. Charles E. Krey, district counselor; Mrs. George C. Rodgers, vice president, and Mrs. Earl Smithson, treasurer.

North Carolina Society Plans 'Official Night'

Beginning at 9 p. m., with a reception and "social assembly" and a musical program featuring Carolyn Nordica-Bost, mezzo-contralto, and Ray Johns, tenor, the North Carolina Society's first dance of the season, to be given at the Shoreham Hotel Thursday, has been designated as "official night."

Leading officials and their wives will be the guests of honor, including the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the Under Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and Mrs. Frank R. McNinch, the acting chairman of the Federal Power Commission and Mrs. Clyde L. Seavey, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. James W. Morris, Justice and Mrs. Austin Miller, and others.

John Wilber Jenkins, president of the society, and Mrs. Jenkins, Wade H. Hampton and Senator Robert R. Reynolds, vice presidents, will head the reception committee.

Samuel Clement Here

Among the out-of-towners recently registered at the Martinique were Capt. Samuel Clement, U. S. N., and Mrs. Clement, of Newport, R. I.; Lieut. Wade M. Fleischer, of Waynesboro, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Futrelle, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Cook, of Chicago.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Robber Is Crafty

Some people live by simple graft,
While others live through guile and craft.
—Old Mother Nature.

Robber the Rat lives and thrives by means of all three—graft, guile and craft. Given his choice to obtain a meal through open and honest means or through guile and craft, he will choose the latter. Seemingly he would rather steal a thing than to have it given him. He slinks about and sneaks into places instead of going in openly.

Now Jimmy Skunk and the members of his family entered the Woodhouse Night Club boldly. There was not the least hesitation. It was much the same with Bobby Coon and Mrs. Bobby. Robber watched them do it time after time, but he couldn't do it. No, he couldn't do it. When he entered for the first time it was like a thief. He sneaked in. It was the middle of the night. He had watched the early visitors leave and had first made sure that no one was left in the woodhouse before he ventured to put his head inside.

Once sure that there was no one in there he sneaked in. Yes, sir; that is just the way he entered. He kept close to the wall. He was ready to dart back to the entrance and out at the least sound. Halfway around the room he paused. His nose told him that out in the middle of the floor was something good to eat; something very good. Robber can always believe his nose. Never yet has it failed him.

He ran out quickly. He found a pan half filled with food such as he rarely had tasted before. Greedily he began to gobble, but not for one fraction of a minute did he forget to keep his ears set to catch the faintest sound that might mean the approach of anyone. He heard the approach of Jimmy Skunk before Jimmy had reached the cathole. Robber darted behind a box. He hid there until Jimmy had entered. Jimmy went straight to that pan of food. The instant he began to eat Robber ran for the cathole, all of the time keeping close to the wall.

"Do you know what I think? asked Robber

As he darted out through the cathole he all but ran smack into Mrs. Jimmy. He squealed with fright and dodged. Mrs. Jimmy hardly noticed him. She made no attempt whatever to so much as put a paw on Robber. When he got back to the barn and joined Mrs. Robber and the rest he remembered this.

"Do you think what I think?" asked Robber.

"What do you think?" inquired Mrs. Robber.

"I think she didn't want to catch me. She could have if she had tried. I think those Skunks are so well-fed that we have nothing at all to fear from them. I think that we could run right under their noses and they wouldn't touch us. Not that I am going to try it intentionally. I merely believe that I could without real danger," said he.

The very next night Mrs. Robber met Bobby Coon on his way to the woodhouse and Bobby hardly glanced at her.

"What did I tell you?" cried Robber when he heard about it. "My dear, we can do about as we please. All we have to be careful about is not to interfere with those folks. As long as we are careful not to do that they will leave us alone."

So Robber kept watch every night. He saw the Skunks and the Coons go in. He waited until the last one came out. He made sure of this. Then he went in. He never ventured in when the other visitors were there no matter how hungry he might be. But by going in just as soon as the last one came out he found he almost always had time to stuff himself before any of the visitors returned. He organized his family. One or two would wait outside while the others went in. If any of the Skunk family or any of the Coon family approached warning was given to those inside. On the next visit the watch would be changed.

Thus Robber and his family lived high with the least possible risk to themselves. A crafty fellow is Robber the Rat, a very crafty fellow who has no friends and wants none.

McAfee Claims Mental Coercion In Murder Appeal

"Mental coercion" induced William Major McAfee, 63, to confess murdering Mrs. Henrietta Barbara Anderson, 36-year-old Government worker, his attorneys claimed in the Court of Appeals yesterday.

McAfee is under sentence to die in January. The court heard one appeal last spring and ordered a new hearing to settle points of law.

U. S. Death Rate Declines for 1938

A death rate of 11 per 1,000 population for the first 41 weeks of the year thus far gives 1938 the lowest mortality average in the past five years, according to figures released yesterday by the United States Public Service.

The report declared that health conditions this year "have been remarkably good and continue to reflect a period of great achievement in public health."

Girl, 10, Testifies Against Father

Chicago, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—Ten-year-old Martha Jean Matter today reluctantly gave the testimony which may send her father to the electric chair.

The child was the State's chief witness in the case against James K. Matter, 43-year-old engineer, accused of the murder of his wife, Marguerite, 37, in their home.

Martha Jean testified she heard her mother and father quarreling the night of the shooting.

"What did your mother say?" Assistant State's attorney Boyle asked her gently.

Martha Jean's shoulders shook with sobs and court was recessed. The question was repeated when she returned to the stand and this time she told of hearing her mother plead:

"Please don't shoot me, Jim."

A few minutes later she heard a "loud noise" which the State charges was the report of Matter's old Army rifle.

Dr. Christie Heads A. U. Board Again

Dr. Arthur C. Christie, of Washington, yesterday was re-elected president of the board of trustees of the American niversity.

Other officers named were E. F. Colladay, vice president; Dr. Harry Burgan, secretary; Herbert Walter, treasurer, and Dr. Albert Osborn, historian.

Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of the university, said enrollment had increased 366 per cent in the last five years.

4 Held on Gaming Charge After Raids

Four men were arrested and charged with gaming law violations yesterday when police raided a retail ice company and a shoe shine parlor.

Charges of setting up a gaming table were placed against Harry Gordon, 29, of the 350 block Ninth street northwest, and Samuel Paladino, 27, of the 500 block Tenth street northwest. They were arrested in a shoe shine parlor in the 500 block of Ninth street northwest.

In the second raid, Raymond J. Jones, colored, 31, of the 110 block Chester court northwest, and Robert E. Delay, colored, 42, of the 1300 block Eleventh street northwest, were accused of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. They were arrested in an ice plant in the 1400 block of Eleventh street northwest.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1938 21

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Professional football had best live down that affair between the Bears and the Redskins on the turf of Wrigley Field on Sunday. It was such a brawl as to give club owners cause to tremble for their investments and shudder at the possibility of alienation of public support.

POVICH.

The athletes, on Sunday, in 60 misspent minutes, sent the clock whirring back 15 years to the Neanderthal age of pro football. With its slugging, its kicking and its kneeing, the game was a throwback to the era of Pottsville and Canton when pro football teams were supposed to be plug-uglies and tried their darndest to prove it.

It was that sort of pro football that Dartmouth's famed Swede Oberlander proudly refused to join following his graduation despite a $25,000 offer. He shared the general viewpoint that the pros were profaning a time-honored and clean college sport with their unbridled violence and he was applauded for his stand.

And it was just such football that Coach Bob Zuppke of Illinois frowned upon when young Red Grange apprised him of his professional offers. For weeks Zuppke pleaded with Grange to steer clear of professional football but he capitulated finally when Grange was offered such a sum as could not be sanely refused by a young man in college.

Football and Fisticuffs

The league's club owners should fear a repetition of what happened on Wrigley Field, if they are not stupid club owners. Because it was just such a combination of football and fisticuffs, a relic of the old days, that has made their path so thorny in their attempts to uplift the game.

They were building on a suspicious foundation but seemingly they have succeeded to an amazing degree. Out of the dubious background of the game they have constructed a league which, with each passing year, has commanded increased respect. They have made earnest efforts to clean the game up and fandom has flocked to the pro games. They are paying living wages, are cloaking the off-the-field activities of the players with gentility and, in most cities, are making a lot of money.

College stars are not now reluctant to enter professional football. For the most part they are eager to partake of the ready money their talent represents. The game seemingly has proved itself. No longer is it a battle of brutes. At least it is not cut out to be. Clean football has become a passion with the league heads who pay their referees $100 a game to insure the presence of competent officials.

But the other day at Chicago a game got out of hand. To the fair-minded spectator the battle between the Bears and the Redskins was revolting, a travesty on football. The dirty work was offensive to all but the fans similarly minded. It wasn't football, it was violence, and it is calculated to turn back to the colleges the fan-interest that the pros in recent years have wooed and won in their constructive efforts to entertain with hard but clean football.

Started by Bears

The Bears started it. That is the one thing that can be said in behalf of the Redskins, who were equally a party to the rough stuff after the first five minutes of play. The Bears started it when big Joe Stydahar, the 250-pounder from West Virginia, tackled George Karamatic with his fist—tackled him on the chin and bent him double.

The Redskins, no cowards, fought back. If their efforts over-reached the requirements of self-defense measures, they could be readily excused. Because if they did not beat the Bears to the punch, they would be beaten to the punch. Both teams were willing and it made for a brawl game.

The Redskins were not taken unaware by the Bears, however. They knew what to expect. Still fresh in their memory was the game of last December when Sammy Baugh was forced to run for his life after throwing his pants against the enraged Bears. The Bears had slugged in that game, too, but the Redskins had played strictly football and won the ball game, 28-21.

But on Sunday when they started battling the Bears personally, they played into the Bears' hands. The Redskins never were known as a slugging team beyond a few natural outbreaks by hotheads which amounted to no more than two or three brief displays over a season's play. But the Bears are old hands at combining football and fighting. They knew how. The Redskins didn't. And the Redskins took a bad beating.

Are Tough Outfit

It has been no secret around the league that the Bears are a tough outfit, given to fighting. They are, man for man, the biggest team in the league, and they take advantage of their bigness, especially the linemen. When a new man joins the Bears he naturally becomes infused with the Bears' spirit, if you want to call it that.

There was Joe Maniaci on Sunday, for example. Maniaci had put in two seasons with the Brooklyn Dodgers and had never been known as a violent fellow. He was a fine back, but not given to dirty football. Then he joined the Bears. And out there on Sunday he was a ringleader in the fisticuffs.

Maniaci, with the Bears, had learned to get into the swing of things, as it were.

Notre Dame Top-Ranked By Writers

T. C. U. Is Second Georgetown Named Tennessee Third Duke, Pitt Trail

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 14.—The mightiest Notre Dame football team since the halcyon days of the late great Knute Rockne took over national leadership in the fifth Associated Press poll of sports writers today.

The flying Irish, who bagged their seventh major victory Saturday, rolled up a total of 887 points to lead Texas Christian, the first team a week ago, by 101 points. Sixty of the 92 sports writers who participated in the poll named Notre Dame as their No. 1 eleven.

The rise of the Irish from second to first place was accompanied by other upheavals of lesser note. Tennessee, paladin of the Southeastern Conference, moved from fourth to third, and Duke, triumphant over Syracuse in its Northern invasion, rose from seventh to fourth. Unbeaten Oklahoma, the class of the corn country, jumped from tenth to seventh, and Cornell, which finally harnessed its acknowledged manpower against Dartmouth, made the poll's biggest gain, a spurt from twentieth to eighth.

Hoyas Named

The first ten (first-place votes in brackets, points scored on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis):

Team.	Points.
Notre Dame (60)	887
Texas Christian (19)	786
Tennessee (5)	639
Duke (5)	586
Pittsburgh (2)	532
Carnegie Tech	407
Oklahoma (1)	315
Cornell	194
California	138
Holy Cross	130

Second ten: Santa Clara 79, Wisconsin 52, Southern California 40, Dartmouth 38, Villanova 26, Northwestern 23, Michigan 19, Fordham 18, Texas Tech 17, Alabama 16.

Others mentioned: Boston College 12, Georgetown 10, Minnesota 9, Iowa State and Ohio State 4 each, Georgia Tech and St. Marys 3 each, Auburn 2, North Carolina, Vanderbilt and Clemson 1 each.

Notre Dame's exceptional showing against Minnesota apparently was all the pundits needed. The Irish had been moving swiftly, defeating in turn Kansas, Georgia Tech, Illinois, Carnegie Tech—a close one—Army and Navy.

But when Minnesota, always large, courageous and well-drilled fell, the press—and the public gave heed. As the Irish move toward their last two battles, Northwestern at Evanston Saturday, and Southern California at Los Angeles on December 3, they carry more prestige than any Notre Dame team in the last eight years.

Duke in Race

An outstanding victory such as Notre Dame's rout of the Gophers was necessary to take the leadership away from T. C. U. which retained its all-winning form by bombing hapless Texas. Tennessee stayed in the thick of the fight for final honors by trimming Vanderbilt. Duke finally got its best four backs together and ran all over Syracuse in a game that might just have easily ended 42-0 as 21-0.

At this date Duke's biggest obstacle between it and the Blue and White's greatest season is the Pitt game on November 26. The Panthers, with Marshall Goldberg still out, whipped subpar Nebraska and next tackle Penn State, a traditional rival. The final analysis of the Blue Devils and the Panthers awaits return of the great Goldberg and this impressive battle.

California rewon some lost prestige by trimming Oregon while Holy Cross, long an Eastern power, took Brown and climbed from eleventh to tenth.

Since Pitt's defeat by Carnegie Tech there has been a general flattening out. T. C. U., Tennessee, Duke and Pitt all have extremely good opportunities to take over the leadership.

Reed Is Slated To Head U.S.G.A.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—A. M. Reed, of New York, is slated to head the United States Golf Association for the second straight year.

The nominating committee reported today it would present Reed's name at the annual meeting to be held in January. Exact dates and site of the meeting will be determined later this week by the executive committee.

Also nominated for the second successive year were Harold W. Pierce, of Brookline, Mass., and R. Arthur Wood, of Chicago, for vice presidents; Frank M. Hardt, of Haverford, Pa., for secretary, and Jess W. Sweetser, of New York, for treasurer.

Badgers Receive Greatest Ovation

Madison, Wis., Nov. 14 (AP).—One of the greatest ovations ever tendered a University of Wisconsin football team today was given the Badger eleven which Saturday defeated U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles. Close to 5,000 students and townspeople turned out for their return.

Coach Harry Stuhldreher immediately sent his squad through a brisk workout to eliminate travel kinks in preparation for next Saturday's decisive game here with Minnesota. The only missing player was Lynn Hovland, senior guard, who has a chest cold.

Tony Galento Whips Thomas on Technical Knockout in 3d Round

Minnesotan Floored Five Times Referee O'Keefe Halts Proceedings Few Good Punches Landed

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Titanic Tony Galento flattened Harry Thomas in three rounds tonight with as much trouble as he'd have downing ten or a dozen beers in his Orange, N. J., tavern any evening with his pals. Galento weighed 236; Thomas, 196½.

Before a crowd of 12,000, who came close to filling Philadelphia's huge convention hall, and booed the finish roundly, the two-ton gent from Jersey dropped the former horseshoer from Eagle Bend, Minn., four times in the third round, twice with punches that barely landed. When Thomas sank to the canvas a fifth time—on this occasion before Tony could rush in at him—Referee Tommy O'Keefe called a halt to the proceedings at 2 minutes 20 seconds of the session.

Thus the Jersey nightstick came back to the rink wars he was forced to desert last summer to tangle with "Kid Pneumonia" in a battle to a finish. From what he showed tonight, the cash customers were more or less convinced that the heavyweight championship laurels of Joe Louis, who is on Tony's "must" list for opposition, are safe for a while.

The Associated Press score card gave Galento both of the first two rounds, largely because the barrel-shaped slugger did just about all of the punching that was done inside the ring. He connected with left hooks to the head to slow Thomas up in both rounds, and showed a clear edge in the point scoring, despite the difficulty he had landing clearly through the crouching style employed by the one-time locomotive engineer from the Northlands.

Opening the third-round finale, Tony shook Thomas with a southpaw smash to the body. He followed this up with a roundhouse left to the head that Thomas ducked away from but couldn't quite elude. Down went Harry while the referee tolled nine. As he climbed to his feet again, Tony threw another left, this one landing against the side of the body, and Harry went down again, this time for a four count.

Another left to the body, partially blocked by Thomas, sent the Westerner to the canvas again, and he took another nine. When he got up, Tony threw a left to the side of the face in return, and Harry sank slowly to a sitting position for a six count. At that point he tried to get up, succeeded only partially, and then collapsed again. O'Keefe did the rest in calling a halt to the proceedings and declaring Galento victor via the technical knockout route.

Thomas, previously stopped by Joe Louis, Max Schmeling and Jimmy Adamick in various appearances in the East, showed little or no aggressive tactics tonight. He appeared content to fend off Tony's locomotive rushes and roundhouse punches, and then every once in a while took a chance at a right-hand shot to the head.

He threw two fast, but powerless rights to the face in the first. In the second, a right connected with Tony's Adam's apple, and ice packs were applied to this portion of Galento's considerable anatomy in his dressing room afterward.

There Tony explained just what had happened.

Can't Understand Boos

"I just banged him behind the ear with a left," he said. "That hurt him and got him set for the finish. I don't know why all the people booed. I've knocked out tougher guys than Thomas with that punch. And now I'm ready for anybody. I feel great. Get me that Louis or anybody. Tony'll show 'em."

Thomas explained the punch that put him away was the same one that Louis had used to drop him.

Gus Dorazio, 186½, Philadelphia, outpointed Bud Mignault, 170½, Brockton, Mass., by a considerable margin in the six-round semi-windup.

Bill Poland, one of New York's likelier heavyweight prospects, took an easy decision from Johnny Krieger, Jersey City, N. J., in the opening six-rounder on tonight's card. Poland weighed 186½, Krieger 174.

Sandy McDonald, clever boxing heavyweight out of Oklahoma City and Chicago, whipped George Nicholson, New York Negro, in the second six-rounder. McDonald, weighing 196½, spotted his rival a pound.

Frankie Caris, 171, Philadelphia, outpointed Herb Katz, 173½, New York, but a close margin and young Gene Buffalo, 155, Philadelphia, outboxed Jesse Pearce, 165, Philadelphia, in other six-round bouts.

Furr Is Beaten

102,210 Army-Navy Tickets Mailed

Annapolis, Nov. 14 (AP).—Distribution of tickets for the Army-Navy football game today proved the service contest at Philadelphia November 26 is still the game-of-the-year.

Comdr. Morris D. Gilmore, in charge of tickets for the Navy Athletic Association, said 102,210 pasteboards for the game went out by registered mail.

Registry fees alone amounted to more than $1,800. Postage accounted for approximately $500 more. Postage on incoming requests for tickets added about $2,000 more to Uncle Sam's take.

Applications for tickets were received from every ship in the United States Navy, including the Presidential yacht Potomac.

Tech Battles Western for Runner-up

Game Set Today At Western Stadium Hard Tilt Forecast Freddy Stone Out

Runner-up for the 1938 interhigh grid title will be definitely settled today when Western and Tech, each having dropped from title consideration because of the steam-roller tactics of Central, meet at Western Stadium starting at 3:15. Game time has been moved up 15 minutes to allow the game to be over before dark.

It is Western's final start in the series, a series marred at the outset by an upset loss to the leading Centralites. Tech has one more game on its schedule after today's, with Anacostia.

Though many observers called it the strongest club of the league, Tech also dropped a game to Central, and today's tilt means a chance for the McKinley lads to earn a play-off with Central should the latter falter in its sole remaining game with Eastern.

Barring a "hot" day on the part of either team, the game promises the toughest competition of the series to date. Western is at the moment in possession of the No. 2 rating, having played one more game than Tech, but neither club has lost more than one start.

Past performances likewise prove the teams on an almost equal plane. Though Tech slapped Woodrow Wilson heartily with a 34-0 loss and Western was able to win by only 12 points, the two teams won from Eastern, last year's champ, by the exact same score, 6-0.

The possibility of Eastern's trimming the boys from East Capitol street today will be somewhat shaded by the absence of Freddy Stone from the line-up. Stone, ranking next to George Barnes on the Raiders' roster of line-plungers, cracked several ribs three weeks ago and may be limited to the bench for the scrap. In all other positions, the Westerners boast sound players.

Coach Rusty Thompson of Tech has decided to start an almost complete team of second-stringers in today's game. It was these same reserves, he recalls, which scored the team's only points against Central.

A youngster who only recently left the juniors, Wingman Hoyart, will be started on the right end of the line in place of Alden Keefouver, regular, and another reserve, Hathaway, will grace the other end in the starting line-up.

The regular backfield of Dean, Gilmore, Berry and Bach will be assigned to the sidelines for the opening of the tussle, and Thompson's hard-hitting second-string backfield will see action.

Packer-Giant Pro Tilt Pits Offensive, Defensive Leaders

New York, Nov. 14.—When the Green Bay Packers and the New York Giants meet here Sunday, it will be the best offensive team against the leading defensive eleven in the National Football League.

The Packers, leaders of the Western Division, have tallied 220 points to tie their own scoring record and Sunday will complete their schedule. Whether they break the record depends on their showing against the Giants, a team that has held its last two opponents scoreless and allowed only 62 points all season. The Giants also have held the opposition to an average of 178 yards a game.

Green Bay also ranks second to the Washington Redskins in ground gained with an average of 270 yards a game as compared to 280 by the Redskins. The Giants are close behind with a 265 average.

The Chicago Bears are runners-up to the Packers in scoring 163 points. The Giants still lead in aerial completions with 74 out of 141 for an average of 52 per cent.

Brewing Trouble for the Terrapins

Georgetown's Hoya eleven, only unbeaten major team in the East, has only the University of Maryland in its path to a perfect season and the Hilltoppers are bending every effort to see that the Terrapins of College Park do not mar that record. Here you see Head Coach Jack Hagerty (right) going over some new tricks with Joe Mellendeck (left) the Baltimore Flash and Hoya triple-threat, and Joe McFadden, sophomore quarterback, during yesterday's practice. Spirit, Good Coaching Drive Hoyas to Win

Squad Clicks Like Well-Oiled Machine Can Produce 'Money' Players as Needed New Stars Are Developed in Games

By Jack Munhall.

With Georgetown University poised on the threshhold of its first undefeated season in 53 years of intercollegiate football, it might not be amiss to try and determine just what factors have enabled the Hoyas to compile their remarkable record—seven victories, in which they have scored 171 points to 19 for the opposition.

Now it is no secret that Georgetown's showing has been something of a surprise not only to its students and alumni, but even to the members of its athletic department from Gabriel H. Murphy graduate manager of athletics and Jack Hagerty, head coach, down to Gene Connors, the manager.

When the drums of college publicity first sounded early this fall, Maryland, off its great 1937 record, and Catholic University, supposedly "loaded" with sophomore talent, were pre-maturely ranked one, two. George Washington, beginning its simon-pure athletic regime, had promise. Georgetown? Well, Jack Hagerty had a collection of nice, clean-cut youngsters. But if Georgetown couldn't win with that experienced, star-studded 1937 team, what could one expect this season of an exceptionally green squad, relying principally on untested material?

Early Opponents Easy

This opinion that Georgetown probably was facing a dismal season must have been shared to some extent by Gabe Murphy, who took exceeding caution to book the likes of Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon and Roanoke for the first three games. None of these clubs, he believed, figured to defeat Georgetown. But all should offer enough opposition to prepare Georgetown for the major games to follow.

What has happened since that time is a pleasant chapter in Georgetown's football history. The Hoyas started off by shellacking Hampden-Sydney, 51-0, a victory which hardly stirred up more than passing interest. Nor did the public throw open its arms when Georgetown trampled Randolph-Macon, 33-0, and blasted Roanoke, 33-6. Its critics, of which there were many, scoffed and said wait'll they play somebody like Manhattan.

And for a greater portion of that Manhattan game, it appeared these critics were right. The Jaspers bounced back to tie the score, resulting from Georgetown's early touchdown, at 6-6, and by half-time were out in front, 13-6. But then the Hoyas showed their fighting heart and also produced the first of several "money" players who have continued to rise to heights when a superperformance was necessary for victory.

Won by 1 Point

With Joe Mellendeck, showing for the first time this season the speed and elusiveness which won him recognition in his sophomore year, the Hoyas nipped Manhattan, 14-13, on a third-quarter touchdown plus a rugged fourth-quarter defense. Following this triumph, which has proved their closest squeak thus far, the Hoyas hit a faster stride and in quick succession defeated Temple, 13-0; Bucknell, by the same score, and most recently West Virginia, 14-6. Now only Maryland stands in the way of a perfect season.

Which brings us back to the reason for this column. How has Georgetown done it?

By a combination of three important factors, we believe. (1) Excellent coaching by Hagerty and his assistants, Line Coach Maurice (Mush) Dubofsky and End Coach George Murtagh; (2) a squad which, in the opinion of these coaches, possesses more spirit and willingness to co-operate than any they have coached, and (3) the inability of certain players to reach previously unattained mechanical perfection when the chips were down and the pressure hot.

Passing up the first two factors,

Carr Probing Game; Denies Levying Fines

President Joe F. Carr, of the National Football League, has begun an investigation of the roughly played Bears-Redskins game at Chicago on Sunday with a view to taking action, he informed The Post last night by long-distance telephone from his Columbus (Ohio) home.

"I have not fined any players as yet," Carr declared, "but will await the full reports of the officials of the game and other league officials who were present. If my early reports are true, that sort of game cannot be countenanced by the league and my action will be drastic.

"I am especially interested in the play early in the game in which, I am informed, Joe Stydahar, wilfully punched George Karamatic on the chin. If that report is correct, Stydahar will be disciplined to the limit of my office."

Pinehurst Play Starts Today; D. C. Pros Enter

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 14.—The second stop on the winter pro golf tour, the mid-South pro-pro and individual tournaments, start here tomorrow with many of the country's leading pros pairing for the two-day best ball play. The individual event will follow on Thursday and Friday.

Defending Champions Tony Manero and Mike Turnesa head the field in the 36-hole two-ball affair, while three Washington, D. C., golfers are entered, George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, with 19-year-old Virgil Worsham, of Chevy Chase, and Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, playing with Henry Poe, local player. Benny Loving, Saranac Inn, N. Y., pro, former District pro, will pair with Andy Gibson, Baltimore.

Astor Clarke Rolls 453 Set for Season Record

Astor Clarke's 453 set established a new season record in the Federal Men's League at the Arcadia bowling alleys last night. Clarke, rolling for F. B. I., shot 156 for individual high game. F. B. I. broke a record for high team set by rolling 1,776, including high team game of 612.

In the Southern Railway Clerks League, C. Harp, of Purchasing, rolled individual high game of the league with 154, A. Gleason, B. of R. C., rolled a 375 set, and team honors went to Law, with a 568 team game, and B. of R. C. with high team set of 1,671.

Miami Beach, Nov. 14.—Tommy Hoover (140), of Washington, D. C., tonight won an eight-round decision from Alex Cupiano (137), of Puerta Rico, in a close fight here tonight.

Redskins Undaunted By Defeat

Flaherty Confident Still in Title Race Battered Squad Back Marshall Protests

Surveying the wreckage of his Redskins' Western invasion, Head Coach Flaherty yesterday calmly insisted that his team was still a power in the National Football League.

As he led his battered and bruised athletes off the train that bore them from Chicago where they had absorbed a 31-7 beating by the Bears, Flaherty declared:

"A coach can always look for one of two things after his team takes the kind of licking we took. His team will either bounce back from that kind of a game and be a better ball team, or its morale will be crushed and it will never recover.

"I think we will bounce back, because I know the kind of players I'm dealing with. They've got the courage to come back. It's the same courage that caused them to fight back when the Bears started their rough stuff. We lost that game because we didn't know how to combine football and fighting. The Bears did."

Redskins Still in Race

Tumbled out of the Eastern Division lead by their defeat, the Redskins are still in the thick of the race, needing only a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates two weeks hence to assure them a chance at the Eastern Division title when the Giants are met at the Polo Grounds on December 4.

Brooklyn, however, is not out of the Eastern race. Should the Dodgers beat the Bears and the Giants, and the Redskins lose to the Pirates, Brooklyn would tie for the Eastern title if the Redskins lick the Giants on December 4.

Chief casualties among the Redskins are Charley Malone and Andy Farkas. Virtually the entire squad marked up, but Malone's badly bruised leg muscle and Farkas' reinjured foot are the only serious injuries. Riley Smith suffered a reopening of his leg wound, but it is not deemed sever.

The Redskins face an off-week in the schedule, their next league game being the affair with the Pirates on November 27 at Griffith Stadium. On Sunday they will play an exhibition game at Richmond, where the regulars will be used sparingly.

Owner George Marshall, who accompanied the squad back from Chicago, was still roiled at what he termed "outrageous officiating in the Bears' game."

Marshall Protests

Marshall revealed that he had communicated with League President Joe Carr by long distance after the game and had strongly protested "incompetent officiating," warning Carr that the league's prestige had been greatly damaged.

"I pleaded with the referee to give both teams a lecture about the rough stuff between the halves," said Marshall, "but I got a short answer. He told me that he was no disciplinarian. That is absurd. He is supposed to keep order out there and he didn't do it. Warning the teams was the least he could have done."

Marshall declared that he would have supported Coach Flaherty if Flaherty had removed the Redskins from the field in protest of the rough and unsportsmanlike play by the Bears. "It would have been worth the forfeiture of the Redskins' guarantee to see what George Halas, Bears' owner, would have done about refunding those 21,000 fans their money," said Marshall.

Takes Nine Rounds, One Called Even

Card Well Received Gilley Trims Huerta Chester Rubery Victor Banks Beats Daniels

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Without so much as losing a single round, Joey Ferrando, clever Jersey City ringman, last night belted Yucatan Kid often and sufficiently hard enough to win a unanimous decision in their 10-round feature bout at the Arena.

The bout topped one of the best programs witnessed here in many months, and although the card was devoid of knockouts the gladiators kept the fans in a continuous uproar.

The judges called the first round even, and that was as close as the copper-colored Mexican came to winning. He was distinctly and continually on the receiving end thereafter as Ferrando peppered him with both hands and piled up a huge lead. It was one of the most decisive victories ever scored at the W Street Club.

A 9-5 favorite in preflight wagering, Yucatan never found an opening for his potent right as Ferrando feinted him, maneuvered him out of position, and made him look pretty amateurish while belting him at will. The Kid landed few solid blows, and most of them were to the body where Joey catches rather well.

Yucatan on Carpet

Yucatan was on the carpet in the seventh, as Joey hooked him behind the neck and swung him down with a pseudo-wrestling hold. The incident inspired Yucatan to greater efforts in his attempt to land a right and he came out with blood in his eye for the eighth.

But Ferrando, despite all of the Kid's efforts, was the one who landed the most effective punching. He staggerd Yucatan with a hard left hook flush on the bridgwork, popped him on the jaw with a right, and brought him up with another savage left to the body. Yucatan, however, took everything Joey tossed at him, and waded back in for more. He got it, too.

As early as the fourth round it was painfully evident that Yucatan was out of the running, for Ferrando had him dizzy with his clever feinting and leading. He made a motion with his left, delayed the blow, and cracked the Kid flush on the chin with it, then brought over a right before Yucatan could get away. And when the Kid tried to punch back Joey ducked and the Mexican half fell, and half stumbled across the ring.

And that's the way each of the 10 rounds went—Ferrando outfoxing and out punching Yucatan, typing up his right, rolling with his lefts or taking them on the arm, while Yucatan sought desperately for an opening. The Kid was puzzled and charined by his opponent's irritable style, and several times threatened to throw caution to the winds in a last attempt to score a decisive punch with the right, but Ferrando's accurate jabbing and pot-shot rights kept him in line.

The Preliminaries

The six-round semifinal went to blonde Charley Gilley (138¼), of Baltimore, who tagged Pancho Huerta (134½), often enough and with sufficient violence to win a split decision. Punchin' Pancho forced the fighting throughout, but Gilley's hit-and-run style was ill-suited to his own pattern and he spent most of the evening chasing Charley and getting hit by him.

Chester Rubey (125), survived the punishing shelling of Newsboy Toby Scroggins (126½), and came on to win a unanimous decision. It was a rousing bout, with both lads bringing them up from their heels, vainly trying for a knockout, from the first bell to the last.

Billy Banks (127), promising Washington colored featherweight, won a torrid duel with Sammy Daniels (131), of Baltimore, in four rounds. They brought the audience to its feet twice with toe-to-toe exchanges that were about even. Banks' superior stamina told in the end, however, and he finished strong to sway the judges.

Frankie Wills (143¾), put Bill Collins (152¼), down for a nine count in the first round, and pummelled him at will in the next three to win a four-round decision.

Joey Archibald Next Week's Star

Joey Archibald, recently crowned featherweight champion by the New York State Boxing Commission, will headline next week's ring program at Turner's Arena, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced last night. He will appear in a ten-round bout. The matchmaker said no opponent had been signed for Archibald as yet, but that he was negotiating with three ranking 126-pounders and expected to close the match some time today.

Central High Jayvees Beat Woodward, 13-6

The Central High School Junior Varsity eleven defeated the Woodward Prep, 13 to 6, yesterday afternoon at the Central Stadium.

The Central "Jayvees" scored their first touchdown in a spectacular fashion when Dawes threw a pass to Preiss, who raced 20 yards to score. Fast Woodward's fullback, raced 55 yards to score for his team.

Line-up:

Central.	Position.	Woodward.
McCalla	L.E.	Coakley
Adams	L.T.	Watt
Pistolas	L.G.	Kennedy
Ajerakas	Center	Christie

Knott	R.E.	Comstock
Dawes	Q.B.	Cloak
Bryant	L.H.	Burns
Oriel	R.H.	Banks
Preiss	F.B.	Post

Touchdowns—Preiss (2). Fast. Point after touchdown—Dawes (placement). Referee—Hurley. Head linesman—Fanning.

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

Full game bags and many thrills are predicted for wildfowl and upland hunters as they set forth today to their favorite hunting places in every State in this section.

Liberation of thousands of rabbits, pheasants and quail everywhere during the past year, coupled with natural increases in wildlife population in the field should result in a satisfactory season for all nimrods.

ACKERMAN.

Winter feeding programs conducted by sportsmen's organizations this year, together with vermin hunts and crow shoots, have supplemented the large liberation programs of many State commissions, and have aided materially in increasing the game population of every State. Game management programs on State-owned lands, and in Federal parks and forests in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia, have also helped to increase the game population.

In New Jersey, the upland season opened on November 10, and rabbits, hares, male ringneck pheasants, quail, ruffed grouse and squirrels will continue to be open game until December 15 inclusive. The bags during the first few days have more than justified the work of the commission.

The shooting of female pheasants, and this is true of every other State in this section, is prohibited. Daily bag limits are 10 quail, six rabbits, six gray squirrels, three ruffed grouse, and two male pheasants (30 in the season). For the first time this year, under the new 1938 law, the hunting of game birds and animals is legally permitted with bow and arrow.

The wildfowl season, which opened on October 15 in New Jersey, has been more productive than for many years past, although the best shooting so far has been almost entirely on the fresh-water river marshes.

In Maryland, and all States south of it, the wildfowl season opens today. Flights for the past month give every indication that this will be the best in many years. There are literally hundreds of thousands of canvasbacks and redheads on the Susquehanna Flats, and everywhere in the bay country, the well known wedges of flying birds are so numerous they resemble the flights of years back. A bit of cold weather would help the shooting more than a little.

In the George Washington National Forest, hunters are warned to be particularly careful of fires, because of the extremely dry condition of this area. Hunters, and campers, are required to have permits for warming fires and campfires; issued free by any Forest Ranger. The necessary permit to hunt in George Washington Forest costs $1, and may be purchased from any county clerk of counties in the forest area.

Funds derived from this source are returned in their entirety for the development of the newly created 1,400,000-acre national forest public shooting area.

It has always been advisable to check Virginia game laws before venturing into the woods, due to the fact that there is a substantial variance in many of the counties. That holds true more than ever this season.

Deer season is November 15 to 20, the same as last year, in Bath and Alleghany counties. Hunters should note the change in the law which requires, west of the Blue Ridge, that bucks have two prongs.

In every State, game commissioners urge that extreme care be used by all hunters to prevent accidents. Sportsmen especially, to handle loaded guns carefully, and utilize caution with lighted matches, cigarettes, cigars and pipes, while in the woods. Hunting within range of the various Federal work project camps is prohibited.

This past week found us unprepared in regard to a question that was asked several times . . . would there be a late season on squirrels in Maryland again this year. The answer is no, there will not be a further open season.

That conservation today is a matter of some moment, interesting, and not to be relegated to that lost limbo of 'when I have time,' is very evident from the new directory of the various organizations interested in wildlife work.

Forty-three national organizations in the United States are concerned with wildlife protection, according to the Biological Survey. Organizations in Canada, within the various States, and in Alaska raise the total for North America to 181, not including Federal and State, Dominion, and Provincial governmental agencies.

Annibal, Champion Jumper, Wins Manly 'Chase at Pimlico

Victor Pays $3.40 Torturer Is Third Race Worth $4,730 Double Is $59.80

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 14.—Annibal, a grey horse whose coat looks as if somebody has been using it for a pen-wiper, furthered his claim to the 1938 steeplechase championship by scoring an easy victory in the eighteenth renewal of the $5,000 added Manly Steeplechase Handicap.

Racing in the colors of Tommy Hitchcock, of polo fame, and ridden by Rigan McKinney, gentleman jockey, Annibal forged to the finish line five lengths in advance of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Rocky Run, which held a half-length margin over F. Ambrose Clark's Torturer. Only one other in the starting field of seven, Rioter, a stablemate of the winner, finished the gruelling 2½-mile course of 18 jumps.

Hitchcock won Annibal in a draw last year. The gelding was one of the group of jumpers purchased in France by a syndicate of U. S. sportsmen who took the horses sight unseen. This year Annibal has won six of his seven starts, and by adding $4,730 brought his earnings for the season to $21,800.

Annibal $3.40 Favorite.

Annibal's record and McKinney's riding ability were well known to the crowd of 9,000 and the pair, with Rioter thrown in for good measure, were installed a $3.40 favorite and Annibal raced accordingly.

It was McKinney's second victory in the stake which he won in 1931 aboard Green Cheese. Annibal's time of 4:57 2-5 is one of the poorest for the stake, but creditable over the new course here.

Rocky Run, winner of two races this year, set most of the pace. He raced Rioter into submission, but could not cope with Annibal when McKinney turned him loose in the closing stages. However, Rocky Run did outgame Torturer after the latter headed him with one jump to go. Rocky Run pulled up lame. The three mishaps in the running involved Bucky Langhorne, Good Chance and Snobby Scamp. Jockey E. Roberts, tossed on his head and into the flying hooves, suffered severe bruises.

Arcadian Wins Opener

The Millsdale Stable's Arcadian won the day's opening event but not until the stewards had debated on a claim of foul made by Jockey R. Dotter, who rode Dunvegan into fourth place. Dotter claimed that Arcadian impeded his mount while moving up on the outside approaching the stretch. Arcadian paid a $16.30 mutuel. Man at Arms won second money by outphotographing Franco Saxon, one who set virtually all the pace.

The daily double proved a "Woolworth" proposition when the numbers "5 and 10" paid off at $59.80. Crystal Prince, an $8.20 shot, accounted for the chief part of the second race purse. Knight Gallant was second after leading the pack to the streach. Balapin took down third money.

Kai-Min Pays $25

Kai-Min at $25, won the fourth race after a grueling struggle with Minston. The representative of Mrs. R. Horst stuck to his running guns under the good handling of Jockey F. A. Smith. Short Distance was third. The start was the worst of the meeting with Petit Jean, Wise Mentor, Magicienne and others having little chance.

Double Back, in the colors of George D. Widener, won the fifth event with Marriage second, beaten by a head. Up the Creek, the favorite, was third. Double Back was perfectly handled by Jockey Nick Wall and paid $8.10.

No Ending, with Jockey Johnny Longden aboard, took the sixth race by two lengths from Mr. Grundy, a long shot. Third in the field of a dozen was Zostera. No Ending had a slight tussle with Mr. Grundy before drawing out and paid $6.

Hollywood Club Gets Race Okay

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—The Florida Racing Commission today reinstated the permit of the Hollywood Jockey Club to conduct horse racing during the coming season.

Chairman Joseph Stein, announcing the action at the close of a special meeting, said the track had been assigned the dates January 11 to March 4.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRYSTAL PRINCE, $8.20, $3.80, $2.90; KNIGHT GALLANT, $3.70, $2.70; BALAPIN, $4.80.

CRYSTAL PRINCE worked his way to contention on the inside approaching the stretch, swung out to dispose of KNIGHT GALLANT and was opening a gap at the end. KNIGHT GALLANT opened a good lead in the opening quarter and continued gamely when displaced. BALAPIN went up on the outside to improve his position, but weakened in the closing test. JOLYON went closest to the pace for three-quarters and weakened gradually thereafter. LONE HAND was squeezed back going to the first turn and made up some ground. MICRO went evenly. BARGAIN BOY had early speed and stopped. DUB stopped after a half. TOUTMEPAL had early speed.

Daily Double, Arcadian and Crystal Prince, Paid $59.80.

THIRD RACE—Two and one-half miles. Purse, $3,000 added. The Manly Steeplechase Handicap. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:15½. Off at 2:16. Winner, T. Hitchcock's ch. g. (5), by Chubasco—Alliance. Trained by P. Green. Net value to winner, $4,730; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 4:57 2-5. (18 jumps.)

†Thomas Hitchcock entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANNIBAL (entry), $3.40, $2.70, $2.20; ROCKY RUN, $4.10, $2.90; TORTURER, $3.60.

ANNIBAL, under stout restraint while trailing the field, moved up stoutly when called on, came around ROCKY RUN to take command and won with speed to reserve, under good handling. ROCKY RUN took command at once, saved ground, made a poor landing at the sixth fence and closed gamely under punishment. ROCKY RUN pulled up lame. TORTURE worked his way to contention after a mile, moved up menacingly, but tired in the closing stages under a drive. RIOTER was away poorly, was rushed to reach ROCKY RUN and dropped back to tire badly. GOOD CHANCE lost rider at the eighteenth fence while close up. SNOBBY SCAMP had early speed and fell at the fifteenth fence. BUCK LANGHORNE fell at the seventeenth fence.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:44½. Off at 2:53½. Winner, Mrs. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAI-MIN, $25.00, $11.70, $9.50; MINTSON, $8.30, 7.70; SHORT DISTANCE, $7.00.

KAI-MIN, off well, was steadied along close to the pace for half, moved up to engage MINTSON and wore down the latter in the stretch run. MINTSON disposed of LADY ORCHID to get to the front and fought it out gamely in the stretch run. SHORT DISTANCE, away in tangle, worked his way to contention gradually and closed gamely. LADY ORCHID weakened gradually after showing good early speed. PROWL went evenly. MAGICIENNE wheeled at the start and closed much ground in the final half. ODDESA LAD was through early. WISE MENTOR and PETIT JEAN had no chance with the start.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Jennings Handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:21½. Off at 3:25½. Winner, G. D. Widener's dk. b. f. (2), by Haste—Deuce. Trained by W. F. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE BACK, $8.10, $4.60, $2.80; MARRIAGE, $6.50, $3.10; UP THE CREEK, $2.50.

DOUBLE BACK, well handled, raced GREY NURSE into defeat, was steadied along with UP THE CREEK and finished gamely under a drive. MARRIAGE saved ground while running close up, came through on the inside and was going fastest at the end. UP THE CREEK was rushed to contention at once, ran head and head to DOUBLE BACK leaving the backstretch, but weakened suddenly nearing the end. BUD'S BELL was held safe. BALLINDERRY was not a serious factor. GREY NURSE stopped.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:54. Winner, J. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NO ENDING, $6.00, $4.40, $3.50; MR. GRUNDY, $18.30, $10.60; ZOSTERA, $4.90.

NO ENDING, first away, withstood the early challenge of MR. GRUNDY and drew out to win easily. MR. GRUNDY was rushed to the front going to the turn and held on gamely though no match for the winner. ZOSTERA improved position gradually on the outside and closed gamely. NO SIR showed good effort. JOANNY had early speed and stopped. LADY FLASH and HEADIN' HOME dropped back suddenly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:19½. Off at 4:22. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARABOO, $7.50, $4.40, $3.30; FREDALVA, $6.60, $4.80; PACKAGE, $7.60.

PHARABOO, closest to the pace of DIGNITARY for the half, took command approaching the stretch and drew out while kept to a drive. FREDALVA, steadied along when outrun in the early stages, responded when placed to a drive, but was held safe by the winner. PACKAGE came from far back to close with a bold rush. PIRATE LASS was a keen forward factor throughout and showed good effort. PLAYING DAN hung on well in the closing test. WOULD DARE closed a gap with little help from the rider. DIGNITARY stopped. PEEDEEQUE weakened. ANCIENT ROME had early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:50. off at 4:53. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INVERMARK, $17.00, $6.50, $4.40; OCEAN ROLL, $4.90, $3.70; THE QUEEN, $4.50.

INVERMARK, allowed to settle into his best stride, came around horses to better his position with a rush leaving the backstretch and responded to punishment to be up in the concluding strides. OCEAN ROLL opened a long lead in the first quarter and weakened gradually under strong handling. THE QUEEN closed mucho ground from a slow beginning. KERMAY was hard handled and weakened at the close. MASTER LAD could not threaten seriously. GYRAL showed a good effort. KNIGHT WARRIOR had speed in spots. SHINING SUN was through after a half. SIR MIDAS dropped out of it.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

Today's running of the Bowie, a mile and five-eighths race, is the twenty-sixth. Nick Wall, who rode William Zeigler, jr.'s Esposa to victory last year, will be the only boy to ride a previous winner of the stake, who will don silks. The first 11 days' racing saw six Maryland-bred horses enter the winner's circle. They were Challedon, winner of the Pimlico Futurity; Slow Motion, Toddle On, Journey On, Lackawanna and Outdone. Their victories netted an additional $250 fee to their respective owners. A claiming record for this meeting is likely to be established before the curtain is lowered. During the first 11 days, 21 horses worth $46,500 were taken by the halter brigade.

After riding out his engagements yesterday, Alfred Robertson, contract pilot for the Milky Way Farm and Jockey Dave Wilson, left by motor for Miami. G. Bedwell today signed Jockey Vincent Polk to a contract. The lad will accompany Bedwell's stable to California when Bowie closes. H. E. Yorke, who trains the horses of Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Pike among others, arrived at Bowie with nine horses from Kentucky. Maurice Peters, who went to Narragansett Park to ride Great Union in the last Saturday's event won by War Admiral, returned. Great Union spread a hoof while preparing for the race and was scratched. There are 21 horses on Starter Jim Milton's schooling list with the adding of Tin Devil. Lacey Miss and Inactive.

BILL.

First Race—Zenana is a consistent miss and has been runner-up last two starts to fair juveniles. Has the edge over these homebreds. Cody just got up to win his last. Is in good form but may not like top weight. Balkan War has speed but quits.

Second Race—Bass Wood turned in a corking good effort behind stake fillies at Laurel and should take the measure of these maidens. Top Man was installed a hot favorite in New York in first start, finishing fourth. May be close. Predestined had good form at Laurel.

Third Race—Prattler was second to Torturer at United Hunts meet and previously showed excellent form in Maryland. Promoter figures much the best of the rest and will be right on edge after a second to Wilfrid G. last week. Edgemont for show.

Fourth Race—Kayak II had no excuses when beaten by Sun Alexandria at Laurel but meets decidedly cheaper company today. Should win. Sir Raleigh is not outmatched and is dangerous despite recent dull races. Galapas showed fair form in New England.

Fifth Race—Robert L. made a strong finish to get second behind High Velocity, last Wednesday. In form and in goods hands. Finance has run well in stakes here and may last for second money. Infidox may take it all.

Seventh Race—Audley Girl's last two races here have been dull but was a winner in New York in better company. Mayro won her last heat and will be prepped for her best effort today. Melody Maid is raising up but gets a good figure.

Eighth Race—Anhelation came from last to fourth place in a half mile at a shorter distance. Should go well here. Departed has the speed to better a poor performance in this company last out. Howard likes the distance.

Ralph Grimes Is Defeated By 6 and 5

Sinclair Advances Gipe Meets Seay At East Potomac Tony Suess Beaten

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Andrew Oliveri, District public links champion, won his third consecutive match by a one-sided margin yesterday at Rock Creek to advance to the finals of the turkey tourney, where he will meet a surprise finalist, Jack Sinclair. Meanwhile, Harding-Cupper Jimmy Gipe and W. W. Seay gained the titular round in the turkey event at East Potomac.

Oliveri was not extended in trouncing Ralph Grimes, 6 and 5, while Sinclair stopped Seay's march to the final round of both tournaments with a 2 and 1 upset triumph. Sinclair had previously upset Alex Baumgartner, but despite this, Andy, tourney medalist with a 70, will be a heavy favorite in the finals.

One flight was completed in the Rock Creek play, C. A. Irvin trouncing Tony Suess, conqueror of Anne Dolan, the "golfing waitress," by a 5 and 4 margin in the third bracket.

Jim Gipe ousted East Potomac medalist, Art Meyers, by a 3 and 2 count, while Seay scored a 2 and 1 triumph over the veteran public links player, Harry Miller, also in the semifinals of the championship flight.

Seay's semifinal defeat by Sinclair at Rock Creek prevented his gaining the finals of the third straight municipal tourney, as aside from the East Potomac play he was runner-up in the recent Anacostia event, losing to Calvin Loving.

Winners in the handicap event at East Potomac included G. M. Prince, H. C. Hendrickson, Dave Mesmer and W. K. McMahon tying for low net with 66's, Gus Kupka scoring low gross and V. G. Gorden and Nat Scop deadlocking for high net.

Present and former members of the East Potomac Golf Club will meet November 30, at 7 p. m., in an effort to reorganize the club. Robert Burton, president, and Jim Gipe, vice president, have called the meeting.

Plans to make the club a member of the U. S. G. A. and District Golf Association are underway by Course Manager Tommy Doerer, who is also interested in making public links history with a varied and lengthy tournament card next year, including a handicap system.

ROCK CREEK
(Complete second round and scattered third round results.)
First Flight
Andy Oliveri defeated Donald Sullivan, 5 and 3; Ralph Grimes defeated Jack Rosengall, 1 up, 20 holes; Jack Sinclair defeated Alex Baumgartner, 3 and 2; W. W. Seay defeated T. A. Collins, 7 and 5.
Oliveri defeated Grimes, 6 and 5; Sinclair defeated Seay, 2 and 1.

Ga. Tech Coach Withdraws Charge Of Illegal Play

Atlanta, Nov. 14 (AP).—W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech head football coach, withdrew today his charge that Alabama gained a 14-14 tie with his team last Saturday through an illegal pass play.

After seeing motion pictures of the game, Alexander wired Coach Frank Thomas, of Alabama, the 65-yard touchdown play was not illegal under the "screen pass" rule as interpreted by Arthur Hutcheson, secretary of the Southern Football Officials Association.

Partial text of the telegram to Thomas:

"Pictures show your team legal on disputed play as per Hutchens' gathered around one of our de-

"However, your line had crossed the scrimmage line and interpretation on screen pass. fenders, preventing him from going to the ball.

"The pictures show how really good the Alabama team was in the second half.

"Am giving this to the press today in view of my statement Sunday."

In Rock Creek Tourney Finals

Andy Oliveri, District Public Links champion, advanced to the finals of the annual Rock Creek Turkey tournament yesterday by defeating Ralph Grimes, 6 and 5, in a one-sided final encounter. Jack Sinclair will be Oliveri's for in the finals. The latter was also tourney medalist.

Riofski, Eberle Are Lost To District Grid Elevens

Hoyas Lose Center for Maryland Tilt Colonial End Suffers Broken Leg Bone Bergman Leaves for Father's Bedside

By Jack Munhall.

The local college elevens enjoyed what amounted to a day of rest yesterday, recuperating from week-end skirmishes and planning their line of attack for coming foes.

Over at Georgetown, where the undefeated Hoyas are preparing for their arch rival, Maryland, Coach Jack Hagerty and his assistants started their task of convincing their squad that Maryland, despite its miserable season, is not to be held lightly Saturday. Overconfidence is the one thing Hagerty fears and he is determined that if Georgetown's perfect season is spoiled by the Terps it won't be because of a mental letdown.

Georgetown as well as Maryland are in excellent physical condition for their annual classic, which is expected to fill Byrd Stadium to capacity. The only Georgetown player not available for the game is Lefty Riofski, capable center, who received a fractured hand against West Virginia. Maryland has its usual list of casuals but not new injuries. Charlie Weidinger, its ace passer, is in better shape than he has been in some weeks as his record of 13 completions in 24 attempts against Florida attests.

George Washington, however, was not so fortunate Saturday, for it was learned yesterday that Bob Eberle, starting end against Kansas, suffered a broken tibia bone in his left leg and will be lost for the season. The loss of Eberle at this time is a serious one for the Colonials, and may necessitate the shifting of Bob Nowaskey from the backfield to his former end position. Eberle has been counted on as a regular since Nowaskey's transfer.

The Colonials plan no rough work this week. They will leave for Williamsport, Pa., Friday morning and, after a workout there in the afternoon, will continue on to Lewisburg, where Bucknell is met on Saturday.

Catholic University's squad, preparing for an invasion of New Orleans to meet Loyola of the South on Sunday, will be in the hands of Assistant Coach "Fod" Cotton this week, for Dutch Bergman left town suddenly this morning to fly to the bedside of his 81-year-old father, Joseph Bergman, who is seriously ill in Peru, Indiana. The elder Bergman had been ill for some time, and Sunday took a decided turn for the worse. "Dutch" will join the team in New Orleans Sunday.

Runyon, McSpaden Return to U. S.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 14 (AP).—Paul Runyan, P. G. A. champion, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., returned by Pan American Clipper today after a month's flying golf tour of South America.

Runyan, who won the Argentine Open, said the two professionals encountered excellent courses and a high caliber of competition. Martine Pose, Jose Jurado and Enrique Bartalino, Argentine pros, could hold their own, Runyan said, with the best American golfers.

Runyan and McSpaden, who played in Buenos Aires, Lima, Peru; Santiago, Chile; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Puerto Rico, booked passage tonight on an Eastern Airliner for New York, but said they would return South later for the winter golf circuit.

150 Enter Pin Event

From 10 Cities At Silver Spring Bowl Saturday

Over 150 bowlers from 10 cities will participate in the annual fall invitation bowling tournament sponsored by the Washington Junior Board of Commerce on Saturday at the Silver Spring Bowling Alleys, Howard de Franceaux, chairman, announced today.

Official sanction from the National Duckpin Bowling Congress has been obtained for the event.

Prizes and awards for both team and individual high scores totaling more than a dozen will be vied for by the different cities. Acceptances have already been received from Philadelphia, Richmond, Baltimore, Leesburg, Winchester and Norfolk.

Local business houses that have contributed prizes for the event are O'Donnell's Sea Food Grill, Annapolis Hotel, Call Carl, Inc., Consolidated Terminal Co., A. Smith Bowman Distilleries, M. S. Ginn & Co., Pearson and Crain, and Calvin Ourand. The junior board is putting up a handsome cup for high individual game.

Local bowlers who are expected to make strong bids for championship honors are, besides de Franceaux, Joe Elliott, Lowell Hendrick, Earl Spiker and James Gardella.

Ryan, Jurich Fight Draw

Manchester, England, Nov. 14.—Jackie Jurich, San Jose, Calif., flyweight, tonight drew with Paddy Ryan, of London, in a sizzling 12-round bout to determine a challenger for the world flyweight title, claimed by Peter Kane, of Liverpool, England.

Jurich slowed Ryan with a chugging left that stopped the Englishman in his tracks. Ryan began working on Jurich's head from long range and although Jurich was able to handle many of his rushes, he was scoring well in the closing rounds.

Hastings, Nebr., Nov. 14 (AP).—Leslie G. Nunamaker, 49, former major league baseball player, died at his home here today after an illness of several months. He was in the majors 16 years, catching for the Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees, St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians.

Penn State Sophomore Wins Collegiate Run

William Smith Triumphs in 5-Mile Event Finishes 200 Yards Ahead of Manhattan Entry Turns in Fast Time for I. C. 4-A. Grind

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 14.—Billy Smith, sensational Penn State sophomore, ran the legs off 125 rivals in the thirtieth annual Intercollegiate Cross Country Championship today over a torturous 5-mile course in Van Cortlandt Park.

The 126-pounder, a former Philadelphia newsboy, finished fully 200 yards ahead of second place Joe Moclair, of Manhattan College, as a bitter wind whistled through his shorts and sped him on. He raced the distance in 26 minutes 33.3 seconds, which bordered on the sensational in view of two stiff hills he had to cross.

Despite Billy's noble effort, however, the team championship went to Manhattan's harriers, who broke a five-year reign of Michigan State in the event. Placing five men among the first 16 finishers, Manhattan compiled a point score of 43, with Michigan State second, 76; Pittsburgh, third, 90; and Alfred, fourth, 109.

MacMitchell Wins

Leslie MacMitchell, of New York University, captured the 3-mile freshman race in 15:58.8, with Vincent Carnevale, of Georgetown, second in 16:23. Penn State won the team title with 52 points, followed by Syracuse with 108, Manhattan 120, and Princeton, 128.

To get an idea of the haste with which Smith went through the fields and over the hills in the varsity event, it should be noted that he covered the first 3 miles in 15:45.4, or at a faster clip than the freshman winner ran the same distance.

Smith, a nephew of the famous old fighter, Mysterious Billy Smith, never has lost a college cross country run. Today he took out like a scared rabbit at the starting gun and never was headed, though Moclair managed to keep him in sight.

Sprints Up Hills

"The guy isn't human," Moclair complained later. "I kept pouring the pressure on him all the way, but he didn't seem to notice. He runs fast on the flat, but he sprints up the hills."

Behind Smith and Moclair the others came struggling in at long and painful intervals. Donald Smith, of Maine, New England cross country champion, came in third, some 30 yards behind Moclair, with Richard Frey of Michigan State, fourth; Lawrence Moriarty of Manhattan, fifth; Morgan Elmer, Lehigh's lone entry, sixth; Walter Sterner, Pittsburgh, seventh; Bob Conkling, Manhattan, eighth; Roy Fehr, Michigan State, ninth, and George Keller, Michigan State, tenth.

Smith's Penn State team wound up in fifth place with 110 points, followed by Syracuse, 166; Cornell, 215; Maine, 216; Yale, 217; Princeton, 247; Harvard, 260; M. I. T., 288; Fordham, 368; N. Y. U., 384; Rutgers, 407; Columbia, 499, and College of the City of New York, 504.

1—William Smith, Penn State, 26:32.4.
2—Joseph Moclair, Manhattan, 27:00.
3—Donald Smith, Maine, 27:12.
4—Richard Frey, Michigan State, 27:15.
5—L. Moriarity, Manhattan, 27:27.
6—Morgan Elmer, Lehigh, 27:28.
7—Walter Sterner, Pittsburgh, 27:34.
8—Robert Conklin, Manhattan, 27:37.
9—Roy Fehr, Michigan State, 27:38.
10—George Keller, Michigan State, 27:39.
11—Bradley Rendell, Alfred, 27:42.
12—Frank Maule, jr., Penn State, 27:47.
13—Edward Lazasse, Alfred, 27:48.
14—Albert Boulanger, Pittsburgh, 27:51.
15—George Sheehan, Manhattan, 27:52.
16—Francis Furey, Manhattan, 27:55.
17—Edward Lemanski, M. I. T., 28:00.
18—Raymond Vacco, Manhattan, 28:02.
19—A. Zamborsky, Pittsburgh, 28:12.

Wire for 2 Players Replace Injured Men Bennie, Zahn Out

Sponsor Chris Heurich, jr., yesterday was burning the wires in his effort to sign for Washington's Heurich Brewers two outstanding out of town players for the 1938-39 American Basketball League season.

Emergency measures became necessary yesterday when it was learned that both Ralph Bennie and Arthur Zahn, veteran guards, would be missing from action indefinitely due to injuries suffered in Heurich's losing 31 to 37 stand against the Newark Hebrews in Newark Sunday night.

A badly broken nose that will prevent his scrimmaging for at last ten days and may deprive Huerich of his services in Washington's initial American Basketball League game with Philadelphia Sphas in Philadelphia on the night of November 26 was suffered by Zahn. Bennie is nursing a recurrence of a twisted left knee and his return to action is contingent upon his ability to adjust himself to a special knee brace ordered him by Heurich yesterday.

Informed of these injuries Heurich lost no time in his effort to contact two high grade players yesterday and indications are that he will have some announcement to make anent the signing of new talent shortly.

In releasing the revised American Basketball League's schedule, which includes Washington's 36 games for 1938-1939, President John J. O'Brien, of the American League, discloses that the American League has abandoned its split season of last year and will play the schedule through without interruption.

At the termination of the regular season the four teams finishing in first division are to participate in a President's Cup series in which the winning players are to split a $1,000 pool set aside by the American League and also will gain claim to the league's championship.

The play-off involving first division teams, O'Brien insists, keeps interest alive throughout the schedule and places within grasp of every team in the circuit an opportunity to win the title.

Army Works Out For Princeton

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 14 (AP).—Army's football team retreated before a cold wind today and went into the new field house to begin preparation for Saturday's Princeton game and the battle with Navy a week later.

Although Coach Bill Wood did not schedule a regular scrimmage, the line worked out against junior varsity teams while the backfield practiced its defense against Princeton aerial plays. The latter part of the session was devoted to assignment drill and blocking as a team with the varsity running through the plays planned for use against the Tigers.

Hoyas

because it is generally agreed that coaches who can get the maximum from their material and players who have the will to win and the desire to learn are requisites of any successful team in any sport, we would say the third has been the real reason for Georgetown's success

Produce "Money" Player

All season the Hoyas have been uncanny in their ability to produce a "money" player just when one was needed. Take Mellendeck, for example. In Georgetown's overwhelming victories over "Chesapeake Conference" opposition, Mellendeck was just another back. As a matter of fact, he was so unimpressive that those who last year had predicted a great career for the speedy halfback, were pausing for a second thought.

But Mellendeck, who wasn't needed against Hampden-Sydney and the rest, was a different player when Georgetown tackled Manhattan. It was Mellendeck running, Mellendeck passing, Mellendeck punting and Mellendeck on defense that enabled Georgetown to win the game. Gotham writers still remember the trim, long-legged Hoya who set up the decisive touchdown with a great run off a pass from Jules Koshlap; who twice averted certain Manhattan touchdowns with timely tackles and who in the waning minutes of play stood in the shadow of the Georgetown goal and kicked out of danger when a blocked kick might have been disastrous.

And so it has been all along. In that same game Koshlap, a sophomore who had been good but not exceptional in early games, and Joe Frank and Francis Daly and Bob Kercher all turned in super brands of football. Daly, especially, was a tartar on defense in his first start of the season.

McFadden Becomes Star

The most recent Georgetown player to acquire a reputation as a "money player" is young Joe McFadden, sophomore quarterback. McFadden until the West Virginia game was probably the most underestimated and inconspicuous member of the Georgetown team. He had directed the team well and carried out his assignments to the satisfaction of the exacting Hagerty, but his work was nothing to make the headlines.

But against the Mountaineers it was not Mellendeck and it was not Koshlap that sparked the Hoyas in the midst of their most ineffectual offensive performance of the season. It was young Joe McFadden who in four minutes made a sensational leaping catch of a touchdown pass from Mellendeck and then returned an intercepted pass 55 yards for a second score, adding both extra points from placement.

Georgetown has a fine team, soundly grounded in fundamentals of offense and defense and is possessed of an inspiring competitive spirit. But when you single out one big reason the Hoyas are undefeated, don't overlook the "climax" players, Mellendeck, Koshlap, Frank, Kercher, Burke and Daly.

Zaharias On Mat Card

Abe Coleman and Chris Zaharias, sawed off sticks of wrestling dynamite, have been added to Thursday night's wrestling card at the Arena, along with a villain or two in support of the main bout. Ed Meske, the blond bruiser, and Gino Garibaldi are in feature in the bout.

Bibber McCoy, the old trouble-maker, and Ed Newman meet in the semi-final bout, which is just about a gilt-edge guarantee for action. McCoy has patterned his style after the Duseks, and gone them one better in several instances, while Newman is one of the strong, he-men of the old school.

Coleman and Zaharias are expected to manufacture one of the most exciting bouts on the card, for they appear to be evenly matched and possess more than a passing knowledge of the sport. Coleman, despite his size, has met most of the giants in the business, and acquitted himself with honors.

Zaharias is a newcomer to these parts, but found immediate favor with the customers because of his aggressive tactics. A brother of the better known George Zaharias, Chris is prone to slip in a foul here and there along the way, but takes quite a bit of illegal punching in return.

Flaherty Guest Of Bons Vivants

Ray Flaherty, coach of the Washington Redskins, will be the principal speaker at the regular monthly meeting and dinner of the Bon Vivants, of Washington, to be held at the Lee House today at 5 o'clock.

An adjunct of Flaherty's speech will be showing of motion pictures of Redskins' football contests, part of which will be shown in slow motion, while Coach Flaherty comments on individual plays as they appear. Several members of the Washington Redskins will accompany Flaherty to the meeting.

Woodmont Cards Final Golf Event

The Woodmont golf committee has scheduled an elaborate turkey tournament as the closing event on the club golf card next Sunday, November 20, according to Chairman Leopold V. Freudberg.

The turkeys will be the main prize but no one will be felt out, and prizes will be awarded low nets in Classes A, B and C, low gross, selective holes, entranes prize, lucky number and others. It's an annual feature of the club card.

Hoyas Get Mention for Sugar Bowl

Rose Bowl 'on Spot' Coast Teams Beaten Notre Dame Refuses Ballyhoo Starts

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 14.—Officials of the New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association have arrived in New York to make plans for the Sugar Bowl game in the Crescent City January 2, and the annual parade of postseason bowl games tonight was under way.

This year the New Year's extravaganzas will be played the day after New Year's, as January 1 falls on Sunday.

The fact that only six major teams are unbeaten and untied, and one of them—Notre Dame—already has declared itself out of consideration for any postseason games, leaves the selection of bowl opponents this season more difficult than in almost any previous year.

The Rose Bowl, daddy of the New Year's classic, appears to be in the toughest spot of all because there isn't an unbeaten team on the West Coast. The Western representative is likely to be California again, inasmuch as Southern California, which has a chance to tie the Golden Bears for the title, has been beaten twice by Alabama and Washington and has yet to face Notre Dame.

South vs. North

The Notre Dame-U. S. C. game December 3 and California's late December date with Georgia Tech at Berkeley complicate the situation, but the latter game may be canceled if the Bears get the Rose Bowl assignment.

Herbert Benson, president of the Midwinter Sports Association, declared in New York today that the Sugar Bowl classic would present a Southern team against a Northern eleven.

"We are definitely committed to present a North-South game," said Benson. "The three leading Southern contenders are T. C. U., Tennessee and Duke. Among the Northern teams under consideration are Carnegie Tech and Holy Cross. Cornell and Dartmouth also might be considered, but we understand they don't want to play any postseason games. We have a committee of 25 sports writers from the South and North voting on their choices and the committee expects to select the two teams by December 1."

Present Situation

Rose Bowl, Pasadena—California vs. Duke, Texas Christian or Tennessee.

Cotton Bowl, Dallas—Texas Christian or Texas Tech vs. Oklahoma.

Orange Bowl, Miami—A Southern team vs. Georgetown, Villanova or Holy Cross.

Notre Dame, one of the leading contenders for the national title, has announced that it will end its season with the Southern California game.

Texas Christian, which has Rice and S. M. U. left to play, appears to be the key team in the bowl scramble. Two bowls already have shown interest in T. C. U. and there is a strong likelihood that the Horned Frogs will be the No. 1 choice to get the Rose Bowl assignment from the East.

Duke Is Darkhorse

Officials of the Cotton Bowl are bringing pressure to bear to keep T. C. U. at home to meet either Duke, Tennessee or Carnegie Tech in the Dallas game, but the chances are that if a Rose Bowl invitation is extended to the Horned Frogs, the players will be allowed to decide for themselves which game they want to play. If that situation comes up it's a 1000-to-1 shot that the players will vote to go to Pasadena instead of to Dallas, 30 miles away.

Duke appears to be the darkhorse in the bowl competition.

If the Blue Devils can conquer Pittsburgh on November 26 they may possibly become the No. 1 candidate to get the Eastern Rose Bowl bid. Tennessee, needing victories over Kentucky and Mississippi to complete an unbeaten, untied season, is a cinch to land in either the Rose, Sugar or Cotton bowl if the Volunteers want to play a post-season game.

Two Softball Tilts Tonight

Both first and second places in the Community Center Indoor Softball League will be at stake tonight in the double-header to be played at Tech High Gym, starting at 7 o'clock with a game between Plaza Beverage Co. and Marine Barracks. Victory Post and Community Center All Stars meet in the second game.

Victory Post leads the league with three wins and no defeats, followed by Community Center All Stars and Plaza Beverage Co. each of which has won three and lost one.

Joseph Procita Gives Exhibition

Joseph Procita, well-known pocket billiard tournament player, will give an exhibition tonight at the Arcadia Billiard parlors, Fourteenth and Park road northwest, in the third of a series of world-famous professional billiard players.

He will be opposed by Ray Miller, local player in 125 point match. After the match, Procita will give an exhibition of trick shots.

Umpires Banquet Slated Thursday

G. B. Watt is slated to become president of the D. C. Umpires at the annual banquet Thursday night at Snider's Cafe. Other officers to be installed include Albert C. Jeffries, vice president, and Mattie Fry, secretary-treasurer.

Arch McDonald will be master of ceremonies, while invited guests include Clark Griffith, Bucky Harris, Ray Flaherty, Sammy Baugh, Judge Thomas Mattingly, Judge Edward M. Curran, and local high school and college coaches.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Round-Up

New York, Nov. 14.—There are so many things to write about after such a prolonged crowded week-end as the one just passed that its difficult to choose a subject.

I might, for instance, go all the way back to Friday afternoon and the very entertaining fellow who dropped in and told me about his adventures as a prize fighter, and especially why they call him young Corbett 3d, when his name is Ralph Giordano and he is old enough to have a son who watches him fight.

VIDMER.

When Ralph was a lad himself, selling papers on the streets of Fresno, Calif., a boxing show was arranged by the newspaper he peddled. One of the features was a match between the best fighter among the boys who sold papers in the morning and the best fighter of the boys who sold papers in the afternoon. Ralph Giordano was one of them.

"Ladies and gentlemen," boomed the announcer as the kids stood in their corners, "introducing Kid Jim Jeffries," and he waved his hand at Ralph's opponent, "and this corner Young Corbett."

He has been Young Corbett ever since, but there have been so many young Corbetts in the professional ring that they had to tack the "3d" on to keep the records straight.

Or I might go back to Friday night and the Armistice ball. Sitting in the box beside me was a lovely lady with honey-colored hair, a charming smile and a fascinating accent. Down below the orchestra was playing music that carried back over the years—"Keep the Home Fires Burning" . . . "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" . . . "Over There" . . . "Long, Long Trail" . . . songs that stirred the faint echoes of memory and made everyone's eyes glisten.

But the lovely lady looked down with cool, clear eyes.

"Are you British?" I asked, trying to catch her accent.

Allied Armies

Half the dancers were in uniform . . . the dark blue of England, the green of Italy, the powder blue of France, the olive drab of the United States . . . they were the uniforms of 20 years ago and pictures came back thronging from the past. As though by magic time was turned back to another November evening and those who watched had a far look and a faint smile as they remembered.

But the lovely lady didn't smile as she took in the scene unemotionally.

"No."

The floor was cleared of the gay dancing throng. There was a blare of bugles and a military pageant was underway. It filled the floor, with flags flying, Scottish pipes playing and dums rolling. Pulses pounded and hearts beat a little faster as the martial music flowed through the vast room like hot blood through excited veins.

And then there was a sudden silence and a trumpeter sounded taps for those who fell and never arose again. Even after the last lingering note died away and the lights came up, those who saw and heard stood, still under the spell. And then the laughter and the music came again.

But through all the ceremonies, so impressive in their simplicity, the lovely lady had stood aloof, apart from it all. And I wondered how she could remain so untouched.

"You are not an American," I said. "What are you?"

"I am a German," she replied.

How to Watch Football

Or, in a lighter mood, I might write about the Yale-Princeton game. Or rather, not so much about the game, as the sideshow to which I was admitted.

A couple of years ago Lou Little wrote a book called "How To Watch Football." It was a very fine piece of work, but Lou didn't tell it all. Or perhaps he never has been on Cupid Black's annual pilgrimage to the Yale-Princeton game. Mr. Black, who may be remembered as the captain and all-American guard of a great Yale team, has his own ideas of how to watch football.

He simply takes a train, not just a seat in a train, but the whole train. He stocks it with food and drink and packs it with a couple of hundred charming people, mostly old blues. And then they go to the game.

He did it again this year and there was great fun and hilarity from the moment the carnival caravan pulled out from the Pennsylvania Station until everyone had settled into seats on the 50-yard line. There were tales told of other games and one I remember.

John Reed Kilpatrick, one of Yale's immortal ends, graduated in 1911 and afterwards he fought through a war in France. When he came back he brought with him his bride from Jugoslavia, and they arrived right in the midst of a football season. Immediately the stately Stefanie began hearing talk about football and the game next Saturday and what a great player her husband was.

She didn't know what this football was all about but it must be very important, she felt, because everyone she met seemed so excited. And besides her husband was a great player. Everyone said so.

It was rather a bother to make all the preparations for going to the game, and it was a long trip to New Haven, still she went through with it and it seemed worthwhile.

"But do you know," she said, "it wasn't until the game started that I found out my husband was not going to play."

And, believe it or not, even though it was a Yale train, there was just as much fun and laughter on the trip back again.

Mary Browne Visits G. W.

To Play Exhibition Lectures on Tennis Here for Three Days

Mary K. Browne, three times national tennis singles champion of the United States, will be presented in an exhibition mixed doubles tennis match and a demonstration of tennis techniques and court tactics tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the McKinley High School Gymnasium, by the Department of Physical Education for women of George Washington University.

In the match Miss Browne will play with two men and a woman from among the ranking players of the District.

Miss Browne is making a three-day visit to the university for the purpose of instructing students in tennis technique. Her schedule while here will include a lecture-demonstration for all the women's sports classes on Wednesday afternoon at 1:40 in the university gymnasium, and work with various classes on the tennis courts (Fourteenth street courts in Potomac Park) tomorrow and Thursday and Friday afternoons.

A formal dinner will be given in her honor Friday night at 6:30 at the Women's City Club which will be attended by undergraduates who are majoring in physical education at the university and graduates who were physical education majors.

Miss Browne, who was twice captain of the Wightman Cup International team, and Wimbledon doubles champion, has been a teacher at Lake Erie College, Painesville, Ohio, since her retirement from tournament play, and makes frequent instruction tours to colleges throughout the country.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

BUY NO ANTI-FREEZE

...until you read these facts about DU PONT "ZERONE"*

A FRIENDLY WARNING: You can-not be sure of getting the best value in anti-freeze until you know what Du Pont has to offer in "Zerone."

First of all, extraordinary anti-freeze protection. Scientific tests prove that "Zerone" would keep water from freezing solid even at 215° below zero. You'll never encounter temperatures like that, so you can be sure "Zerone" used in accordance with directions will protect your car in the coldest weather you'll ever experience.

The materials from which "Zerone" is made are so effective you need comparatively little "Zerone" to achieve protection. That's economy. Properly used, replacements of "Zerone" are little indeed—and that's economy, too.

Furthermore, scientific tests prove that the mixture of "Zerone" and water passes off engine heat better than water alone. That improves engine performance.

"Zerone" in a clean cooling system prevents formation of rust and corrosion—avoids power losses, helps save fuel and oil. Those are the facts, so ask your dealer to protect your radiator with "Zerone" today. It's only $1.00 a gallon. Du Pont, "Zerone" Division, Wilmington, Delaware.

Perpetual Re-elects Dr. Custis

Bishop Heads Board
Baltz Is Secretary
57th Annual Meeting

Dr. Marvin A. Custis was re-elected president of Perpetual Building Association at the fifty-seventh annual meeting held last night. At the same time the shareholders returned all other officers and directors to their positions. Arthur G. Bishop continues as chairman of the board, Vernon G. Owen, vice president and Edward C. Baltz, secretary. Franklyn W. Harper, treasurer, Raymond K. Espey, assistant secretary, William R. Dyer, assistant treasurer and William H. Rippard, auditor were the other officers named.

According to the secretary's report, resources of Perpetual increased by over $2,000,000 during the year bringing total assets up to $48,000,000. It was stated that no other association in the United States has as large a balance sheet. The report also disclosed that during the year loans were made aggregating $15,500,000 while surplus and reserve accounts increased to $2,500,000. Directors named were Samuel Scrivener, Dr. William G. Schauffler, Vernon G. Owen, John C. Scofield, R. K. Espey, F. W. Harper, E. C. Baltz, A. G. Bishop and Dr. Custis.

Prior to the annual meeting many of the association's officers and directors attended a birthday luncheon given by the Advertising Club at the Raleigh in honor of Secretary Baltz who was celebrating his fiftieth anniversary.

Profit-Taking Wipes Out Election Gains
Street Remains in Optimistic Mood
Steel Shares Leaders in Decline

New York, Nov. 14.—A session of profit taking in the stock market today erased the post-election gains. The list gave ground grudgingly however, and it was apparent that Wall Street had not lost its optimism. The recession of 0.91 point in the composite average, moreover, did not take away the gain that was scored on the day before election, when there was a sizeable bulge based on the assumption that the voting would show a swing to the right.

A correction after the Munich agreement was far overdue, in the opinion of technicians in the Street. For four weeks after it became obvious that there would be no major war in Europe, at this time, the market held within a narrow range. Stocks broke out of this range on the upside when the election went so solidly for the conservative forces. This increased the expectation of a corrective reaction, and we had it today, and under conditions which did nothing to upset the optimism of the bullish forces.

All groups of stocks contributed to the decline, with the steels, which had been in the forefront of the advance, reflecting the greatest selling. This developed despite the unusually favorable estimate of operations released today by the American Iron and Steel Institute. This showed the rate for the week to be 62.6 per cent of capacity against 61.0 per cent last week. Only a few weeks ago the assumption was that operations might reach 60 per cent before the turn of the year but were not likely to exceed this figure. The above rate, which sets a new peak for the year, reflects in large measure the expanding needs of the automotive industry. Sheet and strip mills are said to be in a good position to maintain active operations for the balance of the year.

Wright Aero Strong

Losses in individual speculative favorites were not sensational and declines of from 1 to 2 points were the rule. A few individual issues stood out against the trend, notably Wright Aero, which was up 5½ points at one time and closed up 2½. This member of the aviation division has not been as active as others in the group listed on the big board. In general, the aviations followed the downward course of the balance of the list. Boeing managed to close unchanged after release of its unsatisfactory earnings statement. Douglas dropped 2½ and North American Aviation a fraction.

Steels and motors featured the list, the most active stock of the day being Republic, which dropped 1¼. United States Steel was off 2½ and Bethlehem nearly as much. General Motors and Chrysler were soft, which is contrary to the normal action of such leaders on the opening of the automobile show, but the Street regarded the action as nothing more than profit taking after the good advances of last week.

In the group of stocks to show independent strength, Schenley played an important part, being one of the day's most active securities and closing up 1½. Strength was said to reflect the prospect of marked improvement in earnings in the final quarter. Schenley has been a disappointment to its followers this year and has been the subject of a number of unfavorable rumors about the Street. It has given some poor performances in the market at times when the other whisky stocks have been doing well.

Store Shares in Demand

Also showing special support were the mercantile issues, which responded to cooler weather, American Machine & Foundry, which held on to a gain of more than a point, Budd Manufacturing, which was up fractionally on better support for the equipment issues, and Deere & Co., which led the agricultural machinery issues but later gave way to the selling pressure against the general market.

Losses of around 1 to 2 points were sustained by such leaders as Can, American Smelting, Anaconda, General Electric, Goodyear, Great Northern preferred, Johns Manville, Nickel, Sears Roebuck, and Union Carbide. High priced Allied Chemical dropped 5 and Westinghouse was off 2¾. While these losses did much to eliminate gains made since the election, the Street maintained its optimism and appeared convinced that substantial improvement in business, as well as in security prices, is the order of the immediate future.

Commodities followed a narrow course. Good support for corn helped the grain markets but gains in this cereal were cut down by profit taking, after the six consecutive days of advancing prices. The close on corn was off ¼ cent to plus the same amount while wheat was off ¼ to up ⅛ cent. New highs for the move were made by the active months in cotton, which closed unchanged to up 6 points.

Bonds Reactionary

Listed bonds were dull today, and almost all groups of issues showed modest losses. In the foreign section declines ranged to 5 points, with German bonds hardest hit owing to the damage done German prestige and trade by the latest wave of anti-Semitism. United States Treasury bonds drifted lower, but best grade corporate bonds were steady. Speculative corporate bonds sold down along with equities. Turnover in all issues was $7,000,000.

German government bonds dropped by fractions to 2 points, in a mild selling movement occasioned by the strenuous war against Jews. European bonds generally were unsettled, since it now appears that still more arms will be piled up by all nations, to ward off the eventual threat of general war. Australian and Canadian issues held rather well. Among Latin-American default issues the trend was slowly downward.

Speculative railroad bonds reflected the unsettlement of the equities section, but the losses mostly were held to a point or less. Activity diminished on the downward move of prices, which is regarded as a good sign. Rail holding bonds were good, while utility holding issues remained stable. Industrial convertibles were irregular, and declines were the rule among commodity bonds. Local tractions again attracted some interest.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds were down 1-32 to 10-32 point, as large institutions remained on the sidelines awaiting the terms of the December financing. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations also lost a little ground. But the best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds held their levels well, with some bonds still at best figures of the year.

Cotton Firm; Range Narrow

New York Nov. 14 (AP).—Cotton moved irregularly within a 5-point range today. Early advances were lost under liquidation and hedging but the market steadied to close net unchanged to 6 points higher. March, which had sold off from 8.58 to 8.53, recovered to a final price of 8.56.

The market opened 2 to 6 points higher in sympathy with steadier cables and on trade and foreign buying. With most positions selling at new highs for the movement, a little realizing developed a rally of October to 8 cents attracted hedging and December liquidation was in evidence during most of the day.

Potomac Land Bank Refunds

Sale of $800,000 Potomac Joint Stock Land Bank 2s, of 1941, to refund an equal amount of the same maturity, bearing a 3 per cent coupon, was reported yesterday by Folger, Nolan & Co., Washington investment banking firm.

The Potomac Joint Stock Land Bank, while chartered in Alexandria, has had its offices in Washington. Its president is Donald S. Nace; Arthur Peter is chairman of the board and Robert T. Scott, vice president.

The original bonds of the bank bore 4½ and 5 per cent coupons. These bonds were retired in 1936-7 and refunded with 3 per cent issues of approximately $1,350,000 purchased by Folger, Nolan & Co.

Machine Tool Orders Top 5-Year Average

Cleveland, Nov. 14 (AP).—The National Machine Tool Builders Association reported today its October index of machine tool orders stood at 118.1, a slight advance from September's index of 117.4.

An increase in domestic business, the association said, was offset by lower volume of foreign orders. The 118.8 average for the last three months compares with the five-year, 1933-1937, average of 96.6

Rise Too New To Bank Upon, Says Col. Ayres

Capital Flow the Key
Rails a Big Problem
Prompt Solution Vital

Cleveland, Nov. 14.—"No one is wise enough to know as yet whether this business recovery will prove to be of relatively long duration and vigorous development, or be instead comparatively brief and restricted," says Col. Leonard P. Ayres today in the bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co., of which he is vice president. He adds:

"Not only does no one know the answer to that important question, but this period of upturn is still of too recent origin to have developed the signs and symptoms necessary for formulating a well-reasoned judgment about it.

"Possibly the issue has already been decided by the report of the fact-finding board which presented its finding in the wage dispute between the railroad managements and the unions. Perhaps that report may prevent a sustained recovery because it may obstruct capital spending by the railroads and the public utilities, and discourage investors from purchasing their securities.

"This recovery can be only a relatively brief one if it must continue to depend for its impetus mainly on the flow of emergency spending by the Federal Government. It can become a long and sustained recovery if the flow of capital funds into expanding enterprise grows large enough to take over most of the burden of spending money for supplying much larger pay rolls supporting many more workers.

Deficit Financing

"Private enterprise having faith in the prospects for profits can do that on a long-term basis, but Government spending dependent on deficit financing can carry that burden only briefly.

"The fact-finding board decided that employes in a federally regulated industry have vested rights in their pay which are independent of the ability of their employers to earn enough to pay prosperity wages and still remain solvent. They decided that one of the chief reasons against any wage reduction was that such a reduction would benefit several still prosperous roads that do not need help. They decided that more railroad receiverships might be desirable.

"Under these circumstances, and unless Congress can promptly solve the complex railroad problem, the carriers must restrict to barest essentials their expenditures for replacements and improvements. They cannot contribute much to recovery. Utilities must realize that the newly formulated doctrines apply to them also, and must adopt safe policies looking toward remaining solvent, rather than the risky ones of expansion."

Pound Sinks On Trade Pact

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The persistence of unconfirmed reports in the financial district that the British sterling-dollar parity would be around $4.50-$4.60 in the event a reciprocal trade agreement is signed between the United States and England brought new weakness to sterling and other European currencies today.

The pound dropped more than 2 cents to $4.71 in terms of the dollar, and was under heavy pressure. The French franc, Belgian belga, Swiss francs and Netherlands were also lower, although to a narrower extent.

One banking house said the details of the French revaluation of the franc indicated to them that the eventual dollar-sterling parity might be around $4.51. Another quarter placed the parity at between $4.50 and $4.55.

Anaconda Copper Nets 18 Cents a Share

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Anaconda Copper Mining Co., reported today net profit for the September quarter amounting to $1,647,635 before depletion of metal mines, or 18 cents a share with no provision made for surtax on undistributed profits. This compares with $7,837,170 or 90 cents a share for the like 1937 period, and $1,624,847 for the June, 1938, quarter.

For the first nine months of 1938 net profit was $5,657,998, or 65 cents a share, compared with $26,965,164 or $3.11 a share for the like 1937 period.

Strong Corn Holds Wheat Prices Steady

Export Sales Reported U. S. Loans Sought Visible Wheat Less

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Helped by reports that moderate amounts of United States corn afloat had been purchased overseas, corn prices averaged higher today, and helped to steady wheat.

As a result of profit-taking due to six consecutive days of advances, however, the new upturns of corn values were slight, and were not fully maintained. Announcement of 1,109,000 bushels decrease in the United States wheat visible supply total aided late rallies of prices.

Farmers were reported as continuing to crib their corn in large volume to obtain Government loans. Notable scarcity of rural offerings of corn attracted special notice.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were ¼ cent off to ¼ up compared with Saturday's finish, December, 48¼-48⅜; May, 51⅝-51¾; wheat was varying from ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance; December, 63⅞-63¾; May, 66-65⅞; oats unchanged to ⅛ setback; rye, ⅛ lower to ¼ bulge, and provisions showing 2 cents drop to 5 cents climb.

Bob Burns Says—

I've always heard that the only way to find out what a woman really looks like is to see her at 6 o'clock in the mornin'. I always understand that a woman was at her worst then because she hadn't had a chance to put on any cosmetics.

The other night I kinda got in bad with an actress' agent when he pointed her out and began ravin' about how beautiful she was. He says "That's one girl that don't have 'ta use cosmetics to make herself beautiful!"

I said "Well, would you be willin' to have her photographed at 6 o'clock in the morning?" and he said "No, that's usually her bed time and she's pretty tired then!"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

POSSIBLY no government in the world favors collectors of all sorts as does Uncle Sam.

The story concerns the proof coins that Uncle Sam gets out especially for the hundreds of thousands of coin collectors in America and abroad. And this work, internationally acclaimed for its super-perfection, is done by the regularly employed personnel in the Philadelphia mint. The task of producing these super-coins is sandwiched between the daily work of making the more everyday coins that you jingle in your pocket.

First off, the dies are specially prepared to give impressions of such sharpness and beauty that the most fault-finding collector can't find a flaw. The coins are struck on hydraulic rather than electric presses.

And when the coins ensue from the presses, the craftsman catches them in gloved hands to prevent even a fingerprint. A fingerprint would be vast factor in the consideration of a collector.

Thereafter, every individual coin goes under a microscope. The chances of imperfection are so reduced that not a collector, so far as has come to public attention, has ever lost one moment's sleep because of a single flaw in his collection.

Then the Mint officials begin scrutinizing the orders; and many of these come from foreign governments which have large collections of Uncle Sam's proof coins. Other orders come from the far ends of North America.

But, before going any further with this, the Mint officials ask us to emphasize that the proof coins can't be obtained in Washington—despite the thousands of letters of request that come to the office of the director every year. The coins can be obtained only through the Philadelphia mint, where the coins are proofed. And none are produced at the Denver or San Francisco Mints. Philadelphia is the only place.

The output, of course, is governed by the number of orders. And Uncle Sam does tack on a small charge for his pains. For example, the 50-cent proof coin costs 75 cents; the 25-cent coin, 50 cents; the 10-cent coin, 20 cents; the 5-cent coin, 20 cents, and the 1-cent coin, 16 cents. You pay the postage.

The actual orders have amounted to something like this: 1938, 19,881; 1937, 32,115; 1936, 21,857; 1915, 3,650, of which 300 were in gold coins, and 1916, 1,650.

The number fell in the current year to date, and it is thought that many of the collectors are waiting for the proof coins on the new Jefferson nickel, soon to be issued The proof coins won't be struck until the supply of regular coins is produced.

Uncle Sam began this favoring of collectors back in 1838, when silver dollars were proofed. In 1856, the Philadelphia Mint began striking proof coins from [illegible] designs, and in 1916, the year of the heaviest coinage in history, the proof coining came suddenly to a stop. It was revived again in 1936 on order of Director Nellie Tayloe Ross.

The final word that goes into the record is that no silver dollars have been produced in the period 1936 to 1938 because the supply is adequate to the demand. People still don't want to carry the heavy silver bulk around in their pockets. But always there is a demand for silver dollars at Christmas time. The practice of parents in giving these to children, for good behavior or one thing or another during the year, persists in America.

NOTES: Lee Shugar writes in, "In the GAO there are two talented young men by the name of Green. In speaking of one, the person you are speaking to invariably is thinking of the other. In order to lay that ghost once and for all, both Howard R. Green and Frank C. Green will participate in the floor show at the GAO Check Section dinner and dance to be held Friday evening at the Continental Hotel . . . The Agriculture Department is well represented at the fifty-fourth annual meeting, Association of Official Agricultural Chemists, now in session here; and one of the addresses there, "Wood Alcohol in Brandy," is baffling because it is popularly thought that such a condition passed out with prohibition . . . The Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for the job of substitute clerk-carrier in the Silver Springs, Md., postoffice. Certification will be made of local eligibles; and it is interesting to note that the Postoffice Department has the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles.

Wires to Be Silent For Mackay Rites

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—A one-minute silence on the communications system of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Co. will be observed at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow in tribute to Clarence H. Mackay, 64, who died Saturday night.

Mackay was chairman of the board of the Postal Telegraph Co. and president of the Mackay Radio Co.

Funeral services will be held in St. Patrick's Cathedral tomorrow.

Gallup Poll Is "Valuable Force" . . .

"Indispensable" . . "Accurate" Say Public Leaders

"The Gallup Poll once more forecast election results with uncanny accuracy. I am particularly impressed by the reliability of its predictions on the Congressional contests throughout the Nation and on the gubernatorial race in New York. Had Dr. Gallup taken a test vote on the race for Governor in Michigan I am sure he would have saved me many anxious hours. I had to wait for the votes to be counted before I could be sure of election."

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Governor Elect in Michigan.

"The Gallup Poll has again scored an astounding achievement in accuracy of prediction. I regard the opinion sampling method pioneered and perfected by Gallup as one of the important social inventions of our generation. From now on it becomes one of the indispensable tools of both the public enterprise of statesmanship and the private enterprise of business."

Glenn Frank

"During its short experience The Gallup Poll has made a fine showing for accuracy in its scientific sampling of public opinion. Its continued accurate measurement of public trends will make it an increasingly interesting and valuable force in politics and the formulation of Governmental policies."

Alf M. Landon

"The Gallup Poll has again demonstrated that it is a nonpartisan and accurate forecaster of American political opinion not only on the election of candidates, but also on the major political issues. Its disinterested analysis is of distinct value to candidates and the general public alike."

Alex Wiley
Senator Elect From Wisconsin.

"Doctor Gallup seems to have devised a system of forecasting election results that is uncanny in its accuracy."

Clyde M. Reed
Senator Elect From Kansas.

How Accurate Is The Gallup Poll?

The hairline accuracy of the Gallup Poll was never demonstrated more clearly than in the New York elections. The New York Daily News predicted that Dewey would win. The Crosley Poll also predicted that Dewey would win. The Gallup Poll predicted that Lehman would win—50.2%, and Lehman won—50.7%—within ½ of 1% of the Gallup Poll prediction.

Gallup Poll Predicted

Gov. Lehman With 50.2% Vote
Senator Wagner With 55% Vote
"$30-Every-Thursday" Pension Plan to Lose in California, 2 to 1

Republicans to gain at least 50 additional seats in the House of Representatives, with the likeliest gain 75 seats. Taking the most likely Republicans gain, the Gallup Poll estimated the new House would divide as follows:

Democrats	264
Republicans	165
Third Parties	6

Election Results Show

Lehman Re-elected—50.7% Vote
Wagner Re-elected—55.4% Vote
Plan Defeated, 3 to 2

Democrats	262
Republicans	170

CHAIRMAN
JOHN HAMILTON

Dear Mr. Meyer:

In view of the outcome of yesterday's elections, I cannot refrain from writing you a word of congratulation regarding the Gallup Poll.

Again Dr. George Gallup has demonstrated the soundness of the principles he follows in ascertaining the trend of public opinion. In forecasting this year's Congressional elections Dr. Gallup not only accurately reported the national trend made apparent to all by Tuesday's election but he came strikingly close to putting his finger exactly on the number of House seats which Republicans would capture. Most amazing, however, was the hair-line accuracy of his forecast on the New York governorship race. Dr. Gallup's fine record of achievement in this largely unexplored field merits the continued confidence of the country.. He and the Washington Post are to be congratulated on this latest evidence of accurate forecasting.

With sincere good wishes, I am

Yours very truly,

John Hamilton

YOUR WIRE FOR COMMENT ON THE GALLUP POLL RECEIVED THE DOCTOR GALLUP POLLS, PARTICULARLY DURING THE PAST YEAR, HAVE BEEN EXTREMELY ACCURATE WHICH IS EVIDENCE OF THE FACT THAT THEY ARE TAKEN WITH GREAT CARE AND THAT AN HONEST EFFORT HAS ALWAYS BEEN MADE TO GET THE FACTS WITHOUT ANY EFFORT TO FAVOR ANY CANDIDATE OR ANY PROPOSITION ON WHICH THEY WERE SEEKING PUBLIC INFORMATION. MY PERSONAL OPINION IS THAT IN VIEW OF THE RECORD THAT HAS BEEN MADE THE PUBLIC GENERALLY WHO FOLLOW POLLS HAS GREAT CONFIDENCE IN THE ACCURACY OF THE GALLUP POLL=

PRELIMINARY INDICATIONS ARE THAT GALLUP POLL HAS MAINTAINED ITS REMARKABLE REPUTATION AS A BAROMETER OF PUBLIC OPINION.

H A WALLACE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE

The great game of politics has become so complex that it's difficult to determine on which political issues a candidate wins—unless you follow the Gallup Poll. For instance: Sheridan Downey will be the new Senator from California. Did he win because he is a Democrat or because he favored the "$30-Every-Thursday" pension plan? The Gallup Polls have shown that Californians are 2 to 1 against "$30-Every-Thursday"—but favor the New Deal.

With its finger directly on the public pulse, the Gallup Poll has been able to foreshadow many coming events by revealing the direction of public thought. And today it becomes even more vital that every citizen know in which direction public opinion is running. For in a democracy, where public opinion is all important, the wishes of the people are reflected sooner or later in the acts of the lawmakers.

As Hitler announces that Germany wants its colonies back,—what do Americans think? From the Gallup Poll of October 14th, you know that Americans are 4 to 1 against Germany getting back the colonies she lost after the World War. And on October 28th the Gallup Poll shows that British voters say, 4 to 1, they would rather fight than hand back the colonies.

In Washington, you'll find the Gallup Poll only in

THE GALLUP POLL HAS BECOME AN AMERICAN INSTITUTION. IT SEEMS TO HAVE SUCCEEDED TO A GREATER DEGREE THAN ANY OTHER POLL IN GIVING DUE WEIGHT TO ALL FACTORS WHICH MAKE FOR RELIABLE RESULTS. I CAN PAY NO GREATER TRIBUTE TO ITS STANDING THAN TO SAY THAT IN OUR BRIEF IN THE CHILD LABOR CASES PENDING IN THE SUPREME COURT WE CITED THE WASHINGTON POST OF MAY 24 1936 AND OF FEBRUARY 24 1937 TO PROVE THE CONTINUED VITALITY OF THE CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT WHICH THE GALLUP POLLS OF THOSE DATES DEMONSTRATED.

ROBERT H JACKSON SOLICITOR GENERAL

"The Gallup Poll and its recording of public opinion in relation to the election in the State of New York was most interesting and unusually accurate."

Herbert H. Lehman.
Re-elected Gov. of N. Y.

"I believe Dr. Gallup has perfected an invaluable method of testing public sentiment which is of the greatest importance in shaping public opinion. He is to be congratulated on the strictly impartial character of his work and the scientific accuracy with which he has conducted it."

Thomas E. Dewey.

"Politicians constitutionally and habitually not guilty of much objective thinking. Best handy guide devised for them to date is embraced in Gallup Poll. Gallup record in Tuesday's elections is excellent example of clear, honest analysis of poll of political trends."

Emil Hurja.

"I think the Gallup Poll has proved its extraordinary usefulness in the predictions it has made from time to time concerning the impending elections. I felt apprehensive that its latest prediction would prove inaccurate. Particularly with respect to the result in New York, but I am amazed to find that it was nearer accurate than any poll made. It is in every sense an institute of public opinion."

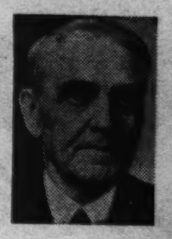
Senator Carter Glass.

"Remarkable closeness between Gallup Poll and final returns attests to soundness of sampling methods used."

Frank T. Hines.
Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

"The remarkable forecast of the Gallup Polls in connection with the elections shows that intelligent sampling can be used to obtain a dependable record of public opinion."

Lyman J. Briggs,
Director, National Bureau of Standards.



"I have been very much interested in the various Gallup Polls, and especially in the polls carried on during the recent campaign. I think the Gallup organization is to be congratulated upon its almost uncanny accuracy in recording public opinion as reflected in the results of the election."

Senator Arthur Capper.
